Rotary Club Helps Taxco With Water and Schoools

TAXCO. — Although the Taxco Rotary Club was only formed nine years ago, the 22 members are among the most civic-minded group you would find anywhere. In those nine years, they have obtained a proper water supply, a hospital, one school and are working on a second. Since Taxco is a town of 12,000, that is quite an undertaking.

* * * *

The water project was first on the Rotary list. From 1758 until seven years ago, Taxco used the water system begun by Jose de la Borda when the place had only between 1,200 and 1,500 people. Since the population has grown and more tourists have arrived with the new highway, the water supply was quite inadequate. So this became the first club activity.

* * * *

The club talked to the governor of the state and finally he told the Rotarians he was willing to make arrangements to improve the water and to increase the amount. But they would have to put up the money to start.

COLLECTED FUNDS

They asked the people for 150,000 pesos and the government was to put up an equal amount. For the remainder of the money, there was a tax mortgage. In 30 days, the club raised the 150,000 by voluntary contributions. Some businesses paid 500 pesos, others 5,000. They cleared the mortgage, too, before the end of the month. Then the government handed over their share and this assured that the amount of water was practically doubled.

* * * *

Then the Federal government stepped in. Though they now have the necessary amount of water, the distribution is poor. The Federal Department of Water has sent engineers to put in big mains. The work is slow because Taxco is built on solid rock and they can't blast because of the houses above. So it must be done by hand. However, it is expected that the mains will be completed by the end of this year. Then the next problem will be drainage.

* * * *

From the water, the Rotarians turned to a hospital and helped the town get one as told in a previous article. The same with the one school they have built and the second that was only one-third done when the funds ran out.

* * * *

SPLENDID SUPPORT

"The people of the town have given us splendid support," one Rotarian said. "The Americans and Canadians at the mines have been equally co-operative any time there is something good for Taxco. They always back us to the limit and it has meant much to the town."

* * * *

HEADQUARTERS FOR ARTISTS

This silver centre is a place where artists and writers like to make their headquarters. It is a quaint spot that offers much material and the slower pace of living gives people an opportunity to really enjoy life.

* * * *

One of the well-known artists who lives here is Hungarian-born Carl Pappe. A graduate of the Cleveland School of Arts and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Mr. Pappe has had several of his works purchased for permanent exhibition at the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.

* * * *

Now after painting and drawing for 27 years, this artist is returning to an earlier medium—sculpturing. He is at present working on a piece of St. Francis and a little Indian girl's head.

* * * *

BUILDING NEW HOME

At the same time he has designed and in engaged in building a new home with gallery and studios. He has been supervising all the work and it is going to be a beautiful spot. High on the mountainside, he has built the rooms on different levels so that the view is magnificent and different from each room. His printing shop will be at the very top.

* * * *

There are little terraces up past the rooms where he plans a garden and already the spinach beds are producing. Because his bedroom window faces a wall about two feet away, he plans to do a special painting with trees and animals and do it in such a way as to give depth and create the illusion of distance. The kitchen has a special Mexican section for his servants and there is a fine studio for his wife, too.

* * * *

This is not his first construction job. When he and his wife, Bernice Goodspeed, purchased their present home in the Calle del Arco beside the Santa Prisca Church, they restored the old building. The arch of the Santa Prisca Church was built later than the edifice to make a passageway to the Sacristy which was erected over the house below. This structure is said to have been built in the 18th century. After they moved to Taxco he and his wife restored it. The ceilings in their home and galleries are 22 feet high, only one of the problems which occurred.

A SMALL LAKE WILL BE FORMED soon north of Deloro and its waters will maintain a normal summer level along the Moira river as far south as Belleville. Recently a 15-foot concrete dam, the first project of the flood control committee of the Moira River Conservation Authority, was built near Deloro to control the river water. Workers cleared a 25-acre area (top) for the reservoir lake. In a week or so stop-logs will be lowered into the sluiceways to build up the summer reserve. At present spring waters (lower right) flow through uncontrolled. The flood control committee is headed by Reeve C. H. Buskard of Deloro (lower left).

Dam To Form Small Lake, Control Flow Of Moira River

Almost any day now there will be a new lake on the map. It will be located about five miles northeast of Deloro in Marmora township where 25 acres of brushland have been cleared and a 15-foot concrete dam has been built to control the flow of the Moira river. Retaining walls of earth have been erected along the sides to prevent any overflow. At present, a torrent of water is running through the dam but in a week or so, when the peak of the spring freshets has passed, wooden stop-logs will be lowered into the sluiceways to form a 15-foot barrier behind which an estimated 90 acre feet of water will pile up.

The lake will cover an area of 20 to 25 acres to an average depth of between three and four feet and maximum of 15 feet in the present channel of the river.

The dam, which was recently completed by a Toronto construction firm, was the first project undertaken by the flood control committee of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Reeve T. C. Graham of Tweed is chairman of the authority which comprises representatives of the 17 municipalities in Hastings and Lennox and Addington counties drained by the Moira River. He is also a member of the flood control committee chaired by Reeve C. H. Buskard of Deloro village, a former chairman of the MRCA. The first chairman of the authority, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater of Foxboro is secretary of the committee and the other member is Reeve Irwin McCoy of Marmora and Lake townships.

The authority was formed about four years ago and the Deloro dam project was conceived shortly afterwards. Construction was undertaken last October.

Of recent years the river has tended to drop to a mere trickle in the dry periods of summer. With the dam, it is hoped to maintain the normal level of the river as far down as Belleville throughout the year.

In the lower corner of the dam is an 18-inch by-pass containing a valve operated from the top of the dam by means of a handle to adjust the rate of flow from the artificial lake. By this means it is also hoped to maintain the level of Moira and Stoco lakes.

Another possible benefit of the dam is the maintenance of the water table in low-lying areas. This is no problem at Deloro where the water table is well above the level of the river.

Nevertheless, the village, which is paying 67½ per cent of the cost of the project, will be one of the chief beneficiaries. The Ontario Department of Planning and Development is paying the rest.

The Deloro Smelting and Refining Co. uses approximately 200,000 gallons of water a day—sufficient to supply a town of 5,000 people. A couple of times before the war the plant had to close down during the dry season when there was insufficient water for the chemical process by which it refines cobalt.

Workers at the plant who make up the bulk of the village's population needn't face lay-offs any more for lack of one of the cheapest and most plentiful commodities in existence—even in a dry season.

Must Give Work To Older Men Says T. J. Carley

Canadian standards of living must drop if industry and commerce continue to discard the older, experienced worker, T. J. Carley, QC, said last night.

"We've done a great deal for the youth of our country," he told the Peterborough Life Underwriters' annual ladies' night gathering at the Club Aragon, "but have done very little for our older citizens."

According to figures he quoted from National Employment Service statistics, 40 per cent of job applicants over 20 are also over 40. "Many more have been discouraged and don't even register," Mr. Carley claimed.

Several reasons are in the employer's mind when he refuses to hire a worker over 45. Old workers are not so adaptable, they produce less, and are more prone to absenteeism, while both pension plans and public opinion demand the more youthful employee.

SHOULDER TAXES

"The result of this situation is of great importance," the speaker said. "If younger workers have most of the jobs, then the burden of taxes falls on their shoulders, and if the situation persists, then the standard of living must drop!"

Mr. Carley pointed out other drawbacks in the present trend. When older workers are discarded they become great problems. They are economic burdens on their children and they cease to be happy.

Concluding, the speaker pleaded: "Surely we can adjust our economic forces so that those capable of working can do so."

The underwriters' dinner attracted more than 125 members and guests with their wives.

Toronto Curler Collapses At Rink

LINDSAY (ENS)—Wilfrid Hastings of Islington, superintendent for the Carrol Construction Co., Toronto, was rushed to the Ross Memorial Hospital Friday night, suffering from a heart seizure.

Mr. Hastings was curling at the Peel St. rink, when he collapsed. He was able to walk to the clubhouse but an emergency call was sent to the fire department for an inhalator. The resuscitator was used for an hour during which time he was rushed in the McArthur ambulance to the Ross Memorial Hospital.

Today a son of Mr. Hastings arrived from Toronto. The condition of the father is reported to be serious.

EGG PRICES HOLD STEADY

Despite the oncoming of spring the market was unusually active this morning. About this time of year the market's customers seem to dwindle off. Egg prices remained at the same level as last week. Grade A oversize eggs were selling for 65 cents, grade A large 60 cents, medium large 55 cents. There was a scarcity of spring chickens this morning but these that were offered were selling for 55 cents a pound.

City Banks Begin Five-Day Week

Peterborough banks will start the five-day week in April. The first Saturday closing will be April 25.

W. A. McEvoy chairman of the Peterborough Clearing House, an association of local chartered banks, made this announcement today.

"The local bank managers decided to adopt the five-day week to give their employees a work week comparable to that of the industries in the city," Mr. McEvoy said. "This is a five-day week town and we are following a general trend in the city as well as a nation-wide one."

Mr. McEvoy explained that the national trend towards a Saturday closing for banks started more than a year ago. It was first started in centres with more than 50,000 population and then was adopted by smaller centres. Now approximately 51 Canadian centres have adopted it.

As in other centres, the banks in Peterborough have arranged a compensation time for the public to make up for the two hours that will be lost on Saturday morning. This time will be on Friday afternoons.

LATE FRIDAYS

On Friday, April 24 and all Fridays following, the banks will open at the usual time of 10 a.m. and close at the usual 3 p.m., but will open again at 4:30 p.m. and remain open until 6 p.m.

The banks will open at the usual hours from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. the remaining four days of the week.

Mr. McEvoy also explained that the extra open time on Friday will fall in line with the city-wide industries' Friday pay-day. In addition it will give the banks more time to take care of commercial business which reaches its peak Fridays and Mondays.

Other centres in Ontario comparable to Peterborough in population which have adopted the five-day bank week are Oshawa, Kitchener-Waterloo, Brantford, Port Arthur, Fort William and St. Catharines.

Ice Still Covers Upper Lakes

Though winter ice moved out from Rice Lake on Wednesday night, and old-timers say it is one of the earliest breakups for many years, its still covers the lakes in the upper Kawarthas.

On Clear Lake the south end is open from the Young's Point entrance to Duffus' Point. The rest is still covered but rotted and there was a strong north wind blowing Friday which might clear the lake by this weekend.

Chemong Lake both north and south of the causeway for large areas was in open water. Narrow areas between Buckhorn and Pigeon Lakes and Buckhorn and Lovesick were also open for considerable distances.

Stony Lake is still ice-covered but people at Crowe's Landing report many open cracks and from the cleared section at Boschink Narrows at the west end, they do not expect the ice to remain many days longer. It could go out quite suddenly if a strong west wind were to spring up, they say.

Boy 5 Saves Friend's Life After Fall

Youngster Tumbled Into Excavation Filled With Water

A two-year-old Peterborough boy is alive today because of his five-year-old playmate's quick thinking and actions Friday.

Filled with water to a depth of five feet, a Bennett St. foundation excavation became a playground for the two lads, Lanford Stone, of 216 Wolsley St., and his older chum, Barry Farthing, of 234 Wolsley St.

GRABBED HIS HAIR

Playing there Friday morning, Lanford fell into the excavation. Barry, nearby, grabbed him by his hair and cap just in time to prevent him from drowning.

He then pulled the two-year-old to safety.

The boys are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis R. Stone and Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Farthing.

The excavation has been open since early winter and melting snows and heavy rainfalls have combined to make it extremely dangerous to children in the area.

Top Soccer Teams Fall, Charlton Only Winner

LONDON (Reuters)—Top British soccer teams fell like nine-pins today.

Of the top six teams in the First Division, Charlton Athletic was the only winner, edging into a three-way tie for first place with Preston North End and Wolverhampton Wanderers.

Charlton edged Liverpool, 2-1. West Bromwich Albion was the only other top team to gain a point, with a 2-2 draw with bottom-of-the-table Derby.

Preston lost 3-1 to Aston Villa; Wolves lost to Manchester City by an identical score; Burnley were blanked 1-0 by cup finalists Bolton; and Arsenal lost to Middlesborough 2-0.

The leaders all have 43 points, Burnley and W. B. A. 42 apiece. Then come Arsenal with 40 and Blackpool with 39.

Derby gained a single point from the draw but still look like relegation. Manchester City and Stoke still are battling for the other relegation slot.

Second Division leaders had little better luck, although Sheffield United gained a 4-4 tie with Southampton to stretch its league lead to five points.

Second-place Huddersfield lost out to Notts County, 1-0. Barnsley lost again, to make relegation virtually certain. Even with today's draw, Southampton also is in a bad position.

Bristol Rovers continued their winning streak with a 2-1 win over Bournemouth, to stretch their lead in Third Division South to seven points. Bristol City retained second place with a scoreless draw at Swindon, but Northampton crept to within a single point with a 4-2 victory at Shrewsbury.

Both Grimsby and Wrexham jumped into first-place ties with Oldham. Oldham lost 1-0 to Crew, while Wrexham blanked Carlisle 3-0 and Grimsby drew 0-0 with Gateshead. Port Vale lost second place with a 1-0 loss at Mansfield.

Scottish League leaders remained unchanged, with East Fife heading A Division by a point from Hibernian and Stirling a point ahead of Hamilton in B Division.

Car Demolished Driver Injured Fined In Court

LINDSAY (ENS)—A 23-year-old Fenelon Falls man, Donald Quibell, was convicted of careless driving and fined $15 and costs as the result of an accident last October 18 north of Lindsay in which his car was completely demolished and he received serious injuries from which he has only recently recovered.

Quibell was originally charged and tried for dangerous driving after the mishap, in which he swerved off Highway 35, just south of Fenelon Falls, to avoid striking a dog walking across the road, went into the ditch on the west side of the pavement, took a 12-inch tree out by the roots, and turned his car over.

He received a badly smashed knee, facial cuts and body bruises in the crash, and came to court on crutches, the result of his leg injuries.

He was defended by H. E. Richardson, of Lindsay, on the dangerous driving charge, and pleaded not guilty. He told the court that he had been checking his heat gauge since the car needed water, and had noted his speed at 50 miles per hour before the incident. When he looked up, the dog was on the road in front of him, and he had to pull sharply to the left to avoid it. After his wheels left the pavement, he lost control of the car, and rode into the ditch for some 150 feet before striking the tree.

SPEEDOMETER SHOWED 70

Corporal Ken Denniss, of the Lindsay OPP, and Constable John Williams, of the Fenelon Falls detachment, investigated the mishap. Constable George Mountsteven, of Lindsay OPP, stated that he had examined Quibell's car after the accident, and found the speedometer registered between 70-75 miles per hour, having been crushed by the steering column, which was forced upward by the impact.

Magistrate Gee did not agree with Crown Attorney Lorne Jordan that the speed and negligence shown constituted dangerous driving, and thought the loss of time, money and physical injuries to Quibell sufficient penalty for careless driving, in imposing the light fine.

Orono Whips Tamworth

BELLEVILLE (CP)—The Orono hockey team won an OHA intermediate B best-of-three playoff series in one game Friday night. Orono whipped Tamworth 13-1 in the series opener and the discouraged Tamworth club defaulted the rest. Orono now moves into a semi-final series against Bracebridge.

Seeks To Awaken Canadians To Menace Of Communism

TORONTO (CP) — J. Farley Faulkner says "it's time something is done about it." He's doing it.

"It" is communism's threat to the Canadian way of life. To combat it, Mr. Faulkner is setting out on a self-imposed crusade to awaken Canadians to what he considers a menace.

His slogan: "Vigilance for freedom."

"I'm not anti-Communist," says the 42-year-old business man who, almost reluctantly, is starting out to tell Canadians that they must be on guard against isms that threaten their freedom. "I'm just pro-Canadian."

Mr. Faulkner is the man who was hustled out of Toronto's Massey Hall some weeks ago when he interrupted a Canadian-Soviet friendship meeting addressed by Very Rev. Hewlett Johnson, dean of Canterbury. Derisively, he was told: "If you want to make a speech, go hire a hall."

He did. He hired Massey Hall. There last March 12 he got off his chest some of the things he wasn't allowed to say at the "Red Dean's" meeting. Some 2,800 persons listened.

He has turned the operation of his small dress shop over to a partner "for the duration." That will be as long as Canadians are willing to listen to his message—vigilance against Communist infiltration activity.

PLANS BIG MEETING

Tentatively, he plans to speak in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens, which holds some 13,000 persons, late in April. Meantime, he hopes to speak in key centres across Canada and to school children in Ontario under department of education auspices.

The day after Mr. Faulkner's telephone number was published in a newspaper's account of his ejection from Dr. Johnson's meeting, he was swamped with calls from men and women anxious to help his cause. On one day, he spoke for 10 hours to inquirers. His voice broke and for days he was hoarse, speaking with strain.

When Mr. Faulkner hired Massey Hall he didn't know how he was going to raise the $447 it cost But more than 2,800 tickets at 35 cents each and a collection that produced $511.42 solved that problem. His vigilance-for-freedom fund now totals $1,600, all of it donated. A volunteer chartered accountant is in charge of the fund.

Mr. Faulkner served overseas in the Canadian Army as a major during the Second World War. He did considerable lecturing to members of the forces for the army bureau of current affairs and also delivered morale lectures to reinforcement troops.

Starts Celebrating With News Of Sweep

MONTREAL (CP)—J. R. Auclair, who won $28,000 when his horse, Irish Lizard, finished third today in the Grand National steeplechase, 3,000 miles away, was already celebrating when interviewed a few minutes later.

Auclair, blond, blue-eyed former transport pilot with the RAF and now a telephone tester with the Bell Telephone Company, said: "Yes, sir, we started celebrating as soon as I heard on the radio that Irish Lizard was past that post".

Auclair, 33, was having a day off and listening with his wife in their small new apartment in Montreal.

"Now at last we will be able to buy a home of our own," he said. "We always wanted one and it seems incredible it happened just like that. I am so glad for my wife and 18-month-old son. I am going to give them a real holiday just as soon as I get a new car."

Marmora Revises Fair Prize List

MARMORA (ENS).—A meeting of Marmora Agricultural Society was held on Thursday evening at the home of the president, Carl Heath. Chief item of business was the completion of the revision of the prize list. Mrs. T. J. Bateman reported revision of part of the list regarding ladies' work and later with the ladies present, completed that section.

For the men's section, Charles Lajoie reported on dairy products and Louis Hulsmans on grains and seeds. The other sections will be finished shortly in time for an early publication of the classes and prize list.

The matter of an improved and permanent grandstand was considered and deemed a project for this early summer.

The April meeting will be held at the home of Reeve Irwin McCoy in Marmora township, when final particulars concerning the proposed calf club and field crop competition will be presented.

Refreshments were served by the ladies present.

Half-Day Closing Before Holiday Disrupts Stores

The Retail Section of the Chamber of Commerce has hit another stumbling block in its attempt to obtain all-out co-operation in agreed store closing periods.

The stumbling block this time is Wednesday afternoon.

At a meeting last fall city retailers accepted an agreement that stores in the city would remain closed 50 Wednesdays of the year —this included the Wednesday before Good Friday.

It was expected that stores would follow this agreement. But a monkey wrench was thrown into the situation today when a chain food store manager announced that his store would remain open on Wednesday afternoon.

The manager explains he is taking this action because the city store hours' bylaw, stating that stores will close every Wednesday except before a holiday, has never been changed.

CONTACT OTHERS

His action means that all retailers will have to be contacted to see if they are going to follow the agreement and stay closed Wednesday afternoon or remain open.

"This is very discouraging," James Fraser, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, said today. "It appears that these things can't be controlled by agreement and will have to be controlled by bylaw. It is also causing a lot of confusion for the public and the retailers themselves."

Mr. Fraser explained that after all retailers in the city had been contacted an announcement on the question will be made.

U.S. Senate Chaplain's Life Story Told

WARKWORTH (ENS). — The Codrington WA of the United Church met in the church basement.

A pot luck supper was held at the noon hour. In the afternoon the members quilted a quilt and a meeting was held.

Mrs. D. Woof presided over the devotional period which opened with the hymn "My Faith Looks Up To Thee," with Mrs. John Goodfellow pianist. Mrs. Harry Reddon read the scripture lesson.

The devotional conveners, Mrs. R. McCann and Mrs. C. Buchanan chose for their theme "Prayer."

Mrs. W. G. Fletcher read parts of the life story of the former U.S. Senate chaplain, Rev. Peter Marshall, with reference to his prayer life.

Mrs. R. McCann read "A Bicycle Ride to Prayer"; Mrs. C. Buchanan gave a reading entitled "Prayer," and Mrs. John Goodfellow sang the solo "Vespers" by A. A. Milne. A duet was given by Mrs. Buchanan and Mrs. Goodfellow, "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer."

The meeting closed with the hymn, "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," followed by the benediction.

Chill Reception Greets U.K. Industrial Code

LONDON (CP)—An industrial code prepared by Britain's Conservative government has had such a chill reception from organized labor that the government is having second thoughts about it.

The code, based largely on the party's "Workers' Charter" of 1947 and designed to develop harmonious relations in industry, was submitted to trade union members of the National Joint Advisory Council at a meeting Feb. 25.

The unions made clear that no exception could be taken to the code, but added it was unlikely to be effective. It went little beyond a statement of good human relations in industry as they xist today, they said.

The "Workers' Charter" set out three main aims: security of employment, job incentives and protection of the "status" of the individual, regardless how big or how mechanized the job.

The advisory council also considered a suggestion by Sir Walter Monckton, labor minister, that steps should be taken to extend double-shift working in industry. It agreed that this might be valuable in event of specially favorable circumstances—such as where a firm has expensive plant and equipment idle for the greater part of the 24 hours—but there was no suggestion of any immediate change to double-shift work.

WORK IS PROGRESSING rapidly as the old building at the corner of George and Charlotte Sts. is being torn down. Store operators moved out of the buildings late in January to allow wrecking operations to begin. Workmen have ripped out most of the west top of the building and are gradually tearing out the interior, leaving only the outer walls. As soon as these buildings are down, work on the new Woolworth building will be started.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

Deny Reversal Of Plan To Authorize Sponsored TV

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON

LONDON (CP)—Reports that the government was considering reversal of its decision to authorize sponsored television on an experimental basis have been officially stilled by David Gammans, assistant postmaster-general.

Replying to questions in the House of Commons, Gammans not only announced the government's adherence to its policy of competitive TV under certain safeguards, but also disclosed that 46 preliminary applications for licences to operate independent stations have already been received.

He declined, however, to reveal the names of the applicants or give any hint when sponsored programs will become a reality. Private interests have suggested it might take years because of special concessions already assured the state-owned BBC.

FAVOR COMMERCIAL TV

But later, Gammans said: "My own view is that the majority of people in this country who own television sets are looking forward to the prospect of commercial television . . . I hope that time will not be too far distant."

Decision to depart from the firmly-established tradition of state monopoly in the field of broadcasting was taken by the government last May.

An official White Paper specifically limits the experiment of sponsorship to television and extends the BBC's monopoly control of sound broadcasting for another 10 years.

It also conceded a priority claim to the BBC on labor and materials in carrying out its long-term plans to provide adequate national services in both radio and television.

Finally, the declaration of government policy made it clear Parliament would be called upon to decide the terms and conditions under which competitive television would operate.

ONLY RESTRICTION

The only restriction governing issuance of licences in the White Paper was that new stations will not be permitted to engage in political or religious broadcasting.

Primarily, the industry is awaiting information which will enable it to design and produce adapters for existing TV sets and new receivers capable of picking up either BBC programs or those on other frequencies.

Norman Collins, spokesman for the Associated Broadcasting Development Company, only independent concern to make publicly known its interest in commercial television, has announced that field tests will be undertaken immediately the question of frequencies has been decided.

Rural Teachers Should Get Aid

OTTAWA (CP)—Arthur Brown, chairman of the Toronto board of education, said Friday the Ontario government should subsidize rural teachers or accept inferior training of rural students.

Speaking at a service club luncheon meeting, Mr. Brown criticized a recent directive of the Ontario education department permitting a high school junior matriculation graduate to teach after a five-week summer course.

"We wouldn't take those teachers in Toronto and you wouldn't take them in Ottawa," he said. "But they'll be taken in smaller schools. . . . It simply means that city children will receive an education superior by far to that of students in rural communities."

Hear Applicants For Private TV Stations

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC board of governors Friday began hearing representations on eight applications for privately-owned television stations in Canada.

The 11-member board had on its agenda TV applications from Hamilton, London, Kitchener, Sudbury, Windsor, Quebec, Saint John and Sydney.

The first application called was for a TV station in Hamilton. Licence for the station was sought by Niagara Television Limited, a company composed of three firms now operating radio stations in Hamilton—Maple Leaf Broadcasting, operator of station CKOC, and the Hamilton Spectator, operator of station CJSH-FM.

St. Clair Balfour of station CJSH-FM and Ken Soble of station CHML appeared for the applicants.

Mr Soble said he will manage the new station if the licence is granted.

TAKE $1,000,000

He estimated it will "take $1,000,000 to see this thing into the black." Capital cost of the station he estimated at $721,000, including provision for small studios in Brantford and St. Catharines. Artists and program fees would cost $247,000 in the first year.

"We believe that in the second year the break-even point will begin to appear," said Mr. Soble.

Next application called was from the London Free Press Printing Company limited for a TV station in London.

Walter Blackburn said the company is prepared to invest $775,000 in the station. If anything more was needed the company could provide it.

Mr. Blackburn said it may be necessary to subsidize TV operations from profits of the Free Press and the radio station it operates—CFPL.

7,000 SETS

He said there now are 7,000 television receiving sets in the London area, all with antennae directed at United States stations. The London station would need a signal strong enough to attract the area viewers from U. S. stations.

The aim would be to have the station in operation by November.

Mr. Blackburn said the station would co-operate closely with the CBC.

Mr. Blackburn said that to support a TV station London would have to consider St. Thomas, Stratford and Woodstock in its grade A service area.

CBC To Bring Winnipeg Its First Chance To See TV

By ART BRYDON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP)—For the first time in its new television career the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will enter a virgin field when it opens its TV station here later this year. Winnipeg has not seen television from any other source, apart from occasional reception of distant U.S. stations.

Television viewers in Montreal and Toronto, where previous CBC TV stations started operation, had earlier been able to watch American television stations, particularly in the field supplied by the Toronto station. But the closest American TV station to Winnipeg is at Fargo, N.D., about 250 miles southwest of here.

Here the most optimistic group about television, naturally enough, are the dealers in television sets. Up to now however few sets have appeared in showrooms, except as a novelty interest. All dealers are predicting a boom in sales when the Winnipeg station goes on the air.

BIG EXPERIMENT

The CBC will face a stiff test here because there is no alternative channel of reception. Its programs will have to be popular enough to build up an audience of television set owners who know that for the time being, at least, they can watch only what the CBC offers

The population of Greater Winnipeg is pretty conservative and the only public notices concerning TV have been some newspaper statements by CBC officials.

J. E. Hayes, assistant to the CBC director-general of engineering, predicted recently in Winnipeg that 100,000 TV sets would be sold in this area, basing his estimate on the population figures of the Greater Winnipeg area.

Other observers are cautious about that figure. Some dealers said that once the station is operating, "everybody will want a television set." Others are a lot less optimistic. For one thing, the station will be on the air only a few hours each evening, for some time at least.

Stress on programs of particular western or Winnipeg interest is expected to put a new fillip into the demand for television here.

Perhaps typical was the comment of one man who said: "All I want to see is the Blue Bombers."

Just how large an audience the station can build up promises to be an experiment of wide interest.

Lotions Needed To Combat Skin Dryness

All-over body smoothness is sometimes difficult to maintain what with winter's drying-out processes. After a general let-down of good health which may have been impaired by a series of colds or even more serious illness, your skin thirsts for lubrication. Artificial heat threw in its monkey wrench, too!

All-over care of legs, arms and shoulders is not only being talked about but it is being practiced and with good results as many of you have experienced.

Best time to use your lanolin-enriched lotions is right after a bath. This will help promote softness as it lubricates and moistens the skin. Smooth on with light strokes until it dries with a soft finish. You'll be treating your hands to their share of lotion at the same time!

You derive practical benefits, too, from hands and legs kept soft and clear of rough surface skin. Sheer hosiery will last longer because the hazard of snags has been removed. The money you save on stockings will more than pay for the added luxury of a good body lotion.

Pamper yourself when you bathe by having all the little extras you enjoy. Continue the velvet-glove treatment after as well. These little details have enormous value in relaxation and easing tense nerves.

Begin now if you haven't started to get your skin into a smooth as alabaster condition so that you can slip into all your spring finery with the ease of a queen.

Drink plenty of water if your skin shows signs of extreme dryness.

RCAF Auxiliary Meets At YWCA

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association met in the new club room of the YWCA Thursday.

The meeting was opened with the singing of the National Anthem followed by one minute of silence in memory of the late Queen Mary.

It was voted to send a donation to the Flood Relief Fund, and it was also decided to hold a Bake Sale in the Indoor Market Hall on Saturday, 18th April, in the morning, as the fund raising project for April.

Mrs. Vi. Harrison very kindly donated an oil painting, which she herself has painted, for a raffle. The draw for this will take place at the R.C.A.F.Association Wing Dance May 1st in the Empress Hotel.

After the monthly businesss had been attended to Mrs. Margaret Dougherty introduced the speaker, Mrs. Victor Northcott, Supervisor of the South End Nursery School.

Mrs. Northcott gave a very informative talk on what we should expect of our youngsters in the age group 3-6 years. The speaker was thanked by Mrs. Vivian Harvie.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. at the RCAF Association Wing Mrs. Victor Northcott, supervisor held at the YWCA April 23.

Lighter Fabrics For Spring

Because of the short spring season and longer summer in many places, there has been a shift in fabric weights. This means lighter woollens, more silks, and more costumes that alter easily as the temperature.

But this alone cannot wholly account for the colorful parade of new fabrics at these showings. There are no less than 36 different weaves, weights and textures in pure silk fabrics alone. Silk has precedence over wool in many collections.

Silk textures now resemble familiar wool and linen weaves such as tweed, serge, twill or linen. A completely new texture is silk boucle, loop-woven and downy. While slubbed silks figure most prominently in the 1953 fashion picture, there are also silk sheers like organdy, organza, opalescent double organza, sari gauze floating silk chiffons and gossamer silk laces.

VISCOSE FLANNEL is tailored into a raincoat of stunning simplicity by Canadian designer Lou Ritchie. Large pockets set on angles are posed below the self-belt and the reveres are held high with a button tab.

Bride Should Consider The Future In Trousseau

Spring trousseaus don't have to be elaborate to be adequate and practical. The trick is to choose wisely and pick ensembles that won't date too quickly.

A good suit is one thing a bride can't afford to go without. She should manage that, no matter what else, say advisers. Whether she buys it ready made or has it tailored, it should fit her perfectly. And she will need spandy new gloves, shoes, bag and hat to go with it.

Very often, and especially if she is a spring bride, the suit serves as a going away costume. In that case she may prefer a soft dress-maker style in a muted pastel shade—blue, mauve or pink—or in one of the warm range of wheat shades. This spring there are many lovely feminine suits of this sort in the stores. Often they are dressed up by a little bead trimming on the pocket or collar.

For more practical reasons, she may prefer the tailored simplicity of grey flannel or worsted, navy blue wool or tweed. If she is having it made she will want to increase its usefulness and chic by a blouse of the same material which combines with the skirt like a dress. These are very new, very fashionable. To dress up the suit, perhaps a gay silk print blouse or a jewel-toned shantung. (A girl may have to resort to a dressmaker or her own skill to get what she wants in these.)

Hats to wear with suits are for the most part small, often designed to match, especially if the suit is being tailor-made. Also very pretty are the straws and crocheted straws in natural and pastel shades.

Almost a must in any trousseau is the basic dress in black, navy or grey, which can be dressed up or down as the occasion demands. One of the smartest seen to date was a plain little navy crepe with a matching stole that can be worn half a dozen ways. Add a pretty brooch to dress it up—take off the stole and add pink pique collars and cuffs for town, plain pearls for afternoon tea at home.

Important to remember is to plan for the whole year. The June bride who spends her entire budget on a dozen super-glamorous summer dresses is going to be out of luck when autumn rolls round and she has nothing now. And chances are her husband, still adjusting to the financial responsibilities of wedded bliss, will not be too happy about buying a lot of new clothes for his almost-new wife.

A girl doesn't need a great many summer things, providing she buys cottons that can be laundered and come up looking fresh and trim. She might better concentrate on her wardrobe for the longer winter season. Especially pertinent here is the soft tie silk which looks equally well in July heat and under a fur coat in January. Such a one is of white print on honey beige, simply fashioned with a pleated skirt and soft bow to tie at the neckline. For the wedding trip it has the added advantage of packing well, an important consideration.

Especially good this year are polished cottons which could usually pass for silk. Very chic in these for Bermuda or a summer honeymoon is a beige, black and white print trimmed with white pique braid in redingote effect, fanning out in knife pleats at the front of the skirt.

The dress and jacket combination, popular for the past several years and presumably destined to continue so, is invaluable for a bride. Also in the ensemble line, and prettiest of going-away costumes, is the matching dress and coat, which received a tremendous play in New York designers' showings this season. Very often it consisted of a silk print dress and princess-line wool coat lined with the same silk print. But there are many variations on the theme, and the bride with a good dressmaker or tailor could give her imagination wide scope with the idea. Unfortunately there are not many of these costumes available in Canadian stores.

A trousseau should always include dresses for dancing or parties—that is unless the honeymoon couple are going to take to the woods. And even if they are, the bride will need them when she returns to civilization. Most popular and practical length is to the angle or shorter. Very very pretty and packable for both spring and summer is a completely stitched sheath in pale ice-cream pink crepe, worn with a matching bolero. Stunning too is white silk shantung with matching stole trimmed with a black ball fringe.

One of the nicest things about picking a trousseau is the lingerie. Choice in this case depends upon personal taste, whether the girl likes fluffy or plain, satin or nylon. With regard to the latter decision comes a word of advice from an old married woman of a year and a half. She claims that her nylon slips and nighties are still as good as new, but the others, despite far greater care, are just about ready for the duster-bag.

However there is a great deal to be said for the richness of satin and crepe, even if they are more perishable than their synthetic sisters. Most brides will want some of both. Fortunate the girl who can have her lingerie made, hand-embroidered or monogrammed, but for those who can't there are lovely things to buy. For summer cotton is dainty, cool, and very inexpensive.

What is she going to pack her brand new wardrobe in? Luggage is an important item too and most brides like to start off with a new set, especially if they have been carrying the family's cast-offs heretofore. There is a wide choice and an equally wide price range in luggage and consideration for this must include pocket book and means of travel. Lightest possible is essential for a plane trip. Important is to have a large case with hangers which will take dresses and evening dresses without too much crushing.

THE WAY your little girl will look on Easter Sunday will be largely determined by the planning you do now. What you buy for her to wear in the Easter parade should be determined both by her wardrobe needs and her need to look and feel pretty on this very special, shining day. [illegible] fashions that would make any girl feel pretty. The navy-and-white wool coat (left) can be worn over anything at any time. It has a modified fullness and is easy to slip on over a suit if the day is chilly. Velvet streamers at the neck are cued to the "choir boy" look of matching check-and-straw hat. Topper (right) in navy-and-white check has slim look with some width at top. Collar and cuffs are in solid blue. This is a coat that a little girl can wear all spring long.

Odd U.K. Dishes Offered At Coronation

LONDON (CP)—Canadians in Britain for the Coronation will be able to order these Elizabethan dishes:

Boar's head brawn; neat's tongue; suckling pig in coffin (baked in a pasty case); Elizabethan cucumbers; tansy pudding; green goose; cold peacock with tail erect; Solomon Grundy (Sometimes served as salama grundy); royal herring pie, as sent to the sovereign from Great Yarmouth in olden times; and vegetables and herbs such as sorrel, fennel and Good King Henry, the name applied to a form of green vegetable often eaten by the first Elizabeth at breakfast.

Guests will be seated at long Tudor tables, watch acrobats, tumblers and musicians and eat from wooden platters with "bifurcated daggers," two-pronged forks imported from Persia, now Iran, in the days of Elizabeth I.

There will be "serving wenches" in costume and customers may also be dressed in period style.

The accent on the older Elizabethan era will be found at a Kensington hotel (Gore) at prices ranging from $1.80 to $14 a head.

The hotel floor will be strewn with rushes, but the management says that one characteristic Tudor feature, rats, will not be available.

DOROTHY DIX:

Lad, Eager To Keep Diary, Discouraged By His Father

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 15 and write a diary. Dad says a boy my age shouldn't have a diary, but I'd like to record things I do each day. Do you think he is right, or do you think I should be allowed to continue writing it?

R. E.

DIARIES HAVE VALUE

ANSWER: There are many advantages to keeping a daily record of your activities, and I think you should be encouraged. For practical purposes, a diary is excellent as reference material. It does away with date-groping, and permits comparison of activities year by year. It also serves to develop your writing ability, your powers of observation, and strengthens your memory. Does your father realize that diaries of famous people have been one of the chief sources of history?

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 15 and like a boy three years older. He drives me home from dances and kisses me goodnight. He tells me he likes me, but he seems to like lots of other girls, too. I know he goes out with them, and I don't mind that, but he lies to me about it.

P. S. No matter what you advise, I will not give him up.

POPPY L.

ANSWER: In the face of your desperate postcript, there is no advice I can give you. A boy who lies is certainly a poor friend, and this one is especially silly about it since you know he goes with other girls, and you have no objection. I'm afraid you're just a passing fancy and that you'll be the one to be given up.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am so hungry for love. My husband is a good provider, and faithful, but he never shows that he loves me. He says I'm silly when I fuss over him. We are both getting on in years, and I think we should be more loving toward each other.

L. C.

ANSWER: I really do think you are needlessly dissatisfied with your lot. A generous, faithful husband who is content to be at home whenever he's not working, who doesn't drink or gamble, is a matrimonial prize in young or advanced years.

Older men are apt to lose the touch for demonstrative affection, and resent being fussed over. Why not learn to be thankful for the many blessings you have; stop yearning for the unattainable! You know your husband loves you; he shows it in the things he gives you, the care he takes of you, and the fact that he prefers his home above other places. Surely this is proof enough of his devotion. Don't nag for more!

DEAR MISS DIX: I have written you before but never saw my letter in print. My mother lets me go out with boys if she knows them; but my only trouble is that she won't let me use lipstick. I have tried discussing it with her, but it doesn't work. I'm 14.

MARY T.

ANSWER: I'm sorry your previous letter was not published, but perhaps it dealt with a problem I had recently discussed. The lipstick question, for instance, is one that appears in so many letters I can't possibly use them all. The matter is entirely up to your mother's discretion, and until she gives the "go-ahead" signal, you must be content with unadorned lips. There's no reason why you should feel self-conscious about them, either. Lots of other girls live under the same restriction, with no ill effects. I'm sure you imagine that you are stared at because your lips are unpainted; perhaps the staring is in admiration for your fresh, clean, teen-age glow.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am very much in love with a man of 25 who is in the Marines. I am 21. I don't date anyone else, but he doesn't want to get married until he comes out of service, a year from now. I know his family, and though I see them frequently, they never say anything about their son's intentions. Am I doing wrong in waiting for him?

GLORIA

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Since you love the young man, you wouldn't be happy dating anyone else right now, and the thing to do is wait for him. He is showing a practical, sensible nature in wanting to postpone matrimony until his service is up. Your marriage will have a much sounder foundation than if you married while he's in service.

Honor Pair On Wedding Anniversary

COLDSPRINGS (ENS) — Mr. and Mrs. Percy E. Grieve were guests of honor Thursday night in the Coldsprings hall when approximately 135 friends, neighbors and relatives gathered on the occasion of their 35th wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Grieve were married March 26, 1918, at the bride's home, one mile south-east of Coldsprings, by the Rev. J. T. Daley, pastor of the Congregational Church.

Mrs. Grieve, the former Sadie May, was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John May and Mr. Grieve was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Grieve, Coldsprings.

After marriage they took up residence on a farm at Coldsprings and have continued to live on the same homestead where they are highly respected by a host of friends. They have one son Fred, at home. They are members of St. Paul's United Church.

The first part of the evening was spent in playing progressive euchre. High score prize winners were Mrs. Kenneth Grieve and Newton McIntosh. Second high prizes went to Mrs. Melville Dines and Milton McIntosh. Mrs. Marvin Minifie won the most lone hands prize.

Mr Wilbert Davey made an impromptu speech of congratulations and good wishes. On behalf of the gathering, Allan Jibb presented the celebrating couple with a tri-light floor lamp. Mr. and Mrs. Grieve replied fittingly.

Refreshments were served from a table centred by the wedding cake. The remainder of the evening was spent dancing to music supplied by Mr. and Mrs. Percy Elder and son Lloyd.

Guests were present from Oshawa, Cobourg, Baltimore, Hull's Corners, Plainville, Fenella, Precious Corners, Camborne and the surrounding district.

Of Interest to Women

WHEN THE WELL-DRESSED MAN steps out this spring and summer season, focus will be on his shoes which will add the finishing touches to his appearance. With the masculine attention swinging towards the right clothes for the right time, shoe manufacturers are producing the right shoes for the right time to complete the picture. This year nylon mesh combined with calf or brushed leather is the forerunner in the men's shoe picture. Close runners-up are navy blue leather with reptile trim, and brushed leather in soft browns and grey tones. In styling the gore or laceless Oxford is making a bid for popularity. Brogues, mocassin styles and woven shoes are still in heavy demand. Top left, a casual moccasin type slip-on in brown calf, with double sole and novel but conservative trim on side of vamp. At right, a gore pattern shoe in brown oak calf with distinctive styling over vamp. Lower left, a warm leather brogue in wingtip pattern with natural colored nylon mesh vamp and quarter—a shoe for wearing from dawn to dusk.

Readers' Saturday Column by Mary Moore

Note to Grace K.: I can't locate the Brazilian or Mexican milk dish you asked for. The closest recipe to it that I can find is called Zurillo and calls for 2 cups of sour milk, ½ cup brown sugar. These are heated together in double boiler until thick, then chilled. Sounds as if it has possibilities, doesn't it?

Question: Have you a cookie recipe that could be used with fig filling to make fig newtons or fig bars? I haven't been successful in making dough that turns out tender but not rich or sweet .... someone asked for method of cooking potatoes and carrots with the roast. You may be interested to hear that I've found it satisfactory to do this by placing the vegetables as close to the meat as possible, then covering them tightly with aluminum foil. Do not push the foil between vegetables and meat; but tuck it in on other sides. Ernestive L.

Answer: As you doubtless know it is impossible to reproduce the doughs that commercial cookie manufacturers make for they employ extruding machines to handle the dough, and constantly rotating racks in the ovens to bake them to perfection. The nearest I can come to fig newtons is

FIG FILLED COOKIES

One-half cup shortening (preferably butter), 1 cup white sugar, 2 eggs, 3½ cups sifted cake flour, 1 teaspoon each soda and vanilla, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup sour milk. Cream together the shortening and sugar until light. Add vanilla and beat in eggs. Measure the sifted flour and sift it with the salt and soda. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the sour milk, beating until dough is smooth. Roll out on floured board to ⅛ inch thickness and cut out with small round cookie cutter. On half of the rounds put a filling of figs made this way: Mix together ½ cup sugar and 2 tablespoons flour, and add 1½ cups chopped or ground figs, ½ cup chopped nuts (optional), stir then add 1 cup water. Cook, stirring, until thickened. Cover with remaining rounds and seal edges well. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. until delicately browned.

Thank you for your vegetable roasting ideas.

Question: I missed the recipe for cocoanut dreams and clover leaf buns. I would like to make a small amount of white or brown bread. Is the secret in the hot kitchen or kneading? I never have any luck. In your white fruit cake recipe should I use all-purpose or cake flour? For the sugar content should I allow 2 cups for the pound or 2½ cups? Edith A.

Answer: For 1 lb. sugar allow 2 cups plus 2 tablespoons. Cake flour is best in the white fruit cake, but all-purpose flour will do nicely. I have mailed you the recipe for whole wheat bread described in detail—also recipe for Cocoanut Dreams.

To make clover leaf rolls from some of the whole wheat dough in the recipe I am sending you you could follow directions for shaping described in recipe below.

CLOVER LEAF ROLLS
(2 Dozen)

Mix together 1 cup lukewarm milk, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt. Soak 1 package dry granular yearst in ¼ cup lukewarm water for 5 minutes without stirring. Then stir well then stir it into the first mixture until mixture is smooth. Stir in 1 egg and ¼ cup very soft shortening (shortening may be reduced to 2 tablespoons if desired). Sift flour and measure 3½ cups and stir in half of it with a spoon until smooth, then add remainder and mix it in with the hands. The dough should be soft and sticky. It is advisable to use bread flour if you can buy it in your community. Turn the dough out on lightly floured board and knead it until dough is smooth and elastic and squeaky. Put dough back into greased bowl and allow to rise, covered and in warm place, until doubled. Punch down dough with fist in bowl, pull edges to centre and turn completely over in bowl. Let rise again until almost double—about 35 minutes in warm kitchen. Now form bits of dough into balls by rolling between palms, about 1 inch in diameter. Place 3 balls in each greased muffin tin. Brush with melted butter. Let rise until quite light to touch—about 30 minutes in warm place. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 12 to 15 minutes.

DOBBIN—In loving memory of a dear father, R. A. Dobbin, who fell asleep so suddenly three years ago today, March 29, 1950.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear,
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.
—Sadly missed by his four daughters and grandchildren.

MANLEY—In loving memory of our dear parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Manley. Mother passed away March 29, 1952, father May 17, 1946.
Loving and kind in all their ways,
Upright and just to the end of their days,
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
—Sadly missed by their sons and daughters and their families.

MORROW—In loving memory of our son and brother, Pilot Officer Harold E. Morrow, who lost his life March 29, 1944 over Anzio beachhead.
Nothing but memories as we journey on,
Longing for a smile from a loved one gone,
None knows the depth of our deep regret,
But we remember when others forget.
—Ever remembered by his mother, dad, sisters and brothers.

OXLEY—In loving memory of my dear wife, Mrs. Fred Oxley, who passed away March 29, 1949.
Oh, what would I give to clasp your hand;
Your dear kind face to see,
Your loving smile, your welcome voice;
That meant so much to me.
No one knows the silent heartache,
Only those who have such can tell
Of the grief that is borne in silence
For the one I loved so well.
—Ever remembered by husband Fred and family.

Frank C. Bonnycastle

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS)—The Masonic lodge was in charge of funeral services today for Frank Cassan Bonnycastle from Bennett's funeral parlors.

Honorary pallbearers were W. J. Hall, Wilbur Wood, George Atwell, James Archer, Anson Connor and A. J. Meyers. Active pallbearers were Hilton Beatty, George Free, Frank Long, L. B. Glover, N. A. McColl and James McMullen. Interment was in Christ Church cemetery.

A lifelong resident of this district, Mr. Bonnycastle died suddenly at his home on Second St. Thursday evening in his 74th year. He had been in poor health for some time.

He was born about three miles south of Campbellford, son of Richard Henry Bonnycastle and Charlotte Cassan, who predeceased him many years ago. His wife, the former Mary Florence Martin, died seven years ago. One daughter, Evelyn Frances Luttrell of Belleville survives.

Mr. Bonnycastle was well known in this town having been a photographer for some time and more recently an insurance agent. Fishing and hunting were his favorite sports and he spent much of his leisure time at them.

He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church and held the office of warden some yeans back. He was very active in the Masonic Lodge and was a District Deputy Grand Master for some time.

Star Hurt In Blast

CUAUTLA, Mexico (AP)—Oscar winner Gary Cooper was injured Friday in a too-realistic bandit scene. His condition was reported not serious. Cooper, who last week won the motion picture academy award for best actor of the year, was struck in the right shoulder by fragments of a dynamited bridge. The 51-year-old actor suffered contusions and severe bruises.

Thorez To Return

MOSCOW (AP) — French Communist leader Maurice Thorez is planning to return to France soon, an authoritative source said today. The informant said Thorez, undergoing medical treatment in the Soviet Union since November, 1950, has asked French ambassador Louis Joxe to arrange permission for a special plane to fly him over Western Germany.

British Conduct Survey To Plan A-Bomb Shelters

LONDON (CP)—A survey of the more vulnerable areas of Britain is being undertaken by the home office to determine shelter requirements against a possible atom bomb attack in event of another war.

In a pamphlet entitled, "Civil Defence and the Atom Bomb," it is disclosed that the general progress of shelter planning already is well advanced. To ensure that the best use is made of available resources local authorities in likely target zones have been asked to formulate proposals on regional shelter needs and suggest how they can be provided.

The leaflet primarily seeks to arouse keener interest in the country's civil defence organization and underscores previous assurances that there is a defence against atom bombs.

EFFECT LIMITED

"Anyone who thinks there is no defence against an atom bomb is wrong," the pamphlet says. "The destructive power is obviously enormous but even so its effect is limited. Outside the hardest hit area there will still be tens of thousands of lives which can be saved by shelter and strong civil defence services."

The general tendency, it continues, is to judge the effects of an atom bomb by the damage caused by the two dropped during the war against Japan on an entirely unprepared population at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Home office experts say it now is generally known, however, that in the city of Hiroshima more than half the people who were within a mile of the atomic blast are still alive. At Nagasaki nearly seven out of 10 persons within a mile of the explosion there lived to relate their experiences.

"It was found at Nagasaki," says the pamphlet, "that a number of small shelters, well covered with solid earth, survived within 300 yards of the centre of damage."

Swerved To Miss Hole Charge Dismissed

LINDSAY (ENS)—A Bobcaygeon resort owner, Watson Vaughan, of Oshawa, had a charge of careless driving against him dismissed Friday. He pleaded that a hole in the village's main street had thrown his car out of control causing a $250 accident, in which he left the pavement, travelled for almost 200 feet striking a telephone pole and landing against a tree in the ditch.

Vaughan told the court that he had driven through the village twice over the same road during the weekend of March 14, when he drove to his property to inspect it before readying it for the tourist season. During the winter months, he said, he allows the people of the village to use his dance hall free of charge.

Chief Wood of Bobcaygeon who laid the charge, said that the hole in the road which Vaughan tried to avoid was nothing more than a low spot. Vaughan said he had hit the hole before during the same weekend and had tried to miss it on the last trip swerving to another side on the road and striking loose gravel which threw him off the pavement.

H. E. Richardson defended Vaughan in the case.

Cars Collide At Corner Little Damage Done

About $60 damage was caused Friday in an accident involving James Runnett of 49 Edgewater Blvd. and Wilhelms Seiberts of 275 Westcott St. at the corner of Dalhousie and Reid Sts.

Runnett was driving west on Dalhousie and, after stopping for the stop sign, started out across the intersection, he told police. Half way across, his car was in collision with Seiberts' vehicle.

Damage was estimated at $20 to Runnett's car and $40 to Seiberts'. PC Harold Andrew investigated.

The skies were cloudy and it was raining at the time of the accident.

SHARING is something children learn very gradually and the automobile is one toy where the rule "Turn about is fair play" has to be enforced.

FOR PARENTS ONLY:

Teaching Children To Share

By NANCY CLEAVER

Tommy and John are playing with John's small blue car. The noon whistle blows and Tommy's mother calls from the back door in the next house, "Come to dinner, Tommy!" Tommy clutches the steering wheel of the car tightly in his chubby hands and starts homeward, John suddenly looks up, catches sight of the red car, and with a yell of anger, cries: "My car! That's mine!" He persues his friend and attempts to re-capture his plaything. Tommy makes for home but doesn't abandon his chum's car.

PART OF MAN'S NATURE

"The instinct of ownership is fundamental in man's nature," William James declared. A youngster is keen on what he owns himself, but he is not so interested in the possessions of others. Parents are often puzzled about training a child to respect another person's property. A baby is certainly not born with any regard for what belongs to others! Little tots around two years old enjoy playing alongside each other. Their acquisitive instinct is strong, but they are indifferent to the claims of others.

Sharing is something children learn very gradually when they are a bit older. It usually accompanies enjoyment in playing together, in the later pre-school period. But an adult is needed to sort out playthings to their respective owners after a playtime when toys have been pooled.

In a home each small child should have his own playthings and his own corner where he keeps his possessions. Orange crates painted in bright colors make inexpensive, attractive low shelves for toys or books. Mother must often help junior pick up his toys and assist him in putting them away. It is much better to work along with him to get him started or to finish off his task than to nag at him about the importance of tidiness!

"A place for everything and everything in its place" often sounds like much too idealistic a slogan for a home where there are children—but it is a target to aim at! Boys and girls must have their own special hooks for clothes, and spot for rubbers and overshoes. When they come in from school there should be a definite place for their school books. There should also be a clear understanding that certain articles are kept in their own rooms.

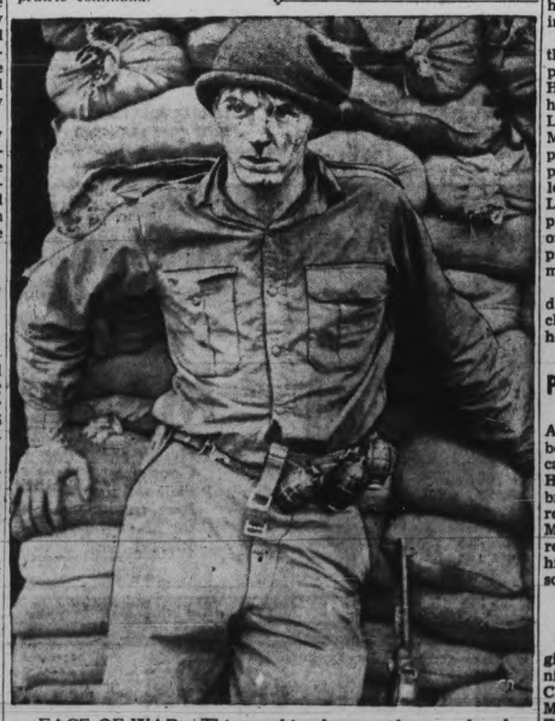
LET HIM FIND LOST TOYS

The logical consequence of not putting play material or personal belongings in their right place comes home to the child who must waste time and energy searching for lost articles. If mother always rushes around to discover the location of the missing object, this result of not looking after their belongings is not so apparent.

At camp, lost articles are put into a large box and cannot be claimed until a fine is paid. Some homes put this "lost box" and payment of a penalty into effect to encourage children to put their things away where they belong.

Who ever heard of a family where there was no quarreling over borrowing without the owner's permission, or carelessness in looking after a borrowed article or tardiness in its return? The family council is a good place to make rules which discourage borrowing, except under special circumstances. The unhappiness which comes from worry over money debts can be learned from painful experience, but this is another topic which well might be discussed by a family too.

In many homes with several youngsters it is necessary to have a hand-me-down system in operation about clothes. No child should be ashamed of this. But each youngster does need to receive a brand new article of his very own from time to time.



Sometimes juvenile delinquency springs in part from the lack of personal possessions. This is clearly shown in "Spoonhandle," the story of an orphan boy, Donny Mitchell, who is picked up by the police for stealing from stores. The author, Ruth Moore, wrote that the trouble with Donny was that he had never really owned anything in his short life. He never could declare with pride in his voice, "This is mine!"

Air-Borne Messages

BERLIN (Reuters)—About 80,000 letters to East German youths were sent into East Germany by air Friday night—hanging on balloons. The letters bore messages of friendship and goodwill. The balloons were released by a West German Socialist youth organization at the opening of its annual meeting here.

FACE OF WAR—This graphic photograph was taken by Sgt. Paul J. Tomelin, of Calgary and Edmonton, who has been awarded the British Empire Medal for distinguished service in Korea. Depicted is an infantryman (Pte. Heath Matthews, 19, of Montreal), in a state of shock following a night-long fighting action.

Leave Licensing Of Tourist Camps To Townships

County Council have endorsed a resolution from the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham recommending that teh Department of Trabel and Publicity leave the licensing of tourist camps to the townships.

The department have appointed district inspectors to do the licensing and inspection previously done by the municipalities. And they raised the licence fee from $2.50 a year to $5.00.

Reeves Roland Tedford of Douro and William Griffith moved the endorsation.

Another recommendation from the United Counties was that the Revised tSatutes of Ontario be amended so the Warden of a county can be elected by secret ballot rathed than by the show of hands in an open vote. No action was taken and only one member of council, Reeve Dick Stewart of Otonabee Township, spoke in favor of the proposed amendment.

Council also endorsed a resolutiontion from Kent County requesting the Hon. Dr. McKinnon Phillips, Provincial Minister of Health, to rescind regulations made in 1952 on plumbing regulations. The new regulations are described as "a further move on the part of the plumbing trade to prevent private individuals from installing their own systems." Motion by Deputy-Reeve Dave McIntyre of Otonabee and Reeve Stewart Clysdale of Dummer.

TELEPHONE LEVY

The action was taken by council on a communication from the Provisional County of Haliburton that there be an amendment to the Telephone Act that would permit a municipality to levy a mill on the rateable property for the maintenance of the municipal telephone system. At present the levy is only against subscribers or renters of the service.

A Halton County resolution was filed. It was to petition the Department of Highways to have all sandpiles located outside villages or towns so the inconvenience caused by noise would be at a minimum.

On educational matters the county council concurred on two resolutions from other counties: One, there should be a more equitable distribution of the cost of education between farm lands and urban properties; two, the High Schools Act should be amended so high school trustees would be elected by the ratepayers rather than appointed by municipal councils and school boards.

Two resolutions—one from Ontario County and the other from Grey County — were endorsed. Both requested the Ontario Government to prohibit the manufacture and sale of edible oil products in Ontario.

Council also endorsed a Grey County resolution that would request the Ontario Government to permit municipalities to bring in a compulsory Bang's disease program for vaccination of calves. It woud be similar to the Warble Fly Act that permits each municipality to decide whether the program should be enforced.

Gold Index Down Seven Points On Toronto Mart

By HARRY KINGDON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The phrase "it's a gold mine" has lost some of its pleasant ring on the Toronto stock exchange.

Since the first of the month, golds have dropped more than seven points on the exchange index.

This week, the golds lost slightly more than two index points, and broke the record low for 1952-53. The two-point loss—shared with golds by industrials and base metals—could be blamed partly on the forthcoming audit of the books of stock exchange members.

Observers say that audit-time is usually time for a weaker market as investors sell some of their holdings to get their accounts into shape.

FAVORITE TYPE

Golds are considered a favorite type of stock to sell because the price of gold shares fluctuates less rapidly than some other groups. Therefore investors stand a good chance of buying back in at about the same price later on.

A basic reason for weakness in golds has been the rise of the Canadian dollar compared with the United States dollar. Gold is fixed at 35 U.S. dollars an ounce and with the U.S. dollar worth less in Canada, many producers have found it difficult to maintain profits.

Most traders hold out little hope for any quick improvement in the gold picture. The market generally, however, is expected to rise before long.

The theory is that audit-selling is almost completed and buyers should take over soon.

TURN MIXED

Both Toronto and Montreal prices slipped Monday but turned mixed Tuesday. Montreal headed lower Wednesday while western oils led small gains at Toronto. Both centres traded lower Thursday but Toronto recovered Friday. Montreal continued lower.

In New York, prices slipped Monday but gained Tuesday and Wednesday until a slump set in late Wednesday. Selling continued Thursday but prices rose slightly Friday.

From Friday to Friday, the Toronto exchange's indexes showed industrials down 1.82 at 319.68, golds down 2.22 at 77.14, base metals down .40 at 172.84 and western oils up .44 at 126.79.

In the Montreal averages, banks were up .15 at 33.56, utilities down .2 at 96.4, industrials down 1.2 at 204.2, combined down .8 at 168.3, papers down 16.85 at 702.75 and golds down 1.20 at 68.32.

On the New York market, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down 50 cents at $114.80.

Drunk Driving Charge Against Cop Dismissed

BRAMPTON (CP)—A drunk driving charge against staff Sgt. Reginald Lawrence of Malton police, laid by fellow officer Sgt. Douglas Sheardown, was dismissed Friday.

The charge was dismissed Feb. 25 by Magistrate K. M. Langdon on a technicality. New information was gathered and the charge was laid again by Sheardown.

Victoria Member Questions Extra $50,000 For Massey

OTTAWA (CP)—A $50,000-a-year boost in the cost of maintaining the office of the governor-general has been questioned in the Commons.

Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre) said Friday night the cost is getting to be "quite a large figure" and suggested economies be considered.

However, the House approved the $50,000 increase dating back through the fiscal year that started April 1, 1952, after Prime Minister St. Laurent defended it, saying that the amounts spent for the upkeep of the governor-general's establishment are relatively "modest."

Mr. St. Laurent was supported by Solon Low, Social Credit leader, and A. J. Brooks (PC—Royal).

But C. W. Hodgson (PC—Victoria) observed that at the time a Canadian governor-general was appointed last year, "it was quite common talk that this procedure was going to save the Canadian nation a great deal of money."

"I never heard that suggestion," the prime minister interjected.

Mr. Knowles calculated that, with the $50,000 increase sending the vice-regal expense allowance to $100,000, the total for upkeep of his establishment will be $228,000 including his $48,000 salary and other costs of running Government House with its offices and living quarters.

"It is just a question whether that is not a little too large a sum for this establishment," he said.

The CCF member said there had been a slight reduction in the estimates for Government House in the fiscal year 1951-52.

"I wonder," he added, "whether there is not room, even with all the respect that we feel for the office and for the person who occupies the office, for the kind of economy approach that was tried back in 1951-52, rather than this substantial increase."

The prime minister replied that the situation had been difficult at the time Lord Alexander, governor-general, retired and that subsequently it had been gone into carefully with Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, his successor.

It was found that the money was being spent and there did not seem to be any item that could be cut out without changing the scale "on which the responsibilities of representing the sovereign were discharged in Canada."

The House also dealt with miscellaneous legislation and the supplementary 1952-53 estimates of several departments.

At the night session, it heard an appeal from Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC (PC—Nanaimo) that Canada claim as territorial waters the rich fishery waters of Hecate Strait, lying between Canada's Queen Charlotte Islands and the British Columbia mainland. He suggested this as a move to preserve the waters from foreign encroachment.

Gen. Pearkes spoke as the House gave first reading to a bill to ratify the North Pacific fisheries treaty among Canada, the United States and Japan. Under the 11-year convention, there are mutual agreements on who is to fish where in the North Pacific.

During debate on finance department estimates, some Progressive Conservative members suggested the federal government allow itself to be taxed by municipalities. At present, municipalities with a concentration of untaxable federal property receive grants in lieu of tax under a 1950 formula.

Finance Minister Abbott said he regards the formula as "reasonably fair" but added it might be due for review.

The House advanced to the stage of third reading—which was deferred until later—a measure to empower Postmaster-General Cote to boost payments to rural mail carriers. Members have been complaining for years that these payments, made under contract, are too low.

Twice Escapes Death Sailor Lost At Sea

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Twice escaping death when he was transferred from ill-fated British submarines, William John Forrest, 27-year-old son of Mrs. Margaret Smart of Woodstock, was lost at sea when knocked overboard by a gun recoil during firing practice in the Mediterranean.

An intensive air search was made for the stoker mechanic after the accident aboard the submarine HMS Trump, said reports from Valetta, Malta, but no trace was found.

Forrest was transferred from the submarine Affray just before it was torpedoed and sank and again was transferred from the submarine Truculent just before it sank in the Thames estuary with 90 men aboard.

TORONTO (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader George Drew visited the Ontario legislature Friday. Premier Frost extended the house's greetings to Mr. Drew, a former premier, who remained seated behind the Speaker's chair and did not reply.

Hall Calls Off Grain Handlers Lakehead Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — Union chief Frank Hall Friday called off a threatened strike April 6 of Lakehead grain handlers in an apparent move to gain settlement of their dispute with 15 terminal elevator operators.

After day-long discussions, which resume today, the Canadian vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks (TLC-AFL) authorized a statement that the Lakehead local of the union was "premature" in calling a strike date. He said it lacked executive authority to do that.

Mr. Hall's statement was one of several indications that a settlement is near in the dispute which had threatened an expected record spring movement of grain through the Great Lakes.

Union and elevator representatives, summoned to Ottawa by Labor Minister Gregg, entered direct negotiations after he spoke to them in a closed meeting.

SEES SETTLEMENT

One informant on the management side said he was confident of a settlement this week-end. Mr. Hall told a reporter an agreement was possible "if the other side gives in."

The dispute is over interpretation of an agreement for a 40-hour working week, granted by the terminal operators last fall to avoid a strike.

The 1,600 grain handlers argued the 40-hour week should be on a five-day basis, with time-and-a-half overtime pay for work on Saturdays and Sundays.

John Lindsay, chairman of the operators' negotiating committee, said last fall's agreement did not stipulate a five-day week. The operators argued that overtime should be paid only for work beyond 40 hours, regardless of whether Saturday and Sunday were working days.

Saw Swallows Returning To Capistrano

In a letter to the Examiner, Mrs. Leslie R. Groombridge, of Chemong Road, at present holidaying in California, vividly describes one of nature's great sights, the return of the swallows to Capistrano.

The morning of March 19 she drew up to the Mission of Capistrano to join other hundreds of spectators who gathered to watch the annual event.

ENTERED THE MISSION

"My friend and I paid our admissions to a gaily sashed Mexican, whose black silky jacket and trousers were trimmed with gold and red braid and who wore a large red sash around his waist .... Passing through a brick and adobe archway surmounted by a cross, we entered the mission San Juan Capistrano.

"There we were immediately besieged by white doves which flew around us, their soft cooing mingling with the morning songs of other birds. The mission garden itself was a riot of color. Geraniums of all colors grew like tall bushes and the calla lilies' whiteness contrasted with the colorful purple and yellow of the Bird of Paradise plant.

"One was immediately filled with a sense of peaceful quietude only heightened by the soft splashing of the fountain and the cooing of the doves.

VANGUARDS OF SPRING

"And then suddenly it was as though an electric current had been fused into the bright morning atmosphere and involuntary eyes were lifted skyward where, high in the heavens, came the first vanguards of spring. Swooping, soaring, dipping and diving, seemingly tireless, hovering over the misison gardens, the swallows came.

"A little timid at first, they dove lower and closer to earth. By this time hundreds of people had arrived to see the brave and the leaders come down to do battle with the sparrows who had taken possession of the arches in the old ruins. The sparrows certainly put up a noisy argument, but to no avail.

"I, who had come from the north and had seen the swallows leave, have seen the completion of this marvel of nature. Who tells them to leave on October 23 and return March 19 I do not seek to fathom, but I do know that the supersonic jet, flying high in the heavens above these small birds, was as nothing compared to this."

Driver, 88, Asks More Lights For Safer Roads

LONDON (CP)—An 88-year-old motorist who has driven 800,000 miles sees a solution to Britain's highway problems in what he calls a "half-moon" and a "string of pearls."

The motorist, F. S. Bennett, suggests installing a row of reflectors 50 yards on each side of the highway to warn drivers of a crossing. This he calls the string of pearls.

The half-moon is a semi-circular safety zone at each end of the crossing. Here pedestrians could stand so that motorists could see they intended to cross.

Bennett advanced his proposals at a national conference of the Pedestrians' Association.

Bare Handful Of Big Shots Left In Satellite Lands

LONDON (Reuters) — Only a handful of Communist big shots are left in the satellite countries following the deaths of Stalin and President Klement Gottwald of Czechoslovakia.

Of the really big Communist leaders whose lives have been spent in revolutionary struggle, the most outstanding of those retaining high office outside Russia are Wilhelm Pieck and Walter Ulbricht in East Germany and Matyas Rakosi in Hungary.

Pieck, 77, president of the East German republic, is reported seriously ill. But if and when he dies the event is not likely to rock the East German republic to its foundations; as the death of Gottwald, following on the death of Stalin, might conceivably do in Czechoslovakia.

Ulbricht ranks as Germany's No. 1 Communist, the man who takes his orders direct from the Kremlin or Russian military headquarters in Berlin. He controls the powerful party machine in East Germany, just as Stalin controlled it in Russia.

In Hungary, Rakosi is both premier and Communist party chief. Russia's prime minister and party boss, Georgi Malenkov, differs from all these three leaders and from most of the colleagues he has selected for his new team in that he has no pre-revolutionary experience. He was only 16 when the Russian revolution occurred and joined the Communist (then Bolshevik) party a year or two later.

Rakosi, 61, has had the most colorful career of the three outstanding leaders in the satellites. He has survived purges, he just escaped being executed as a rebl in the right-wing Hungarian empire before the Second World War, and he has spent 14 years of his life in jail.

Of Jewish origin he has so far escaped the anti-Semitic purge recently reported in East European countries.

Ulbricht and Rakosi have all been 100 per cent pro-Stalinist in their policy.

In their respective countries, Ulbricht and Rakosi are the kingpins of Kremlin communism. And both have considerable personality and prestige in their own right.

The lesser satellite leaders who have survived purges are mostly regarded here as Kremlin stooges.

Lakefield Forestry Club To Plant 15,000 Trees On C.G.E. Land At Nassau

The Forestry Club at Lakefield High School is about to embark on a project of planting 150,000 trees in the next ten years on the Canadian General Electric Company property at Nassau.

The site on the west side of the river, and north of the highway bridge, comprises about 200 acres.

The planting assignment for each boy and girl this season is 150 trees, said Ken E. Best, assistant agricultural representative.

"Our membership is around 50, and with 15,000 trees to be planted annually, the personal average is 150 trees yearly, providing we continue to have 50 members during the term of the project.

CGE BUYS TREES

Mr. Best said Canadian General Electric is supplying the trees. They are obtained from the Ontario government's Department of Forests, and for the first time they have to be puchased this year. In other words the public has to pay for them.

"We took this project up with Robert MacMorran of CGE. He obtained the sanction of the company officials, and one of these days the club will begin planting."

Mr. Best said it was more than a demonstration project, but the location along No. 28 Highway to Lakefield would attract attention.

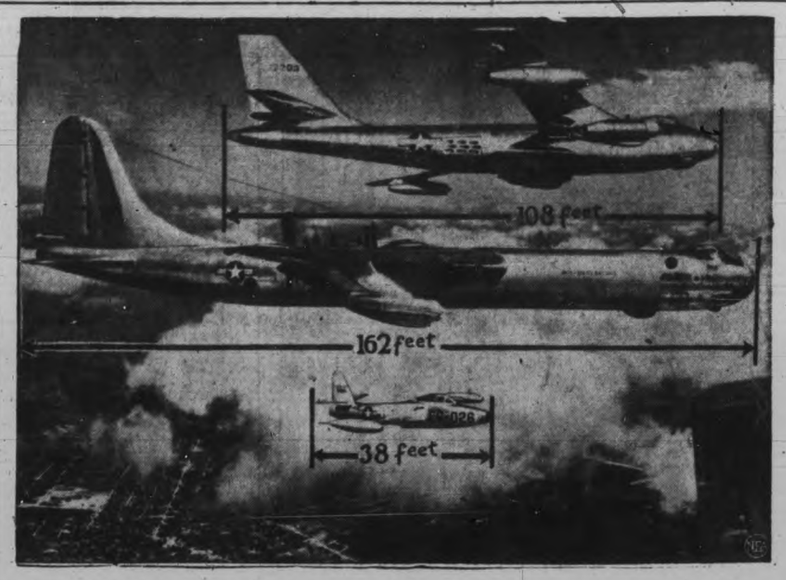
"The arrangements have come through without any hitches," Mr. Best said. "Mr. McMorran is an enthusiast for reforestation. The development of the planting at Kawartha Country Club is evidence of his interest."

Active in this project is John Bell of Lakefield, district forester. Much of the details will remain under his supervision. The Lakefield High School Club and its undertaking provides an accession of practical reforestation that should hearten Mr. Bell.

One phase of this High School student initiative in providing trees for the future, Mr. Best says, is that the land is of not much use for anything else. There are similar areas elsewhere in the county, and as the trees grow they should be a reminder and incentive to the people generally of what can be accomplished.

The Kawartha Club conifers are also eloquent of the effects, in their own time and pace, of the accomplishment nature produces with trees that are given a good start in planting.

"Our 1953 Forestry Club at Lakefield are setting an example which other young people may emulate," Mr. Best said. "Adults, too. Each year's work will be identified, so that the boys and girls as they grow older will always have an inerest in the trees they plant this April."



Would-Be Robber Halted By Police

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A man halted by a flying tackle after the robbery of the Capitol Theatre cashier of $264 Thursday night, was remanded to April 1 in city court today.

William H. Brocklebank, 25, of Grimsby, was not asked to plead to a charge of robbing with threat of violence. Magistrate Donald B. Menzies declined to fix bail.

The thug stepped to the rear of the cashier's kiosk and demanded the cash from Mrs. Jack Hutchinson on duty there. As he fled on foot her screams sent an ex-football player, Ronald Brodie in quick pursuit. Brodie tackled the man with a flying tackle a block from the theatre and halted him.

Brocklebank, who refused to give information to police, was unarmed.

ALL THREE CARRY A-BOMBS — A few years ago the only planes that could carry the then cumbersome A-bomb were the giant B-36, centre, and the B-47, top. But now, because of the reduction in the size of the atomic weapon, the F-84G, a one-man aircraft, can effectively carry the bomb. The Thunderjet, capable of flying at more than 600 miles per hour, can be put together in a fraction of the time it takes to manufacture the slow-moving bombers. Above photo graphically illustrates the size of the U.S. Air Force's three main atom bomb carriers.

Firemen Wages Problems In Other Cities

Brantford council has adjourned until March 28 discussions with their fire department on the 1953 wage agreement. The Expositor reports that the union's latest offer was $2,733 former basic pay, plus cost of living bonus of $374, and an increase across-the-board of $392, making approximately $3,500 basic rate, for a first class fireman. Service pay averages $75 a year, medical-hospital plan sharing is worth about $50 more. Firemen also receive $40 a year telephone allowance, plus uniforms.

Walter Child, union president, said the men had not been granted an increase since an arbitration award dating back to Jan. 1, 1950.

Mayor H. E. Winter said the city "could not afford to grant an increase which would make a fireman's weekly pay about $65."

Mayor Charlotte Whitton recently said Ottawa might ask for an arbitration board to deal with the wage demands of the three groups of municipal employees—police, firemen and departmental workers.

According to the Ottawa Journal "she indicated that she was going to find out whether there was any legal process by which the city could request a plebiscite on the question of increased salaries, beyond the increases already proposed by the Board of Control.

"In the next 24 months, even the proposals we have made would cost the city about $600,000 in salary increases," Mayor Whitton said. She alleged that there was a salary race between police and firemen costing the city "thousands of dollars."

The Ottawa firemen asked for an increase of $40 a month for salaried workers and 20 cents an hour for hourly-rate employees. The city's proposal was 10% increase of employees of more than 10 years' service, 5% for employees of five to ten years' service, and no increase except the normal annual promotion in classification for employees with less than five years' service.

It was recently reported in Peterborough that some agreement had been reached by Fire Fighters' Union and the council's special committee, but there has been nothing definite confirming that intimation.

Wonder Hen Duplicate Dies On Sussex Farm

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — Duplicate is dead. Long live the wonder hen!

Prematurely, at 18 months, death came on a Sussex farm to the slate grey bird whose feathered form, feverishly laboring overtime in life, performed prodigies that startled human kind. In Ottawa, a Canadian expert said it just could not be done.

Duplicate's claimed output for one year was 462 eggs—at least eight dozen ahead of any other bird in barnyard history.

The best record Canadian performance is 360 in 365 days, credited to a white leghorn in Galt, Ont. Duplicate had 360 in a mere 156 days. So swift was her production rate that W. E. Maynard, Canada's custodian of egg-laying records, said somebody was being spoofed.

EVERYTHING ON LEVEL

Duplicate's British owners insist everything was on the level. Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Hutchings, who own the 125-acre farm where Duplicate performed (by fair means or fowl) credit their star boarder with these rapid-firing records:

Sixteen eggs in three days.

Ten in 24 hours.

Five in 10 minutes. (Mrs. Hutchings' diary records this took place April 17, 1952, a flush period even for Duplicate).

Duplicate was a Holland blue. She had gentle eyes, unruffled manner and nothing to distinguish her from any other bird in the chicken run—until she started laying. At first it was two a day, so they called her Duplicate, but triplicate and other variants soon became more apt.

She reached her peak last summer, then suffered from seasonal slows. Last Dec. 21 she completed a one-year period with the claimed total of 462 eggs. Later she laid six more and toppled over, dead.

WORE HERSELF OUT

"I guess she just wore herself out," says Mrs. Hutchings. "She seemed right as rain one day and the next she was dead. Poor thing, it was an awful blow to us. It sounds silly, I know, but we became quite attached to her—used to put her in a basket and ride in to town. She loved that."

The feathered friend that stumped the experts became such a pet the Hutchings have decided to have her stuffed and mounted by a London texidermist. She may go to a museum, but Mrs. Hutchings would rather have her home on the farm near Chichester in Sussex.

There won't be any posthumous merit awards for Duplicate, though British agriculture officials admit she's the fastest of all fowl.

What about the Canadian critic?

"Well," says Mrs. Hutchings, "we put a challenge in our local paper, saying he could come down to the farm and see for himself. But he never did."

Tragedy Of The Cross Falls Between Days Of Rejoicing

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

Palm Sunday with its celebration of Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem with the people thronging along the way shouting their hosannas, is followed in our church calendar by Easter Sunday, again a day of rejoicing in the Resurrection. The tragedy of the betrayal and the cross falls in the days between. Glory and tragedy; doubt, suffering and sadness; then triumph and glory again, all in the space of one short week.

The contrast between the enthusiastic welcome of the people and the vengeful, temporary triumph of the enemies of Jesus seems incredible. But it is all there in the Scripture record. With the overcoming of Jesus in His resurrection, the events of that week are the most important in all history and the religious life of man.

The supreme importance of these events is as fact. Yet they also symbolize something that has continuously been in the history of mankind and is particularly emphasized at the present time. Incredible as such a contrast seems in the few days between the hosannas of enthusiasm and the acts of violence, it is the way in which glory and tragedy have so often been in the affairs of men.

One thinks of the great Crusades of the Middle Ages. Faith and zeal was inspired by rousing preachers, banners, pomp, knights of the cross, the rallying of kings, even the banding together of children. Yet it was quickly followed by jealousies, betrayals, the sacrifice of the children, and the tragedy of defeat. It was like the tragedy we find between Palm Sunday and Calvary's Friday but without a glorious resurrection.

In the U.S.A. we have seen the inauguration of President Eisenhower. It was the most spectacular program of such an event in all the history of Presidents. Newspapers and magazines are full of the far more elaborate event soon to take place in the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II of England.

Yet with all this pomp and splendor, what shadows are in the background? How different the scene is in the many places where virtual war is going on. We have perils and dangers in areas that once seemed secure. The threat of greater perils, dangers, and widespread war constantly hover over nations that would be only too happy to associate pageantry with peace!

I wonder how many of us watching the marching men, their flags flying, trumpets blaring, and drums booming in all the glory of gold and color, can see the horrors of the battlefields upon which so many of these men will soon be fighting. We realize it is so like the palms and crosses of long ago.

From those palms and crosses there was a Resurrection of triumphant glory. Will there be, for mankind, a resurrection beyond the present glory, and tragedies of today? That is our hope and prayer. The dream of peace persists among men and the great message that comes out of the events of Palm Sunday and Easter is that with God all things are possible.

Old Soldier Proud Son Decorated

OTTAWA (CP) — An old soldier was a proud man Friday because his son has proved himself a chip off the old block.

The old soldier is Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, CH, CB, CMG, DSO, who commanded the 1st Canadian army in England in the Second World War and now is chairman of the international joint commission.

The son is Lt.-Col. Edward Murray Dalziel McNaughton, 34, of Kingston, who has just won the DSO, a coveted award for commanders of soldiers, as commanding officer of the 1st Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery in Korea. The citation lauded his "boundless energy and enthusiasm."

"VERY PROUD"

A reporter called Gen. McNaughton, who won the DSO in the First World War as an artillery officer too, about the award.

"We're very, very proud," the old soldier said. He was proud, too, he added, that the son has gone on in his own branch of the army.

Lt.-Col. McNaughton recently gave legal notice of intention to change his last name to Leslie in keeping with the will of a great-aunt who left him an estate of $250,000 providing he would adopt her name.

Meat Deal With U.K.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuters)—An Anglo-Uruguayan meat treaty was signed here Friday by the minister of livestock, Juan Quilici, and British ambassador Douglas Howard. Britain will pay a "pilot price" of $450 a long ton for meat—the same as she is paying Argentina.

Unions Condemn Frost Partiality

KITCHENER (CP). — The Amalgamated Unions of Canada passed a resolution Friday night condemning Premier Frost for showing "partiality in his treatment of labor unions."

Ernest Smith, general representative, told the more than 90 delegates to the rally that the AUC, parent body of 103 independent Canadian unions, was refused permission to present a brief to the premier. About 62,000 workers in the province are affected.

He claimed that during the same period representatives of the CIO and AFL, both international unions, were allowed to present briefs to the government for consideration at this session of the legislature.

"We condemn the premier for his apparent partiality in granting time to hear representatives from other sections of the labor movement while asking us to wait until after the current session," he said. Mr. Smith termed the action of Mr. Frost an "affront" to organized labor.

Farmers Pleased With Early Rain

TORONTO (CP).—April showers came to Ontario early this year. City-dwellers may regard them distastefully, but farmers see them as an omen of good crops.

In the last few days, almost the entire province has had light spring rains. There has been snow in the northern regions, but generally in isolated areas.

In Southern Ontario, which had an unusually dry winter, the week's rain almost equalled precipitation for the months of December, January or February.

In the rich farming belt from Niagara east to the St. Lawrence, the warm rain has given the soil a damp quality favorable for seeding and helped relieve the lack of moisture from infrequent snows.

The southeastern portion of the province has had the heaviest rainfall, ranging from one to two inches altogether. The Ottawa district has had about an inch. In the Toronto-Hamilton regions there has been from a half-inch to an inch of rain.

Honor F. D. McDowell At Toronto Dinner

TORONTO (CP). — Franklin Davey McDowell, retiring publicity representative of the CNR's central region and well-known novelist, will be honored by associates at a testimonial dinner here April 18.

Friends from many walks of life—authorship, journalism, publicity work, advertising and radio—are combining to hold the dinner in honor of Mr. McDowell. Details are in the hands of the Frank McDowell Dinner Committee, 70 Bond St., Toronto.

Fatal Car Crash

KITCHENER (CP) — Harold Schmidt, 25, of Kitchener was fatally injured here Friday night when the car he was driving crashed into a tree on Highway No. 7-8A, three miles west of here. The top of the vehicle was sheared off. Mr. Schmidt died shortly after in the Kitchener-Waterloo Hospital.

550,000 Ontario Cattle Get Warble Spray In 1952

South Monaghan joined the anti-warble fly forces of the district at a meeting of township field men Tuesday afternoon in the office of the Ontario Department of Agirculture.

The other municipalities represented were: Hope, Cavan and Manvers of Durham; Smith, Ennismore, Otonabee, Douro and Dummer of Peterborough; and Brighton of Northumberland. Frank C. Paterson mentioned that two townships of this county were not represented, but they were both active and persistent in their work against the heel fly.

R. H. Graham, of the livestock branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, reported that the campaign against this cattle pest was carried on in 120 townships of the province last year.

Some fifty other townships are coming into the control fold this season, beginning April 1. Mr. Graham said 550,000 cattle received two treatments of cortisone spray last year.

"Not one township has asked for repeal of the bylaw. We had only two minor cases of objection among all those Ontario farmers who in the first place asked their municipalities to pass the bylaw authorizing the Warble Control Act."

For the spraying staff and inspectors the meeting was an afternoon's refresher course in duty, authority, good relations, and primarily, as Mr. Graham said, "killing grubs."

FARMER'S BUSINESS

"This job is just as good as the inspector makes it. You are engaged in the cattle owner's business, and we want him to feel that his money is being spent wisely."

One point stressed again was the provision for supplying a certificate of treatment on cattle that are moved from one township to another. Mr. Graham said that was "a must."

"Our duty is to enforce the act, but we want our inspectors to get along with people. The last thing we want to do is show any sign of force. But, the obligation is there, and we will go to court if we have to."

Mr. Graham recalled one lone case in the Orillia district last season in which the farmers of a township declared that they would not pay for the treatment of their cattle unless action was taken against one farmer who refused to co-operate. In those circumstances, and reluctantly, the objector was called to court, and a nominal fine was imposed.

"What we all find is that people are pretty good, and we want to do our part in keeping on good terms with them."

SPRAY GETS RESULTS

Prof. John Baker, of OAC, said "I have never been able to get with a 'gun' the control I get by hand scrubbing, and I know that I am good with a gun. But, by and large, the best results we are getting is with the power sprayer. In that case one man is doing all the cattle in an area.

"In the other, you might have some 200 farmers or more doing the work individually. Those who apply the treatment thoroughly can get a 100 per cent kill. Others may be careless about it, and the odd man may try to get by without doing it at all."

KEITH MORROW, supervisor of farm broadcasts for CBC, will be the guest speaker at the rally and social evening of Peterborough County Farm Forums Monday, March 30 at the Normal School. This is the closing event of the Forum season which began at the end of October and continued through an interesting winter series.

First Red Break In Deadlock Over Repatriation

TOKYO—(AP)—Premier Chou En-lai of Red China tonight offered a compromise solution to the knotty problem of repatriating Korean war prisoners—the only issue blocking an armistice agreement. It was the first break in the Reds previously-unyielding demands that all prisoners be returned. return those prisoners who insist on going home and hand over the others to a neutral state "to insure a just solution to the question of their repatriation."

He did not propose a neutral state by name, presumably leaving that question to be decided at the armistice site of Panmunjom.

The United Nations walked away from Panmunjom last fall after telling the Reds to accept the principle of giving prisoners their choice of returning home—or come up with an acceptable solution.

SIMILAR PLANS

Chou's offer—similar to plans advanced in the United Nations assembly—came in a broadcast, heard here, over the Communist Peiping radio.

A spokesman for Gen. Mark Clark, UN Far East commander, said "we are not selling the statement short but so far it is just a Communist radio broadcast."

The spokesman said as far as he knew no formal communication from Chou had been received.

Some Allied officers said privately and unofficially that the proposal, if it meant what it seems, might end the Korean war. But they had their fingers crossed and there was a feeling of caution among the command.

The Reds had made an earlier overture Saturday, accepting a Feb. 22 UN proposal for exchange of sick and wounded war prisoners and asking that the truce talks be resumed. The UN has not yet answered the Saturday proposal.

IMMEDIATE REPATRIATION

Chou said tonight:

"Both parties. . .should undertake to repatriate immediately after the cessation of hostilities all those prisoners of war. . .who insist upon repatriation and to hand over the remaining prisoners of war to a neutral state so as to ensure a just solution to the question of their repatriation."

However, Chou also said:

"We by no means relinquish the principle of release and repatriation of war prisoners without delay after the cessation of hostilities. . . .

"Nor do we acknowledge the assertion of the United Nations command that there are among the prisoners of war individuals who allegedly refuse repatriation."

MORE

WANT TO HAVE PEACE

Chou said the Chinese and North Korean Reds are taking this step to solve the war only because this one item blocks an armistice.

Chou's plan is similar to the Indian proposal to end the war which was submitted in the United Nations last fall and was promptly and sharply rejected by the two warring Communist nations and Russia.

33 Patients Die In Fire At Nursing Home

LARGO, Fla.—(AP)—Thirty-two elderly patients, many of them too feeble-minded to save themselves, and a heroic nurse died Sunday in a wind-swept fire that destroyed a one-storey frame nursing home. Their ages ranged from 55 to 94 and many were so senile they refused to leave their warm beds in the early pre-dawn chill. Of the 57 patients in the privately-owned Littlefield Nursing Home, only 25 escaped as neighbors turned out barefooted and in night clothes to aid rescue effort of the owners. Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Littlefield, who operated the home for 23 years.

Fire companies from Largo and nearby Clearwater, on the Florida west coast, came quickly but within minutes the sprawling structure was a mass of flames and charred ruins.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

Cause of the fire was unknown and Clearwater fire chief Peter Theola said it might never be learned.

Three agencies began investigations—the state hotel commission, state fire marshal and Pinellas county sheriff Sid Saunders.

The tragedy cost 34 lives in all, for Angus D. Smith, county welfare director, was killed in an automobile collision while driving three patients to hospital.

Many of the victims died in their beds, unaware of the danger that suddenly roared at them about 3:30 on a chilly Sunday morning.

Of those who gained consciousness, some were too panicky to follow directions; some were too feeble-minded, and some too old and stubborn.

ROUSED PATIENTS

The Littlefields were sleeping in the home with the patients. Littlefield said he was awakened by the screams of a woman. He tried to fight the flames with fire extinguishers, saw he was losing, and began waking up patients and trying to get them out.

Mrs. Littlefield ran outside, screaming for help and collapsed with a heart attack. She is in serious condition.

"They were just like children—they didn't want to be removed from their warm beds," said one neighbor, T. R. Hasty, who carried old people out till he was almost cut off by the raging flames.

PATIENTS HELPED

However, some of the patients themselves helped others escape.

Will Hardin, 76, said: "I carried out Gus Simonson, who is 94 years old. He had two canes and he could walk just a little."

Mrs. Gertrude Warnick, 55, a nurse, brought one woman out, returned to the flame-swept building and did not come out again.

U.K. Thousands File Past Queen's Coffin

LONDON (CP)—The thinning ranks of European royalty headed for London today to pay homage at the funeral of Queen Mary.

The royal delegations were to include young King Baudouin of Belgium, Queen Juliana of The Netherlands and her husband, Prince Bernard; Crown Prince Olav of Norway, and former King Umberto of Italy.

Greece's Queen Frederika arrived Sunday.

They will journey to Windsor Castle for simple funeral rites Tuesday for the 85-year-old Grandmother whose death last Tuesday severed British royalty's last living tie with the Victorian era. Queen Mary, who so long had symbolized the monarchy for Britain's millions, will be entombed beside her husband, King George V, and her son, King George VI, in St. George's Chapel.

BRITONS FILE PAST

Throughout Sunday night and today, a silent file of mourning Britons moved past the dead queen's coffin as it lay in state in ancient Westminster Hall, adjoining the Houses of Parliament.

By dawn, nearly 40,000 persons had passed the candlelit catafalque, resplendent in its purple drapings and silver pall.

Queen Mary herself had made similar mourning pilgrimages to the hall 13 months ago, when her son, King George XI lay in state there.

The coffin was brought to Westminster Hall Sunday, carried through crowded, silent London streets from Marlborough House, where the queen died.

The present Queen and leading members of the Royal Family, the women heavily veiled, attended a short religious service preceding the lying-in-state. It was conducted by Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, archbishop of Canterbury and primate of all England.

The procession to Westminster Hall started from Queen Mary's Chapel, a 300-year-old green and gold building near Marlborough house.

4 ROYAL DUKES

Behind the gun carriage bearing the coffin walked the royal mourners, including the four royal dukes—Edinburgh, Windsor, Gloucester and Kent—followed by Prince George of Denmark, the Earl of Harewood and his brother,

Plane Finds Lost Missionary

WINNIPEG (CP)—An RCAF search and rescue aircraft Sunday spotted the light Stinson plane of an American flying missionary lost since Wednesday on the west coast of Hudson Bay near the arctic circle.

Rev. Gleason Hines Ledyard, about 35, of Ashland, O., with his wife and son, was on a 250-mile flight from Coral Harbor, on the south shore of Southampton Island, to Wager Bay, about 500 miles north of Churchill, Man.

The plane was spotted between six and eight miles from its destination on the second sweep by the air force craft over the area.

The search plane reported by radio that figures could be seen waving beside the downed aircraft. It did not appear that the small plane was damaged.

It is believed that none of the three occupants of the single-engined, ski-equipped plane are injured, but they may have been near the end of their endurance when sighted.

Consider Legal Action Against Strike Leaders

NEW WATERFORD, N. S. (CP) Dominion Coal Company today fired 18 coal miners and announced it was "seriously considering" taking legal action against those responsible for removing maintenance workers from the No. 12 mine during last week's wildcat strike.

The strike, which tied up about 3,000 coal miners and three of Cape Breton's top-producing pits, ended Sunday night. All were at work today except half of the No. 12's loaders, who went home following dismissal of the 18 for interfering with maintenance workers last Monday.

It was not known if the loaders walked out in protest of the dismissal.

Hotel Man Admits Killing Palsied Son

CLIFTON, N. J. (AP)—A tavern and hotel owner Sunday admitted killing his five-year-old cerebral palsied son because he could "not stand to see him suffer any longer."

Police arrested the father, Albert J. Sell, 44, when they found him in a parked car at a deserted spot near a road Sunday. The body of the black-haired, brown-eyed boy was in the back.

"I shot my boy. He's in the back seat there. I knew the police would find me," Sell was quoted as saying to the approaching officers. Sell is to be arraigned today on a murder charge.

The boy, Albert Jr., had been shot through the head. A victim of cerebral palsy since birth, the boy never had been able to talk and had difficulty walking.

Sell, according to police, said he didn't want to see his son suffer. He also was quoted as saying he believed he himself was in bad health and didn't have much longer to live—and that he didn't want his wife, herself in delicate health, to be burdened with the boy's care.

Damage Over One Million In Triple Train Crash

ERIA, Pa. (AP)—New York Central Railroad officials estimated today that property damage alone will total more than $1,000,000 in a triple train crash which killed 21 passengers and injured about 150.

After a 10-hour rest, wrecking crews resumed work today to clear the twisted wreckage of two passenger trains and a freight.

Two tracks on the railroad's main east-west line have been opened to traffic. Officials hope to have all tracks restored by Tuesday night. Regular passenger and freight service is slowly proceeding through the wreck area.

Only one of the 21 persons killed in the pileup late Friday night just inside Pennsylvania, four miles east of Conneaut, O., is unidentified. The victim is a woman, about 30 years old.

More than 60 of the injured remain in hospitals. Three are in serious condition.

The federal bureau of investigation ruled out any possibility of sabotage.

The New York Central said the wreck resulted from an almost unbelievable set of circumstances. Two passenger trains travelling at 80 miles an hour—westbound No. 5 (Buffalo to Chicago) and eastbound No. 12 (the Southwestern Limited) were about to pass at the same time two freight trains were passing on the other two tracks.

Some stakes broke off a gondola car in an eastbound freight train, allowing a few links of 18-inch pipe to fall off.

One of the pipes struck the north rail of the westbound passenger track, bending the rail. Seconds later, the Buffalo to Chicago express hit the kinked section of rail and some of the cars smashed into a westbound freight.

OPP Considering Mass Resignations

TORONTO (CP) — Mass resignations of Ontario provincial police on a province-wide scale were reported threatening today because of poor pay.

Four officers at suburban Thornhill turned in their uniforms today while six others are reported to be looking for higher-paying jobs. Five officers recently resigned at Mount Forest.

Commissioner E. V. McNeill of the OP said he was "surprised" to hear of the resignations. He said there had been the "odd resignation," but he had heard nothing of the reported mass exodus of officers from the force.

WHITBY DISSATISFIED

Reports from Whitby, 30 miles east of here, indicate a feeling of discontent at the detachment there with five men threatening to resign unless their take-home pay of $50 a week is increased.

Reports of other resignations come from Port Credit and Oakville, west of Toronto, with five officers quoted as saying they will quit at Port Credit unless pay boosts arrive by Wednesday.

Current rate of pay for OPP constables is $2,860 a year, plus a cost-of-living bonus.

The attorney general's department recently authorized pay increases of at least $200 a year to officers above the rank of sergeant.

M.P. Fined $15 For Violating Act

COLLINGWOOD (CP) — Julian Ferguson, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Simcoe North, was fined $15 and $72.50 costs today on a charge of violating the Municipal Elections Act here last January.

He was charged under a section dealing with the distribution or use of circulars on election day.

Police said Mr. Ferguson used circulars carrying names of candidates for town council and recommending their election on civic election day.

Collingwood is 70 miles north of Toronto.

News Photographer Dodges Balls Of Fire As Freight Train Blows Up

LEWIS, Ind.—(CP)—"I squatted again to take a picture, and as I did I started to float in space . . ." This was the experience of Jack Wimsey, a Terre Haut Tribune photographer who was in Lewis on another assignment when ammunition-loaded cars of a freight train blew up Saturday night. Wimsey took the first photographs of the explosion from the middle of an open field not far from the blast. "I squatted down in the field to take a good shot," he said. "This was the beginning of the nightmare. It blew!

"From this point everything happened at once, but I thought to myself that if the thing is going to get me, I'm going to get some good shots. I squatted down again.

MISSES PHOTOGRAPHER

"Again it blew! And there was a bowling, deafening boom. It was during this boom that I saw hurtling toward me a piece of something the size of a door. It was spinning over and over—directly for my face.

"It missed me and hit the roof of the nearest house. The entire house, already scorched by the tense, boiling blaze, burst into flames. Then the house was flattened completely.

"While this hissing ball of fire spinned through the air, I was thinking of another shot. I squatted again to take a picture, and as I did I started to float in space.

"I asked myself if this was it.

CARRIED 12 FEET

"I judge I was carried at least 12 feet, maybe farther, and lit on my feet. That wasn't it.

"Then I started running.

"As I ran it was then that the most horrible thing of this nightmare developed. Bright glowing red balls appearing to be at least 15 inches in diameter began showering about me, around me and over me. I didn't know then that later I would have to drive through these same missiles of fire to escape the Lewis holocaust.

"The field surrounding me was now on fire. There was only one way out—through it.

"I ran for my car parked on the road. I found the roof caved in and the windows broken. But I still had to get out.

"The only way out was to back up, for flames were ahead of me. I backed out of Lewis through the continuous shower of fiery missiles."

Marines Halt Chinese Drive

By ROBERT B. TUCKMAN

SEOUL (AP) — South Korean troops threw back a Chinese Red drive on Christmas hill on the eastern front in a driving snowfall today as United States Marines dug in firmly on bloody outpost Vegas in the west.

Some 300 Reds jabbed 50 yards beyond Allied advance defence lines on a 350-yard front west of Christmas hill, which is west of the Mundung valley. South Koreans drove them back, killing or wounding 100 Chinese.

Entrenched marines on Vegas had won back the outpost at dawn Sunday after being knocked off three times in the Reds' spring feeler drive on the western front last week.

Weary marines smashed a three-pronged Red drive on Vegas late Sunday and broke up a Red force massing for another attack Sunday night with a thundering curtain of artillery fire.

Mayer To Meet Ottawa Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Rene Mayer of France, fresh from conferences in Washington with President Eisenhower, is scheduled to call today on Prime Minister St. Laurent and members of the Canadian cabinet for informal talks.

What Mr. Mayer and his cabinet colleagues, Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and Finance Minister Maurice Bourges-Maunoury, will discuss has not been announced. Presumably there will be an exchange of views on problems arising from differences between Communist-dominated and Western nations.

Their list of activities today indicates they will have opportunities to raise almost any topic involving finance, foreign affairs, trade and NATO.

Arriving Sunday by RCAF plane, France's 57-year-old premier, in office since last January, made clear in a statement the visit was partly to strengthen old ties between the two countries and partly to discuss "the great problems that face the democratic nations."

In a gesture of France's gratitude to Canada for its effort in men and materials in two world wars, Mr. Mayer is to place a wreath at the National War Memorial.

Mr. Mayer and his cabinet members are scheduled to call next on Prime Minister St. Laurent and officials of the external affairs department.

Following an informal lunch the French officials call on Defence Production Minister Howe and Finance Minister Abbott. A press conference is to follow the talks.

U.S. Announces New Nickel Contract

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government announced today it has agreed on a new contract with Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., Toronto, to buy at least 100,000,000 pounds of nickel by June 30, 1962.

Howard I. Young, deputy administrator of the Defence Materials Procurement Agency, said the U.S. may obtain another 100,000,000 pounds by June 30, 1967, under the contract.

Nickel is essential in jet engine production. The U. S. used about 200,000,000 pounds annually before the Korean war broke out and requirements have skyrocketed since then.

Young said Falconbridge will start off its nickel deliveries under the new contract with at least 2,000,000 pounds by the end of this year.

KITCHENER (CP) — Reginald Strome, 59, and his wife, both formerly of Kitchener, were killed Friday when a plane piloted by Mr. Strome crashed in Indiana. They are survived by two daughters in Chicago.

Sixth Victim Of Moon Killer Now Discovered

LONDON (CP)—Urgent new warnings went out today to all British police that London's "Jack the Strangler," a sex-crazed maniac, may strike again at tonight's full moon. Already investigators had found the remains of six of his victims—and what may be the shattered skull of a seventh.

Police believe the ghastly murders show a pattern of moon madness that could bring another slaying tonight.

They pursued a theory that the strangler at the time of the full moon goes berserk, entices the women into some secluded place, strangles them and assaults them sexually.

Like the notorious Jack the Ripper of the 19th century, the strangler apparently concentrated on fallen women. He lured young women who walked the back streets or were out for a gay time by asking them to pose for his camera in the nude. Four of the strangler's victims were in their teens or early 20s.

REDOUBLE SEARCH

Baffled Scotland Yard ordered the search for the killer redoubled. It also ordered a speedup in the dismantling of the dingy west London tenement where the victims were found. The back yard was spadded to a depth of five feet. The ramshackle house is in Notting Hill, a hodge-podge district of faded Victorian mansions and near-slums.

The charred remains of two bodies and possibly a third were dug out of the tiny garden of the horror house during tne week-end. Another had been found last Tuesday under the floor boards of the ground floor apartment and three more half-nude bodies, believed the killer's most recent victims, were discovered hidden in a papered-over cupboard.

Police speculated that the murderer used the cupboard as a temporary storehouse for the bodies until he could bury them. For that reason, they said, more corpses still may be around the house or in the garden.

Predicts Steady Prices

COLDSTREAM, Ont. (CP)—Beef producers have nothing to fear for the future, Robert McCubbin, Middlesex MP, and parliamentary assistant to the minister of agriculture, told the Beef producers Association of Middlesex here Saturday. "Keep your cows," Mr. McCubbin told members, predicting steady beef prices this spring and possibly higher prices in June and July.

Britain, Soviet To Discuss Downing Of U.K. Bomber

BERLIN (AP) — Britain announced today that she will meet with the Russians in East Germany Tuesday night to discuss ways of preventing such air incidents as the recent shooting down of a British bomber by Soviet fighters over Germany.

The announcement said the conference will be held at the headquarters of the Soviet control commission at Karlshorst.

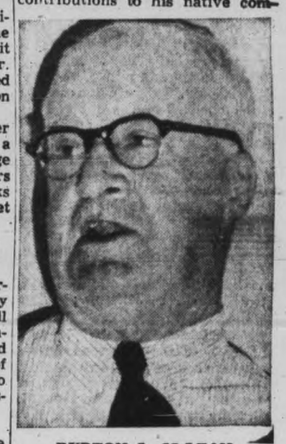
Indicating that further talks may follow, the British government added that "the location of the next meeting may be in the British sector of Berlin."

The meeting was proposed by the Soviet commander-in-chief in Germany, Gen. Vassily I. Chuikov, in rejecting a British protest that the shooting March 18 was "an unwarranted and brutal act of aggression." Seven British airmen died in the RAF Lincoln bomber, which Soviet MiG-15 fighters blasted from the sky over a Berlin-West Germany air corridor across the Soviet zone of Germany.

The foreign office said only British and Russian representatives will take part in Tuesday's conference. It added, however, that the British government will keep in close touch with the U. S. and French governments.

Soviet fighters shot down a U. S. Thunderjet fighter two days before the bomber incident, but the pilot bailed out and escaped injury.

B. L. McLean Ran Lindsay Fair Dies At Home



Burton L. McLean, 76, one of Lindsay's most prominent citizens, died at his home Saturday night after a short illness. He suffered a stroke while on his way to Florida for a vacation two weeks ago and returned home.

A former mayor of Lindsay, he had been closely allied to the Ontario Fairs Association for many years and was a member of the Ontario Racing Commission.

He was appointed director of harness racing for the ORC in July, 1950, the first position of its kind in the province.

Policeman Catches Youth Red-Handed

STRATFORD (CP) — A policeman waiting in a farmhouse bedroom Sunday arrested Robert Quipp, 16, on a break-in charge.

The same house, that of Fred Debus, was broken into the previous Sunday while members of the Debus family were at church and $11 was taken.

Quipp pleaded guilty to charges arising from both break-ins and was given two years' suspended sentence.

Gov't Refuses Reveal Salaries

OTTAWA (CP) — The chairman of the Commons atomic energy committee today opposed a Progressive Conservative request and declined to make public salaries of officers of the Crown-owned Eldorado Mining and Refining Company.

George McIlraith, parliamentary assistant to Trade Minister Howe, said the government's uranium company is in a field where it competes with private business and he had "many objections" to putting the salaries on the record.

The request was made by Howard Green (PC-Vancouver-Quadra) as the committee continued questioning of W. J. Bennett, Eldorado's president.

Mr. Green maintained that Eldorado should be in a position no different from that of a private company. A private company released the information to its shareholders and the shareholders of Eldorado were the Canadian people.

Two Barges Wallow Helplessly In Sea

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Six men were reported aboard two large barges wallowing helplessly in heavy Atlantic seas today.

Coast guard headquarters said the ocean-going tug Marion Moran, towing the steel barges to Bermuda, radioed that the two craft broken adrift, were bumping each other and in danger of sinking 150 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras, N. C.

The Moran said it was unable to remove the bargemen because of high seas.

The coast guard cutter Campbell, on ocean duty 100 miles west of the scene, was sent to the rescue.

Three men were reported on each of the 210-foot barges.

Four Victims Die In Kingston Rooming House Fire

KINGSTON, Ont. CP—Four persons died Saturday when fire swept a large rooming house. The dead: John Blair, 64, his wife, Anna, 59; William Bowman, 84, and Mrs. Bowman, 82. Two other persons in the house, Margaret Gray, 14, and Cecil Fox, 47, escaped without injury. The owners of the eight-room house, Mr. and Mrs. Berton Gray, were out for the evening. Firemen said the blaze apparently was caused by a small stove in the kitchen at the rear of the house.

Margaret Gray told police she discovered the fire when she went to the kitchen and found a rear bedroom in flames. She said she awakened Mr. Fox but smoke prevented them from warning the other occupants of the house.

Mr. Bowman was a veteran of the Boer and the First World Wars. The couple became widely known when Mrs. Bowman gave birth to quadruplets in 1898. None of the children survived.

The Bowmans are survived by three sons; the Blairs by one son.

Damage was estimated at $15,000.

When firemen arrived they were prevented by smoke and flames from entering the building to rescue the four persons on the second floor.

Police said they are holding two persons in connection with the affair and are looking for another. They did not identify the two persons held.

the Honorable Gerald Lascelles. High military officers and state officials marched behind.

Then came men and women from Queen Mary's regiments, including three other officers and 18 men of the Queen's own Rifles, led by Maj. H. C. F. Elliot of Toronto.

A guard of honor awaited the procession outside the great door of Westminister Hall. The coffin was taken from the gun carriage by a bearer party of the Queen's Company, Grenadier Guards, and received by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Great Chamberlain, Works Minister David Eccles and the Black Rod, Sir Brian Horrocks.

AWAITED PROCESSION

The Queen and the other women of the Royal Family had driven directly to the hall and awaited the procession there. After the royal family paid homage and departed, Prime Minister Churchill, followed by Labor Leader Clement Attlee, inaugurated the long line which walked slowly to the bier, bowed or curtsied, then passed on.

At least 100,000 more people were expected to visit the lying-in-state before the hall closes Tuesday.

As final preparations were made for the funeral, speculation developed that Queen Mary has left large fortunes to some of the less affluent members of the Royal Family.

Among those mentioned as probable beneficiaries were the Duke of Windsor, the Duchess of Kent, the Princess Royal and her sons, and Princess Margaret.

Local Swimmers To Appear On TV

Mrs. Pansy Forbes' Peterborough Ornamental Swimming Club will likely make their debut on Canadian television Wednesday night.

Cameras from Toronto CBL-TV were trained on the synchronized swimmers and Gus Ryder's crippled children from New Toronto as they went through their paces Saturday in Toronto.

The Peterborough girls joined with Ryder's swimmers in their annual display. The crippled children, trained by Mr. Ryder, demonstrated swimming despite their handicaps and also competed in several speed events.

The ornamental swimmers presented Parade of the Tin Soldiers, Camptown Races, Animal Circus, Jumping Jacks, Stardust and Life Gets Tedious. Thirty-eight girls from the senior and junior clubs took part.

The TV cameras took different shots through the show and the results may be seen Wednesday during Dave Price's sports show.

This is not the first time the Peterborough club has been televised. Several times during the past three years the girls have been filmed for American television and newsreel companies.

The Chinese premier, No. 2 man in the Asian Communist hierarchy, is the one usually selected to make important announcements.

He had just returned to Peiping from a trip to Moscow where he attended the funeral of Stalin and signed new, important economic agreements with Russia.

KEEPS SOME STING

In his statement tonight, Chou said:

"It is only because the termination of the bloody war in Korea and the peaceful settlement of the Korean question is bound up with the question of the peace and security of the people of the Far East and of the world that we take this new step. . ."

He kept some sting in his words—although not as much as the usual Red invective—as he referred to "those captured personnel of our side who, under the intimidation and oppression of the opposite side, are filled with apprehensions and are afraid to return home."

He obviously referred to the approximate 51,000 Chinese and North Koreans held in UN prisoner of war camps who have shown no desire to go home. The UN holds a total of about 132,000 PoWs and civilian internees.

REVIEWS NEGOTIATIONS

Chou preceded his proposal with a lengthy review of the armistice negotiations which started in July, 1951, and finally broke up last Oct. 8.

He said the time is ripe for settling the PoW question and ending the fighting in Korea.

The broadcast quoted Chou as saying:

"A reasonable settlement of the question of exchanging sick and injured (wounded) prisoners of war clearly has a very significant bearing upon the smooth settlement of the entire question of prisoners of war."

Chou said "It is, therefore, our view that the time should be considered ripe for settling the entire question of prisoners of war in order to ensure the cessation of hostilities in Korea and to conclude the armistice agreement."

The Peiping broadcast of Chou's remarks amounted to a restatement of Saturday's mild, courteous acceptance of the Feb. 22 UN proposal.

The matter of sincerity was met with a "wait and see" attitude here, in Washington, London and other world capitals, stung before by apparently genuine Red offers of peace.

At New Delhi, home of the Indian government that has often tried the role of east-west peacemaker, officials said privately:

"We must wait and see. The world has been disappointed too often already."

In Washington, the state department made it clear it believes the prisoners can be exchanged without formally reopening the truce talks. A spokesman said it is too early to comment on going back to the armistice tent at Panmunjom.

The best military opinion here is that necessary talks for PoW exchange would be a "working level" arrangement and not by any means a resumption of the truce talks.

Such talks would be in the hands of lower-ranking Red and UN officers. They could be started in minutes, once the go-head is given.

That okay had to come from Washington.

Exiled By Reds, Bulgarian Looks To Canada

By HARRY WHYTE

ISTANBUL (Reuters) — Naniu Nanev, a 34-year-old Bulgarian peasant, in exile in Turkey after fleeing his Communist-dominated homeland a few months ago, knows only a few words of English but he speaks them as proudly as if they had magic in them.

And for him they do have a kind of "magic," since they will help take him to Canada and a new life.

Nanev is typical of a small group of exiles from Soviet satellite countries who are waiting in Turkey for resettlement in countries which want immigrants. While here, they are cared for by the joint efforts of the President's Escape Program, administered by the United States state department, the World Council of Churches and the International Refugee Committee.

Much of the money and effort devoted to their care comes from the United States, but Canada, Australia and Brazil are the countries to which most of the group—at present there are 285 of them—are likely to go.

VINEYARD WORKER

Nanev hopes that in Canada he will be able to work in a vineyard, for he is an expert in grape-growing. But he is willing to do any kind of farm work.

Finding a job in a country which is willing to take immigrants is part of the work undertaken by the joint efforts of the organizations which are caring for them. Getting a visa for that country usually takes a long time and meanwhile, many of the exiles are at work on a farm on the Asiatic shore of the Bosphorus, opposite Istanbul.

But one group of 10 young men live in a hostel at Bebek, an Istanbul suburb, on the European shore, as students.

AWAIT FREEDOM

They, too, are waiting for the day when their native land, Bulgaria, will be free.

Two of them, 24-year-old Ignat Kalchev and his friend, 23-year-old Koyu Nikolov, spent three years in prison for organizing an opposition group among fellow students.

When freed in March last year, they began a three-day trek to the frontier.

Most of the exiles had been in the habit of listening to foreign radio programs.

"Listening to the Voice of America or the British Broadcasting Corporation or the Paris radio is not forbidden," Nanev said. But he said there is a great deal of jamming in attempts to prevent listening to foreign radio programs. "Everyone listens, including the Communists!" Ignat said. "They listen perhaps even more than we do!"

Prices Still Weak On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO (CP) — Prices continued weak in early afternoon stock market trading today.

Industrials led while base metals and western oils followed closely. Golds held firm with a small gain. Volume for the first three hours totalled 2,908,000 shares.

Uraniums held firm on gains in minor issues. New Brunswick base metals were mixed and Northern Ontario rare metals rose.

Industrials weakened on losses in steels, textiles, liquors, banks and papers.

Senior golds attracted little interest but junior producers showed a number of good gains.

Higher-priced base metals weakened slightly. Low-priced issues were firm.

Leading western oils slipped.

Shells Explode, Rock Village

LEWIS, Ind. AP—Exploding artillery shells from three ammunition cars on a derailed and burning freight train rained fire on this village for five hours Saturday night. More than a dozen buildings burned, and scarcely one was left undamaged. Only two persons are in hospital. Thirteen others were treated for cuts and bruises. Gutted freight cars lay in a twisted mass around a crater 60 feet wide and 30 feet deep. A 10-man demolition squad was sent here to remove the warheads from several hundred unexploded shells scattered about the scene. Observers kept well away from the shells.

The survival of the 300 residents of the village in the face of such devastation appeared to be due to two factors.

DISASTER HEADQUARTERS

The blast occurred a quarter of a mile from the town itself, and most of the people were gathered at the Masonic Building on the far side of the town for an Eastern Star installation. The Masonic Building, its broken windows boarded up, quickly became disaster headquarters.

The Red Cross listed nine houses and four barns as destroyed and 54 homes damaged. It said 84 families were affected. Two buildings in the small business section were destroyed.

It was impossible to count the number of freight cars in the burned wreckage, but the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad reported 24 cars were unaccounted for.

$35,132,536 Earnings For CPR In February

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Pacific Railway today reported gross earnings of $35,132,536 for February, compared with $35,325,097 for the same period last year. This represents a decrease of $192,561. Net earnings were $916,837 against $1,374,274, a decrease of $457,437 from February, 1951.

Working expenses stood at $34,215,699, an increase of $264,876 over the preceding year's figure of $33,950,823.

Many Clocks

HAMILTON (CP)—John Drysdale has collected 70 clocks in the last 15 years and keeps them all operating. They include a 150-year-old wall clock, another that gives the date and the moon phases, and one that runs for 30 days. He uses an ordinary alarm clock to wake up each day.

Historic Mill

ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, N.S. (CP)—A meeting of the historical association here heard a request for marking the site of the first grain mill in North America. Arthur Kelsall, president, said the mill established at L'Equille in 1606 also marked the first mechanized industry on this continent.

Biologist Backs Up Boasts About Size Of Angler's Fish

MONTREAL (CP)—Those little exaggerations about the size of the fish you caught may be technically true. The authority for your veracity is none other than the biologist-in-chief of the Quebec biological bureau, University of Montreal.

He is Vianney Legendre, who doubles as professor of ichthyology at the university. His handbook, "A Key to Game and Commercial Fishes of the Province of Quebec" devotes more than seven pages to methods of determining the length of a fish.

You have your choice of four methods; also a few subsidiary tricks.

1. Standard length—for professional biologists and self-deprecating anglers: Measure from the foremost tip of the snout to the flexure line—the point at which the fish wags or wiggles his tail.

2. Body length—for the merely modest: From snout to end of lateral line or scales. With a big fish, this may extend a full inch beyond the flexure line.

3. Fork length—for the fellow who is modest by nature but still doesn't want to verdo even a virtue: Snout to tailfin fork. This is the measurement biologists prefer to receive from anglers who write to them.

4. Total length—for those who want to make the most of everything—most anglers do—and who argue, not without reason, that tail lobes are a natural part of the fish, not something artificially added: Measure from snout to tip of tailfin. If one lobe is longer than the other, take the longer by all means.

In estimating approximate standard length from total length, biologists are inclined to make allowance for the angler's well-known generosity.

Now for the extra tricks. You're within your just rights, and can gain a notch or two, by stretching your fish out to the natural length or position it had in life, instead of letting it become droopy on a board or table.

If your fish has one jaw longer than the other, measure from the longer jaw. If one tailfin lobe is not quite the equal of the other, move both lobes together so their tips meet and you'll gain a little something.

Mr. Legendre didn't mention such stunts as trick photography to make the fish look bigger, spreading arms to demonstrate the size of the one that got away, or applying a centimetre scale and calling it inches.

London Considers Plan To Relieve Mounting Traffic Problem

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON

LONDON (CP)—A far-reaching scheme to relieve London's mounting traffic problem and provide protection for the civilian population against atomic attack in event of another war, is under consideration by the Churchill government.

The plan, drawn up by a special committee appointed by the former Socialist administration in 1951, has been submitted to the ministry of transport for action.

It calls for construction of a network of deep, underground car-parking centres and multi-storey surface garages at strategic points in the city, involving an initial outlay of some £12,000,000. Other measures are also proposed to cope with the growing snarl of traffic on the capital's winding, narrow streets.

Under the chairmanship of A. Samuels, head of the London and Home Counties Traffic Advisory Board, the committee recommends the developments be financed and built by the government and then leased to local authorities or private operators.

4 PARKING LOTS

Discussing details of the proposed program, the report suggests a start should be made on four parking lots, one under Grosvenor square, embracing the busy American community. The others would be at Berkeley square, Cavendish square and St. James's square, in the exclusive Clubland district.

The scheme would gradually be extended to provide underground parks in the Soho square-Piccadilly area, Leicester square, Lincoln's Inn Fields, Finsbury square and Fortman square. Surface garages would also be put up in 11 central areas, providing accommodation for about 10,800 cars.

The plan, if approved, will ultimately be extended to other areas. And while the committee says its investigations have primarily centred on finding a solution for London's traffic difficulties, it suggests that the underground project will prove adaptable as air-raid shelters "in time of need."

200,000 HOMELESS

It another war comes it is estimated that more than 200,000 persons might be made homeless by a single atom bomb. These favoring deep shelters argue that casualties would be greatly reduced if they were constructed to supplement the city's existing underground transportation system. This they say was underscored by experiences even with improvised shelters in the atom bombing of Nagasaki and Hiroshima in the last wear.

Police Identify 500 Africans In Murder Drive

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters) — Hundreds of police raided the nearby Bahati African location before dawn Sunday and started screening about 15,000 Africans.

Police said later more than 500 Africans were identified as criminals wanted for murder, arson and administering the anti-white Mau Mau oath.

Another 700 were detained because they were absent from their reserves without passes.

The entire Bahati area was sealed off for seven hours. Those arrested were later taken to a special detention camp, singing and shouting defiantly.

Troops hunting the Mau Mau gang which attacked Naivasha police station Thursday night and made off with sub-machine-guns and other arms Sunday ambushed some of the gang, killing one who was found clasping one of the stolen machine-guns. A rifle and more than 100 rounds of ammunition also were found.

MOUNTIE LEADS DRIVE

Two other terrorists were killed Saturday when they attacked an army patrol in the Nyeri district.

A former Canadian mountie is one of the men leading the drive to catch the terrorists responsible for the massacre of scores of Kikuyu natives in the last few days.

John Timmerman, a native of Canada, is assistant police commissioner helping direct the hunt for the anti-white terrorists. He was formerly an RCMP corporal.

Child Falls Out Of Moving Car

Four-year-old Brenda Phillips is in St. Joseph's Hospital with head injuries received Sunday when she opened the rear door of her father's car and fell out onto the highway.

She received a deep cut in her scalp that required 20 stitches to close and severe brush burns on one hip as well as other cuts and bruises. Her mother, Mrs. William A. Phillips of 509 Wolsley St., expects that Brenda will be hospitalized for another four days.

The Phillips were driving to Hastings village for Sunday dinner and Brenda was playing in the back seat with her sister, five-year-old Dianne. Both little girls were looking at the houses and chattering excitedly as Mr. Phillips drove along Highway 7 toward Norwood.

Finally, Brenda said: "I guess I'll get out and walk."

She turned the door handle and toppled out onto the highway as the car was travelling about 25 miles an hour.

Though badly dazed she was able to get to her feet and was walking when her parents went back to her. A passing motorist, Floyd Dunford, rushed the injured girl to St. Joseph's.

No Settlement In Sight At Factory

WALLACEBURG (CP) — No settlement is in sight in the strike of more than 100 workers at the plant of National Pressure Cooker of Canada Limited.

The workers struck March 23 for a new contract providing for increased wages and other concessions. Six months of negotiation between Local 521 of the United Automobile Workers (CIO-C C L) and the company which manufactures pressure cookers and steam irons had ended in deadlock.

The union set up picket lines on a 24-hour basis around the plant in the west end of this town 18 miles northwest of Chatham. It let only boiler tenders and watchmen enter. The strike scene has been quiet.

ACTION POSTPONED

The original strike vote in the dispute was taken several weeks ago. However, strike action was postponed when negotiations which started last September were resumed. The talks finally broke down.

The union seeks, in addition to higher wages, a contract which will provide for relief periods in the foundry, union security and a form of hospital insurance.

Renewed talks between union and company last Thursday ended in stalemate. No further meetings were held during the weekend.

Motorcycle Fans See Belgian Grand Prix

COBOURG— (ENS) — Motorcycle fans of Cobourg and district attended a showing Sunday of the exciting film entitled "Twistgrip." Loaned by a Toronto dealer, the film was shown by the Northumberland and Durham Motorcycle Club. The club plans its annual meeting soon to organize for the summer activities. The film showed the famous Tourist Trophy race at the Isle of Mann. The breath taking scrambles and the sidecar races of the Belgian Grand Prix comprised three thrilling reels that kept the audience on edge.

Toronto Man Honorary Pallbearer

LONDON (CP) — Lt.-Col. J. N. Gordon of Toronto, honorary pallbearer at Sunday services for Queen Mary, went to Windsor today to prepare for a similar role at Tuesday's burial service.

Col. Gordon, who flew from Canada Saturday to march in the procession from Marlborough House to Westminster Hall, where the Queen's coffin will lie in state until midnight tonight, had not expected to participate in the Windsor ceremony.

Sunday, as commanding officer of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, reserve army, Col. Gordon marched beside the gun carriage bearing the coffin. The Canadian officer, one of six pall-bearers was the first of three marching on the left side of the gun carriage.

ALSO IN PROCESSION

Also in Sunday's procession were three officers and 18 men of the Queen's Own Rifles from Hannover, Germany. The Canadian group, headed by Maj. H. C. F. Elliot of Toronto and Renfrew, Ont., arrived in London Saturday and spent the entire afternoon rehearsing their parts.

They wore green berets, black puttees and khaki battledress under greatcoats of the same material. They were the only Commonwealth troops outside the United Kingdom to participate in the ceremony, being invited as representatives of a regiment of which Queen Mary was colonel-in-chief.

2 Killers Electrocuted

BELLEFONTE, Pa. (AP)—Dominick Daverse and Joseph Stevenson Phillips, two convicted killers, were electrocuted in state prison today. Daverse, 40, shot his wife as she stepped off a bus. Phillips, 23, killed a night watchman in an attempted robbery.

Second Paper Urges Royalty To Bury Past

LONDON (AP) — A second London newspaper, the Liberal News Chronicle, today urges the Royal Family to "bury the past" and invite the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to the Coronation June 2.

But a spokesman for Buckingham Palace, the Queen's official residence, curtly denied press reports that court circles presently are considering such an invitation to the Duke and his American-born wife.

"It's all a lie, a big flat lie," the spokesman said tartly "I shouldn't even entertain such rubbish."

The News Chronicle, in a front-page editorial, suggests that times have changed since Windsor abdicated the throne Dec. 11, 1936, to marry the "woman I love"—American-born Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

WOULD WELCOME DUCHESS

"We believe that the British people today would welcome the Duchess alongside her husband," the newspaper declares.

It describes the Duke as a devoted patriot who had suffered much at the death of his mother, Queen Mary, last week and adds "he has much to give" in the way of further service to his country.

"It would be very happy it the Coronation could be made the occasion of bringing him and his wife home again. It would also be a national reconciliation, an amnesty for those of us who felt it was right to support him all those long years ago."

The News Chronicle adds "a statement in the Sunday press that court circles are reconsidering hard whether the Duke of Windsor should be asked to his niece's Coronation prompts us to hope it will be so."

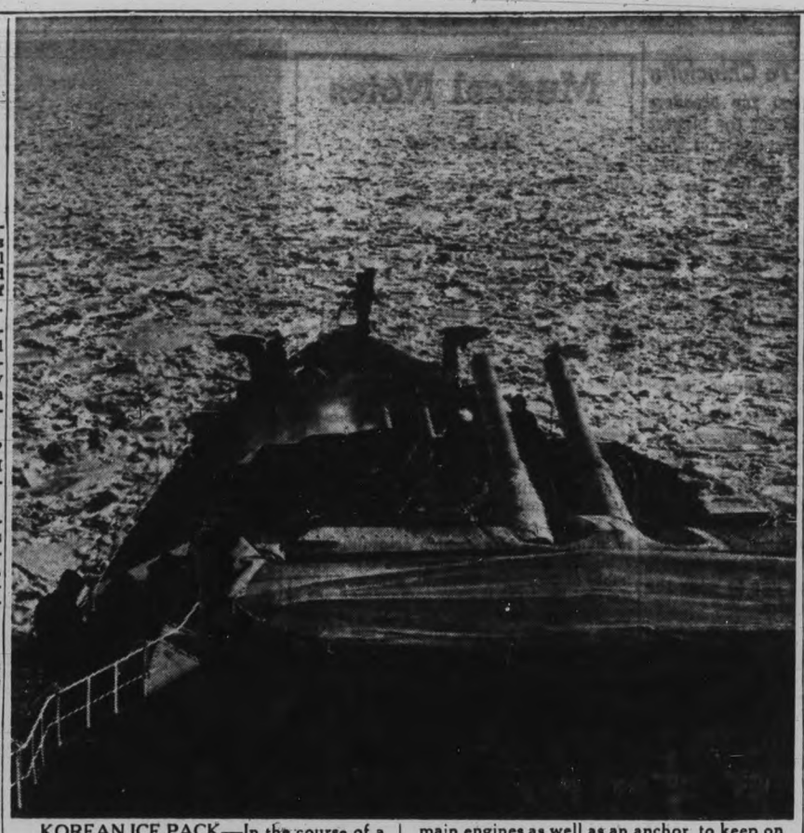
BITTER CONTROVERSY

Last Thursday, Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express said Queen Mary's death is the cue for the self-exiled Duke of Windsor to come home, presumably bringing the Duchess with him.

The suggestion touched off a bitter editorial controversy. The independent tabloid Sunday Pictorial said Sunday "the blunt truth is that in this country there is no further opportunity in public life for the Duke. He must stick to the choice he made 16 years ago. . .."

The Conservative Sunday Graphic deplored what it called "ignorant speculation" and "loose tongues" about the Duke and said he should be left alone "to live his own life."

Starling Colony Receives Recruits



COBOURG (ENS)—The winter colony of starlings, many of which had quarters over the outside balcony of the town hall, has been joined by starlings which had wintered out of town and a good-sized community of the birds is readying for their annual housekeeping duties from which will emerge a brand new army of young starlings. When warm weather comes they will head out to the country to feed and by night will be in their summer roosting haunts on Chapel street and other starling-infested streets of the town. J. D. Finlayson, sanitary inspector of the Health Unit, tried feeding drug-laden grain to the starlings some weeks ago but the only casualty was one sparrow. Apparently the starlings were too smart. The town has tried everything from shotguns to artificial fog attack but without any effective result.

Women Drinkers Hard To Reform

TORONTO (CP).—"I came into the AA for the sake of sobriety, but through AA I have found God," said a portly businessman Sunday, guest speaker at the fifth regional conference of Alcoholics Anonymous.

The Alcoholics Anonymous is a nonprofit organization, and its members range from clerks to corporation presidents and professional men. According to the executive of the AA, 90 per cent of its members would vote against probhibition if it were brought to a vote. For they believe in education, not prohibition.

There was a special discussion Saturday on the feminine drunkard's problem. The solution suggested was no different from the ordinary line of action adopted by the AA. The woman admittedly is harder to "break down," to make her realize she must solve her own problem.

KOREAN ICE PACK—In the course of a recent patrol, HMCS Athabaskan spent 48 hours in an ice pack off Korea's west coast. The ice was heavy enough to make it necessary for the Canadian destroyer to use her main engines as well as an anchor to keep on station. The above photo, taken from the bridge, shows the ice pack as it closed in on the Athabaskan while the ship was taking up her station off a friendly island.

U.S. Paper Gives Canada Boost

NEW YORK (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent links Canada's progress with world peace and prosperity in a message today published by the New York Herald Tribune.

Ten pages of today's edition of the paper are devoted to Canadian commerce and business. The paper also relates Canada's position in world trade, tells again of the recent tax cuts and details its St. Lawrence seaway plans.

"Our southern neighbors can be sure that as we in Canada push back our economic frontiers we have in mind not only our own common welfare and that of future generations of Canadians, but also, in co-operation with other free peoples, the peace and prosperity of the world," the prime minister said in his message.

Trail Rangers Ask For Part In Parade

The monthly meeting of the Peterborough Trail Rangers' Mentors' Association took place on Saturday evening in St. James' Church. Chief Mentor L. J. Edwards presided.

It was proposed that the coronation committee of the city be approached for permission for the various Trail Ranger groups to take part in the coronation festivities on June 2.

A contest is to be held for designing a Trail Ranger flag for city-wide use. Boys from any Trail Ranger group in any city church are invited to submit a design to their own Chief Mentor who will in turn submit them to the judging committee. Ann entries are to be handed in before April 15.

It was decided that meetings of the Mentors' Association will be held on the second Saturday of each month at 7 p.m.

After a discussion on several problems in Trail Ranger work, the meeting was adjourned.

Seaway Hearing Opens April 14

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hearings on the St. Lawrence seaway project will open before the Senate foreign relations committee April 14, chairman Alexander Wiley (Rep.-Wis.) announced Saturday.

Wiley is author of one of several Senate bills which will be considered. All would authorize U. S. participation with Canada in developing a seaway connecting the Great Lakes and the Atlantic ocean through the St. Lawrence river.

For many years Congress has beaten numerous attempts to begin this project. Now Canada is planning to build the seaway alone.

Wiley had planned an earlier start on the public hearings, but he said spokesmen for the Eisenhower administration fixed April 14 as the "earliest convenient date that interested executive agencies will be ready to present their testimony."

Trio Killed In Battle Said Americans

RANGOON (CP)—Three white men found among the dead after a battle between Burmese troops and Chinese Nationalist guerrillas are believed to be Americans, it was disclosed today.

Photographs of the three-identified only as Heine Spellmeier, Saver and Lothar, were flown Sunday night to the war office here from East Burma.

The war office said the photographs "prove conclusively that the men are white and they are probably American."

Some 12,000 Chinese Nationalists have been foraging in Burma since Chiang Kai-shek's forces were overthrown by the Communists. Burma last week protested in the United Nations against the presence of the Chinese on Burmese soil.

WON'T ACCEPT AID

During the week-end Burma notified the U. S. that from June 30 it will not accept any more American aid.

A government source said this action was taken to release Burma from any moral obligations in pressing its charges in the UN. The source said Burmese ministers believe the U. S. is interested in the activities of the Nationalists in Burma. But Washington has denied all responsibility for the situation.

The war office said today the photographs indicate that the three men were instructors with the Chinese guerrilla forces.

To The Shopping Public:

Re Wednesday Afternoon Closing

At a retail meeting held last fall it was moved by one leading retailer that, for the benefit of store employees local stores should close 50 Wednesday afternoons in the year. Previous custom was that during the week of a public holiday there would be no half-day closing.

This motion was carried and it was decided that all stores would honor this agreement voluntarily until the present by-law was amended.

Last week one classification of stores decided to remain open this Wednesday. Since this nullified the agreement other classifications were surveyed in an effort to establish a policy for the benefit of the public.

It was the hope of this office that the public could be advised what groups of stores would be closed this Wednesday afternoon. Unfortunately as yet no clear picture can be obtained.

We suggest that shoppers contact their stores direct or watch the individual store advertisement for guidance on this matter.

To Beautify Peterborough

It is appropriate that the approach of Spring should turn our thoughts to matters of improvement and beautification, not only of our homes but of the city in which we live. In the past two days two citizens have made suggestions for the improvement of Peterborough's appearance which we are happy to pass on, for consideration and discussion.

* * *

One gentleman had been thinking about George Street which was not, he suggested, a thoroughfare of much individuality; his idea was that if the face of each building were to be painted a bright, light colour—not, of course, all the same colour—the street would achieve a gaiety of appearance which would make it unique among the main streets of Ontario cities. We think that this suggestion has great merit; it would not involve heavy cost for individual merchants, and if the advice of an architect and an artist were asked before the work was undertaken it could produce a remarkable transformation, particularly in winter. The gentleman who made this suggestion was not, we should say, a painting contractor, but a citizen engaged in one of the professions.

* * *

He added the comment that a similar treatment in the area surrounding the old market square would make it extremely attractive. It is bleak enough now, certainly. It is undesirable that generations of young people should grow up with the idea that bleakness and drabness are the normal condition of a thriving Ontario city.

* * *

The other suggestion, made by another citizen, has our sympathy, and we have mentioned it several times in these columns. It concerns the beautification of the Creek which runs through the downtown area, coming from Jackson's Park. Some years ago an attempt was made by the Junior Chamber of Commerce to clean it out, and from time to time the Board of Works has cleared parts of it, but cleaning it and beautifying it are not the same thing. The part of the Creek which runs beside the new Post Office Building might be made into a small park. The City has sold part of the bank to the bus company, but it is possible that twelve feet or so of the shore could be recovered. Whenever this suggestion is made the argument is always raised that even if the stream were cleared and improved, people whose property lies near it would foul it with refuse. But surely this can be prevented by the police? And do we really believe that Peterborough people defile beauty spots because they know no better?

* * *

Peterborough is often told that it is a pretty city. Nature has been kind to us. But a pretty girl with a dirty face, and sorely in need of the laundry and the dry-cleaner, is not as pretty as a girl who takes some thought for her appearance. Peterborough is a city which makes very little of what Nature has given her. Our pioneer period is over, and the time has come when we have the time and the money for a general sprucing-up. All we need is the inclination.

Now It Is The Turn Of Spinach

We are not sure that there is a perfect balance in nature; we can only point to the fact that if anything is praised extravagantly for a time there will inevitably come a reaction against it. We offer the case of spinach in evidence.

Spinach has been praised as a body-building food, and there are even people who pretend it is palatable. Babies are stoked with it, mushed up so that it looks like something that has been scraped off the bottom of a boat. Husbands are fed it, for their own good. It has been exalted to a great position in the hierarchy of vegetables, to the disadvantage of things which merely taste good, like green peas.

But now two physicians, Drs. J. E. and N. S. Bamji, of London, England, have attacked spinach; they say it contains too much oxalic acid, and is therefore harmful to bones and teeth; it is hard on the kidneys; it prevents a proper absorption of nitrogen. In fact, it is good stuff to avoid.

We cannot repress a smile. We thought that spinach would get its come-uppance some day. Nothing is sacred, and even milk has been attacked by brave dietitians who say that it is about as nourishing as soda pop, but should not be taken to excess. We should like to think that we have heard the last of spinach.

From Fox To Mink To Chinchilla

Next month Canadian fur breeders are meeting in Montreal for the biggest fur show ever held in Canada and with a big question on their lips: Will mink follow fox fur into a decline, leaving chinchillas as the new luxury fur?

As we have already remarked in these columns, the long silver fox fur was highly prized thirty-odd years ago, and Canada, second among world producers of silver foxes, marketed four hundred thousand pelts in a year. Fox farmers made money. Today the industry markets only fifteen thousand pelts a year.

What ran the industry into the ground was, first, a change in fashion. Ladies looked down their noses at long hairs. This change was related to a second detrimental condition. So many silver foxes were bred inexpensively that fox fur ceased to be a luxury. Nearly everybody could afford it. The examplars of high fashion did not like to wear the same fur as everybody else.

Is mink to go the way of the fox? Mink are fecund and hundreds of thousands are being grown on mink ranches. The result is that the price of mink is dropping. Today small mink pieces can be had for $400. At the same time, average incomes are rising. More people than formerly can afford, or think they can afford, mink. Will high fashion, spurning low prices, decree that mink is really rather common and turn to another fur which is so great a luxury that only a few have it—chinchilla fur?

The chinchilla is a herbivorous rodent living in its wild state in burrows in the Andes of South America. It is about ten inches long and has a beautiful pearl grey fur. Chinchillas are now bred in captivity—there are probably 250,000 chinchillas being bred in Canada and the U.S. now. But they are mostly kept for breeding purposes and not for their fur. There are still not enough of them to kill off for fur coats—especially when good breeding pairs are worth many hundreds of dollars. But chinchillas are, like mink, prolific. Moreover, unlike fox and mink which are bred only once a year, the chinchilla is bred twice a year. So it may not be long before $50,000 chinchilla fur coats are on the market, ready to be snatched up by the ladies for whom mink has become too common and too cheap.

We wish the chinchilla well; it will be a pleasure to stand at the one-dollar bargain counter and pick up the discarded, unwanted mink coats. If the fur breeders meeting in Montreal can speed the process and get chinchillas on the market and mink off before next Christmas, our gratitude will be unbounded. But somehow we think that fashionable ladies will continue to prize mink for years to come and their husbands to make heavy investments in the fur.

Senator McCarthy Again

Any faint hope that a seat on the Government side of the U.S. Senate might awaken a sense of responsibility in Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin has been blown away by his continued accusations against members of the State Department. His latest campaign shows he will not hesitate to attack a Presidential nominee, if it will serve his personal purpose. He made this very clear in opposing the appointment of Charles E. Bohlen as Ambassador to Russia.

This was a case in which legitimate ground for opposing the appointment existed, despite Mr. Bohlen's outstanding qualifications for the post. In the first place he was nominated before being checked by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which is now a requirement. This oversight presumably was due to the fact that Mr. Bohlen is a career diplomat and has been with the State Department for more than twenty years. Nevertheless, he had never been checked, and that was valid ground for objection.

More important, Mr. Bohlen took part in the framing of the Potsdam and Yalta agreements, and he defends them. The Eisenhower Administration has modified its attitude toward these two agreements, which was, at one time, very nearly one of repudiation. Its current attitude, however, is at least one of strong disapproval of the agreements, and Mr. Bohlen's suitability could very validly be questioned on that score.

Legitimate and decent reasons for opposition, however, are not for Senator McCarthy. His first ground for objection was a hodge-podge of political rancour and accusation of association with "certain other" State Department employees. His second was not made public but was allowed to "leak"; it was, chiefly, that Bohlen had in the past associated with "dissolute persons". He added that the FBI had refused to clear Bohlen, which was denied by Secretary of State Dulles.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee indicated what it thought of the McCarthy objections by voting 15-0 for Mr. Bohlen. It was an eminently sensible decision, for Mr. Bohlen has few peers as an expert on Russia and Russian affairs. However, the incident appeared to indicate that the Administration had not learned the lesson propounded by the Charles E. Wilson nomination—that all required qualifications for office be complied with before a name is placed in nomination.

Musical Notes

By PETER PIPER

THE PRESENT SEASON of Holy Week and Easter is, as might be expected, unusually rich in musical associations, from the carols of the unlettered peasantry to the elaborate settings of the Passion by Bach and others. These Passions evolved out of the custom of intoning the Gospels in pre-Reformation times. The gospels during Holy Week are all very long, and contain the accounts of the Passion according to the various evangelists. Evidently somebody got the bright idea of heightening the drama of the narrative by getting certain of the officiating clergy to take the parts of the various protagonists: the Narrator, Christ, Pilate, St. Peter, and so on. From then on it was merely a step to varying the simple intonations, and little by little introducing more elaborate music.

I happen to possess an unpublished copy in manuscript of a Passion according to St. John by Alessandro Scarlatti, (1660-1725), father of Domenico Scarlatti, who wrote over 500 "sonatas" for the harpsichord and not to be confused with him. Alessandro is popularly supposed to have invented the da capo aria, for which many succeeding generations of muscians have wished he had never existed!

The Scarlatti Passion might conceivably be regarded by musical historians as a "transitional work" between the simple intonation of the origins of Passion music and the monumental work of J. S. Bach. But it has a charm all of its own, austere and tender at the same time. It is a completely original setting, with no plainsong in it at all, but unlike Bach Scarlatti sticks rigidly to the text of the Gospel. There are no contemplatives arias, and above all no chorales — simply narrative. The Narrator is sung by a male alto — presumably a "musico." It was a convention of those days that the "juvenile lead" of an opera should be sung by a castrato, as is shown in the operas of Handel, Gluck and others. Incidentally this custom arose from the prohibition of the use of women's voices in ecclesiastical choirs. Evidently Scarlatti had in mind the youthful St. John of the gospels rather than the aged exile on Patmos.

FORTUNATELY for humanity the barbaric practice of preserving the voice of promising boy choristers by means of surgery (without anaesthesia) has died out. As might be expected in those days the death rate from the operation was very high. Yet the modern conductor is faced with a very real problem in works such as Scarlatti's Passion or Gluck's Orfeo. We do not know just how the great musici of the past such as Farinelli sang, but we may be quite certain that it was something quite different in quality from a woman's voice. Thus while roles originally sung by castrati may be taken by female soprani and contralti there is inevitably a certain perversion of the composer's original intention.

This difficulty does not arise in the case of the English School of Purcell and his contemporaries, who made use of the counter-tenor or male alto. This type of voice, which is still extant in English cathedrals and many parish churches is produced by singing "falsetto," the speaking voice being a normal bass, baritone or tenor. The tone quality of the male alto is hollow and cadaverous, but blends well with boy trebles; its very impersonal character fits it admirably for the austerity of the English cathedral tradition.

OF ALL the literature connected with the Passion the medieval poem "Stabat Mater" has been set most frequently by composers. Written probably by Jacopone da Todi, this poetic meditation soon attained great popularity, though it was not until 1727 that it found a place in the official Roman Missal. It has also been translated into English and several other languages, and is in several hymn books.

It is interesting to compare the various settings of this hymn. Of the earlier settings the one by Palestrina is the most famous, and justly so, for it is a mountain peak in the polyphonic style. Palestrina uses two SATB choirs, sometimes antiphonally, sometime in pure eight-part counterpoint. In the latter part of the work he obtains some ethereal effects by using the higher voices only of both choirs. Unlike most of his other works, which are full of independent part-writing Palestrina's Stabat Mater is written mainly in block harmony, but rhythmically it is very subtly constructed in order to avoid the monotony that might ensue as a result of the rigid metre of the verse.

ROSSINI'S SETTING of the same hymn is completely different, and though technically competent it shows him up in a poor light. Rossini's genial and pleasure-loving temperament was constitutionally incapable of entering into the spirit of the words. Scored for chorus and orchestra with soloists it is divided up into separate numbers: the section "Cujus Animam" is a classic example of inappropriateness. The tenor soloist sings a jolly and rather obvious type of tune to words describing the agonized feelings of Mary when seeing her beloved Son upon the cross; this facile melody has found its own level as a trombone solo, which suits it a good deal better than its original context.

LAST WEDNESDAY evening I heard the Mendelssohn Choir singing the St. Matthew (the one by J. S. Bach, naturally) on the radio. Always a big event in the musical calendar of Toronto, this year's performance was remarkable for two things. In the first place it was the thirtieth consecutive annual performance of this work in Toronto, under the baton of Sir Ernest Macmillan; moreover the performance itself was being recorded by a Canadian recording company for the first time. Sir Ernest knows this work through and through and he gave us a broad and straightforward reading, untainted by fussy mannerisms.

He could on occasion bring out the drama of the situation, but he steered clear of the temptation to underline everything that Bach wrote. As a consequence the music flowed beautifully and the effect of the "highlights" was enhanced by their relative scarcity. Lois Marshall and Mary Morrison were outstanding soprani; Edward Johnson as Narrator had the longest and most exacting role, and though he showed signs of fatigue towards the end he showed that he had it in him. He is still young and needs a little more experience, but I am sure he will in time be able to give the right note of authority to his interpretation. It is a pity that he missed at one particularly difficult piece of modulation in the recitative; perhaps the recording company may be able to do a bit of adjustment at that point. Taken all in all, it is a wonderful spiritual experience, and we must be duly grateful to the CBC for broadcasting this undoubted masterpiece each Lenten season.

VAN GOGH, SELF-PORTRAIT. Painted 1889 at Saint Remy.

The Strange Genius of Van Gogh

By NIGEL GUSLING

THE "Sunflowers" of Van Gogh, almost as well-known today as Millet's "Gleaners" were to an earlier generation, still stands for many people as a symbol of the "modern movement" in painting. It is hard to believe that today it will be a hundred years since the artist was born. How is it that his art still seems so fresh and contemporary?

Van Gogh, though he painted most of his pictures in France and is often associated with the French artists of his time, was born in Holland and remained temperamentally very much a Northerner. His father was pastor in North Brabant, his mother's family was in the book trade. Two of his uncles and his brother, Theo, who was his confident and supporter throughout his artistic career, worked in art galleries. At the age of sixteen he entered the Goupil Gallery at the Hague in the gallery's branch in London. He became dissatisfied with this work and, partly as a result of an unrequited love for his English landlady's daughter, he became increasingly interested in religion and in social service.

After working for a time as a schoolmaster in England, he returned to Holland with the intention of becoming an Evangelist to preach the Gospel among the poor. But he was unable to master the academic training required by the Dutch Evangelists and went to Belgium to work as a probationary Evangelist among the miners of Le Borinage. There he lived in the greatest poverty, preaching and caring for the sick and old, and also began to renew an early interest in drawing. In his determination to sacrifice all comforts and live among the people as one of themselves, he neglected his appearance and even his health. The evangelical authorities regarded him as too eccentric and refused to confirm his appointment as an official preacher. But he continued in his efforts, suffering great privations, until lack of all resources forced him to return to his parents' home. There he turned more seriously to drawing and again an unhappy love affair contributed to a big change in his life. He became less attached to formal religion and gave up his ideas of preaching. At the age of 28, having quarrelled with his father, he left home again and determined to devote all his energies to drawing and painting and to express through art the deep religious sentiments and feeling for humanity which were still strong in his heart and remained with him throughout his life.

ALTHOUGH he lived in great poverty for most of his life, Van Gogh was far from being an untutored peasant genius, as he is sometimes thought of. He had a wide knowledge of art, but when he began as an artist himself he had little formal tuition and considerable discouragement. To obtain a solid foundation of good drawing, for two years he worked and studied intensively and mostly alone, often from four in the morning to midnight. Frequently he lived only on dry black bread and coffee to save money for models and materials. He worked with tremendous energy and strength of will to master the elements of drawing and to evolve a style which would express his own personal vision of which he never lost sight.

It was not until he felt sure of his draughtsmanship that he began painting. His first pictures, painted in dark, dull colours, were of the miners and peasants around him. Then in 1886 he came to Paris and became intoxicated by the bright colours and daring compositions of the French Impressionists, He shared, too, their amazement at the newly discovered Japanese prints, and began to copy their flat patches of colour and firm, sinuous outlines.

BUT though he admired men like Monet and Seurat, and borrowed from their technical discoveries, he saw that their detached, semi-scientific approach to painting would lead them away from contact with ordinary people. His attitude — emotional, humanistic, searching for the essential nature rather than the fleeting appearance — was the reverse. His extraordinarily bold innovations were only means to express his "message" — compassion for the poor and a mission to express the exciting dignity of the common man and of all common things—"I want (he said) to paint men and women with that something of the eternal which the halo used to symbolise, and which we seek to give by the actual radiance and vibration of our colourings."

He soon tired of Paris life and withdrew to the little Provence town of Arles. Here, intoxicated by the southern sun and light, he painted most of his best-known pictures. But not much more than a year after his arrival he had his first attack of insanity, and soon afterwards he became a patient in the mental hospital of St. Remy. He continued to paint whenever he was able, and in 1890 he left for Auvers-sur-Oise to be in the care of a personal friend, Dr. Gachet. Two months later he shot himself.

IN VAN GOGH'S ten years' working-life he produced an incredible number of pictures, each one of which is immediately recognizable as his. But it is ironical that this intensely individual artist whose burning private vision and integrity carried him across the quicksands of inexperience and vulgarity, yearned for public understanding and even group-activity. He tried at one time to work with Gauguin (who had also rejected social life and was soon to make his reputation in Tahiti), and it was the failure of the attempt which partially precipitated his insanity.

The connoisseur sees in Van Gogh a vital link in the history of painting, the founder both of the Fauve and of the Expressionist movements, new departures which are still not fully explored. But his work makes just as immediate an appeal to the inexperienced. It is the violent simplicity of his vision — plain but brilliant colours, strong outlines, direct approach to the subject — which cuts through to a universal understanding. And behind the pictures themselves we are aware of a temperament very contemporary in its problems — that of an artist torn between the demands of his art and of his relationship to his fellow-men.

But above all this it must never be forgotten that he was a good painter. His fire, sensitivity and humanity would be forgotten if he had not been able to translate them into pigment.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all. Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all; in thine hand is power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name. (I Chron. 29: 11-13.)

Sing unto the Lord, bless his name; shew forth his salvation from day to day . . . Honour and majesty are before him: strength and beauty are in his sanctuary.

Give unto the Lord, O ye kindreds of the people, give unto the Lord glory and strength . . . O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness: fear before him, all the earth. Say among the heathen that the Lord reigneth: the world also shall be established that it shall not be moved. (Ps. 966: 2, 6, 7, 9, 10.)

❖ ❖ ❖

Give ear to my words, O Lord, consider my meditation . . . For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with thee . . . Lead me, O Lord, in thy righteousness because of mine enemies; make they way straight before my face . . . For thou, Lord, wilt bless the righteous; with favour wilt thou compass him as with a shield. (Ps. 5: 1, 4, 8, 12.

❖ ❖ ❖

For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and God-head. (Rom. 1: 20.)

Off To Korea

(Montreal Star)

Quebec is ever proud of the Royal 22nd Regiment, and pride runs specially high as it watches the Regiment's 3rd Battalion off to the Korean war. Two cabinet ministers, Mr. Lapointe and Mr. Claxton, were on hand for the send-off which was as it should be. There is national importance in the fact that the far-spread international commitments entered into by Canada meet such general endorsation in the country as a whole.

In this respect the Royal 22nd Regiment is a symbol of that national unity without which little can be achieved either at home or abroad. The value of symbols lies in the fact that they represent, not an isolated, scattered sentiment, but the agreement and concurrence of the population as a whole in the general policies adopted by the nation. This is so in the case of the Royal 22nd. Its 2nd Battalion won laurels for itself in Korea. The 3rd Battalion now takes its place with every confidence that it will maintain the fine traditions of one of Canada's greatest fighting units.

William Powell Pensioned, Seeks New Fields

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — William Powell goes on a pension at MGM next month, but he shows no yen to end his long and distinguished film career.

The suave actor, who looks much younger than his 60 years, is the first performer to qualify under the MGM pension plan. His 19-year association with the studio ends April 28.

"I am grateful to the studio and particularly to its president, Nicholas Schenck, for the foresight in devising the pension plan," said Powell. "It's not often that an actor can look forward to any form of security."

WON'T STAY HOME

But Powell indicated he has no intention of merely sitting at his Palm Springs home and collecting his hefty pension cheques. After 40 years as an actor, he shows no eagerness to toss in the towel. In fact, his agents are dreaming up a TV series with his longtime sidekick, Myrna Loy. The "Thin Man" may ride again on the TV channels.

Right now Powell is up to his ears in pioneering again. He is appearing in "How to Marry a Millionaire," one of the first two films to be shot in the new, wide-screen cinemascope process.

"So I'm blazing trails again," he commented. "Just 25 years ago, I appeared in the first all-talking picture made on the Paramount lot, 'Interference,' with Clive Brook and Evelyn Brent. But I'll be darned if I'll wait another 25 years to pioneer smellies, or whatever the next new dimension will be."

Invite Actors To Festival

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP)—Canadian actors from eight cities have been invited to take part in the Stratford Shakespearean festival to be staged here this summer, festival officials announced during the week-end.

They will play in support of Alec Guiness, English stage and screen star, and Irene Worth, American-born British actress, in two plays under the direction of Dr. Tyrone Guthrie, director of London's Old Vic Theatre.

Special music for "All's Well That Ends Well," and "Richard III" will be composed by Louis Applebaum of Ottawa, music consultant to the national film board and composer of background music for a number of Hollywood films.

Those invited to appear include Olga Landiak, Col. John Jeffrey, and Eric Atkinson, London, Ont.; Alex Smith, Stratford; William Needles, Kitchener, and Edward K Holmes, Kingston.0

Accountant Wins $19,000 In Sweeps

VANCOUVER (CP)—J.N. King, a Vancouver bank accountant, is $19,000 richer today, capturing a third prize in the Army and Navy sweepstake on the Grand National steeplechase.

His plans include:

A new car for Mrs. King; an increase in the weekly allowance of his son, 17-year-old Norman, and a holiday for the family in Ontario.

Mr. King plans to visit his 89-year-old father at St. Thomas.

Call Guerrillas Opium Army

RANGOON (AP) — "The Opium Army" is what Burmese soldiers call the Chinese Nationalist guerrillas operating inside Burma's mountain borders with Red China.

They use that description because many Burmese—and some western observers—are convinced the estimated 12,000 guerrillas are more interested in profitable opium smuggling than in fighting the Chinese Reds.

Burma accuses Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese Nationalist government on Formosa of supplying and directing the mystery force. Chiang's government says it has no control of the irregulars. The force is said to be equipped with U.S. weapons. The U.S. has denied giving any support to the guerrillas.

PART OF FORCES

The irregular army is part of Chiang's defeated forces that were driven out of Yunnan province by the Chinese Reds in 1948. They are supposed to be poised on the Red frontier to harass the Communists. But Burma charges they instead are marauding the Burmese countryside.

For centuries the remote mountainous border region has been a source of opium. Burmese soldiers who have scouted this area say the guerrillas do a big business in illicit opium.

Sudbury Guild Wins Drama Festival Trophy

SUDBURY (CP)—The Sudbury Little Theatre Guild Saturday won the Northern Ontario Drama festival trophy with its presentation of the one-act play, "Send Her Victorious." Adjudicator Ben Lennick of Toronto awarded the trophy to director Jim Mulligan.

Other entries in the festival were one act of "Ladies in Retirement" and the one-act comedy, "Seven Women" presented by groups from Sault Ste. Marie and Gore Bay.

Last year, the trophy went to Sault Ste. Marie.

Jail 8 Sect Leaders

VIENNA (AP)—Prague radio announced Sunday night a Czechoslovak court has sentenced eight leaders of Jehovah's Witnesses—a religious sect—to prison terms ranging from five to 18 years. They were accused of "spying" for the United States and having "undermined defence abilities of Czechoslovakia." The group was sentenced by a Prague court Saturday.

Junior Gilliam Expected To Stick With Dodgers Manager Dressen Confident

By JACK HAND

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)—The kid who chased Jackie Robinson off second base is a 24-year-old Negro, James (Junior) Gilliam, fresh from the Montreal farm.

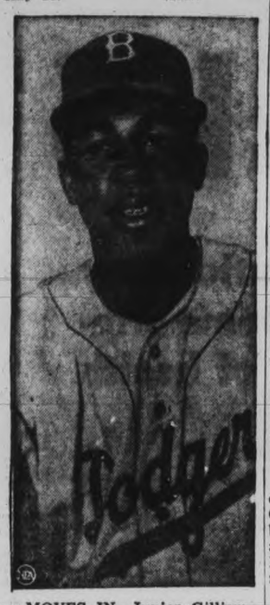
Gilliam still is on the Montreal roster, pending final action by the Brooklyn brass. They want to be sure before they make their move.

Manager Charley Dressen is almost as sure as you can be at this stage of a spring training season.

"If he continues as he has up to now, he's got to play second base," said Dressen. "Hitting is the only question. If he can hit .260, he can help us. He looks like a fine lead-off man."

Robinson, moved out of his regular job by Gilliam, has this to say about the newcomer:

DOES GOOD JOB



"He can get balls that I can't touch anymore. If he hits .275, I think the club will be strongest with him at second base. He is fast. He has a good arm. The only question to me is the double play. He isn't a polished double play man—yet."

Gilliam, a switch hitter, is getting his big chance after only two years of organized ball—both at Montreal. Last year he hit .301 and was named the most valuable player in the International League. He isn't exactly a novice at the game, having played in the Negro leagues since 1945 when he was only 16.

Gilliam was purchased from Baltimore Elite Giants in a 1950 package deal that also included Joe Black, the Dodgers' relief star of 1952. They were roomies together at Montreal while Black was with that club early in the '51 season.

"First time I ever thought I might have a chance to make the majors was after Brooklyn brought up Jackie Robinson," he said. "I figured maybe I might be able to make it by the time I was 25. . . .

"Robinson has been helping me plenty. He watched me make the double play and suggested I try it another way. It worked out better his way."

MOVES IN—Junior Gilliam, the best ball player in the International League last season, moved into second base for the Dodgers.

Barons Split With Syracuse

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons and Syracuse Warriors split in two weekend games but Cleveland still leads their best-of-five semi-final American Hockey League series for the Calder Cup 2-1.

A late goal by Jack Gordon gave the Barons a 2-1 win Saturday night but the Warriors came back Sunday to defeat the Barons 5-3.

In Sunday's tilt the Warriors moved into a 3-0 lead in the first period, but Cleveland took advantage of a penalty in the second session to score twice, and Fred Shero's goal tied it early in the last frame.

Armand Lemieux broke the deadlock at 9:30 of the period and Leo Curick clinched it with his marker at 17:43.

Harry Pidhirny also got a pair of goals for the Warriors, while Ray Ceresino and Ray Glove registered the second-period tallies for the Barons. The fourth game will be played at Syracuse Wednesday.

Goalie Gil Mayer was a standout Saturday night as Pittsburgh Hornets beat Hershey Bears 4-3 to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five semi-finals. The Hornets, defending Calder Cup champions, sewed up the game with first-period goals by Willie Marshall and Johnny McLellan.

Instal Norm Perry President Of CRU

EDMONTON (CP)—Norm Perry of Sarnia, a former mayor of the Ontario city and a one-time football great, was installed Saturday as 1953 president of the Canadian Rugby Union, succeeding Art Chipman of Winnipeg.

Dr. W. A. Campbell, Kingston, was named first vice-president.

Myer Insky, a past president, invited the CRU to holds its 1954 annual meeting in Montreal. The decision was left to the executive.

Tiger-Cats Win Lillico Cup Over Eskimos

After losing the first game, Roy Westropp's Tiger-Cats rallied on Saturday to sweep the next three games from Barney Dundas' Eskimos to win the Ivan P. Lillico volleyball trophy. At the same time, Lloyd Ash's Blue Bombers won the consolation event in three games from Alouettes.

The Tiger-Cats lost the first game 15-9, but came back to win the next three, 15-13, 15-8 and 16-14. In the last game, Eskimos led until the final minutes. Bill Scott and Errol Hanbidge began to spike and tied the game at 14-all. A spike by Westropp put Tiger-Cats up one and then Eskimos missed a serve, giving the nod to Tiger-Cats by two points.

SWEPT TWO

Al Holmes' Alouettes advanced into the consolation finals when they swept two straight, 15-1 and 15-11 from Bill Edger's Stampeders in semi-finals. The Blue Bombers grabbed the first final, 15-10 then Alouettes took the second 15-12 and finally Blue Bombers won that series 15-9 in the third.

Later, at a banquet, Jim Lillico, on behalf of his father, presented Tiger-Cats with the trophy and also with silver spoons. The Blue Bombers received engraved spikes from William McFarlane, boys' work secretary, on behalf of the YWCA.

A review of the history of volleyball at the YMCA was presented by G. H. Roper, former general secretary. Stanley Payne, president of the YMCA board of directors, expressed his good wishes to the volleyball league.

McAvity Re-Elected Tennis President

MONTREAL (CP)—Jim McAvity of Montreal was re-elected president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association at its annual meeting here Saturday.

Main problem facing the association is an indication from Mexico that it will ask that this summer's Davis Cup tie with Canada be played in Mexico. The two warring tennis factions in Mexico—the federation and the association—have amalgamated and have said they may stage Davis Cup play in their own country.

Major portion of financing of the CLTA annually is derived from Davis Cup play. McAvity said that with the peso being approximately one-seventh the value of the Canadian dollar, the CLTA is worried over the amount of revenue which would be received from play in Mexico.

McAvity said he will point this out to Mexican tennis officials but said the Mexicans have the right to stage the tie in their own country.

COF Bowling Tourney Captured By Oshawa

The Canadian Order of Foresters of the district held a highly enjoyable sports and social evening Saturday at Duffus' bowling alleys as hosts of the Peterborough Bowling League. Visitors came from Oshawa, Bowmanville, Pickering, Scarboro and Lindsay.

Oshawa's team, captained by Fred Glover, won the Arn Greene Trophy with 3130 pinnage for three games. Ladies' high triple was taken by Connie Cole of Scarboro with 651, while Fred Glover led men with 835. His 375 single was tops, too, as Connie Cole rolled 245 to show the way in singles for girls. Lasses' low score was 84 by Lillian Young of Peterborough. Low for men was Larry Dewell of Bowmanville, with 103.

The successful event concluded with a luncheon served by Helen Dyer and other local ladies.

Toronto Team Wins Pin Championship

TORONTO (CP)—The Seagram team of Toronto Saturday won the Eastern Canada five-pin bowling championship, scoring a total of 6,015 points in five games.

The Seagram total was 27 pins better than its closest competitor, Toronto's Ace Bowling Centre. Midland finished third.

Seagram will go to Regina April 10 to meet the western winner for the Canadian championship. It will be the first Canadian bowling title match ever held.

Best single was rolled by M. Chorney of Sudbury. He scored 401.

MEN CURLERS WIN TROPHY — Though given stiff competition by the ladies in the Saturday bonspiel here, the men curlers came through to capture the Rev. William McDonald Trophy. It was the first such ladies' vs. men's rinks competition ever staged in Peterborough, and possibly the first such curling event in the province, 28 rinks going in two draws. The winners are shown in the top photo, left to right: Don Smith, Doug Brown, Skip Bert Grant, and Don Moore. Below is one of the better ladies' rinks on the day's play, left to right: Mrs. John Watt, skip, Mrs. L. J. Calvert, Mrs. H. Inman and Mrs. Grant Clark. —(Parks Studio Photos).

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Nick is the fishing authority on this paper but surely he will not object this once if we make mention of the Magic Fisherman. After all, we do a spot of fishing, too. That's how come we answered an ad in a Toronto publication. It said: "Use Magic Fisherman and fish even at night where the big ones hide. It's easy to fish as far as 100 feet from shore, no boat, no reel, no special bait necessary. Magic Fisherman does all the work. Use any bait. Easy to use. It's noiseless. You have complete control of line at all times. Magic Fisherman goes where you want it, in weeds, bull-rushes, under trees. No fuss, no bother, no tangles. Introductory offer $1.00. Instructions go with it, and also a valuable 84-foot Cutty Hunk type line and float."

* * * * * *

Golly, what could one lose? The ad showed an enticing picture of a guy with a string of nine bass. Of course, the Magic Fisherman was to catch other kinds of finny prizes, too. A brisk shake of the kid's piggy-bank, a stamp purloined from the office—and we were away and running. No time to lose. All we hoped was that not many others noticed the advertisement. Didn't want Loon or Jack's Lakes fished out completely this summer. Between lacrosse and ball games, we'd hit north and put the Magic Fisherman to work whilst loafing lazily on the bank. Have enough fish put away maybe to put us through another Lent. Have to check on a year's frozen locker rental.

* * * * * *

Want To Buy A Bargain?

Well, sir—and you, madam—the package came back today. And darned if we know just what to make of it. A dandy strong line and bright colored float were okay. But the Magic Fisherman appears to be a long hunk of elastic to be weighted by a rock or railway spike at one end and with the other end tied to the fish line. Instructions are quite complete and one gathers that the rock is hurled to an appropriate spot and a little play will wiggle the weighted elastic end with bait and hook under o'er-hanging rocks or into ordinarily inaccessible holes where the big ones lurk. We may try it out or we may let it go at a reasonable figure to some other avid fishermen. Don't know yet. But the kid has been hollering lately for his buck.

For the first time in local mat circles, six heavyweights will meet in the main bout Wednesday e'en in he Brock Arena. Six big guys and two referees will require a reinforced ring. With Yukon Eric out due to a sprained ankle, the good team will consist of Timothy Geohagen, Pat Flanagan and Larry Moquin, opposing the villainous trio of Red Mask, Man Mountain Dean and Firpo Szybsko. Best of three falls with an hour time limit. Another main bout, also—there being no prelims in this unusual pro grappling program—has Earl McCready tackling Jan Gotch in a one-hour scrap, two of three falls. Sounds like some terrific action for city and district wrestling followers.

Some Back-Fence Gossip

A senior lacrosse item from Orillia: "Biggest news from the lacrosse front has been that Orillia West Yorkers have signed Bobbie Dobbie, top scorer with Fergus Thistles in 1952. A young, fash player with a terrific shot, Dobbie is expected to fit in well with the Yorks' style of play, which features a fast-breaking attack. Dobbie was signed to replace Dick Ferri, who returns to Brampton. As Mann Cup champions, Peterborough Timbermen start 1953 as favorites, but keen competition is expected from West Yorks, Mimico and the up-and-coming St. Catharines Athletics. Hamilton and Brampton may depend on young teams. Besides Favelle, the Tigers lost Merv McKenzie and George Masters to West Yorks, and Blain McDonald says he will not be playing this year. Yorks open the season May 9 and start drills the middle of April. OLA annual meeting is April 18.

* * * * * *

Howie Dalton has been chosen to coach the junior Petes in the Lakeshore Baseball League this season, and the veteran ace is an ideal man for the job. Shockey Mein is the capable manager. Loop prexy Roy Dodge of Cobourg says the circuit will take in nine teams. Two are from Oshawa, one being a junior squad and the Transporters being either senior "B" or intermediate "A", depending on what the OBA rules. Other clubs are Whitby, Bowmanville, Cobourg, Colborne, Port Hope and Lindsay. They'll run a 32-game schedule, giving each club nine home tussles ere playoffs. Peterborough will stick to junior players and go into OBA playdowns later. Locals expect to play some floodlight frays and some Saturday afternoon contests this summer at Riverside.

Hear St. Louis May Quit League

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The Globe-Democrat said Saturday that "unless some action is taken before the next season opens," St. Louis Flyers of the American Hockey League may move out of St. Louis or drop into a league of lower classification.

The newspaper also reported there is "a definite possibility" the American Hockey League may break up soon.

"Cincinnati and Indianapolis dropped out this season," the newspaper said. "The far-flung league has heavy travel expenses and there has been heavy friction this year over many matters."

"Three things stand out in the decline of the Flyers from the year they were champions in the 1948-49 season and drew 331,381 to the present time when they finished sixth in a seven-club league and attracted an all-time low of 132,298," the Globe-Democrat said.

"The first is absentee ownership. The second is the tie-up with major teams, with the farm-club Flyers coming out on the short end in quality of players received. The third is inept front-office management."

Arthur Wirtz of Chicago and Jim Norris of Detroit own the controlling interest in the Flyers and the arena here.

Wallaceburg Takes Final Over Havelock

WALLACEBURG (Special). — Defeating Havelock 8-2 here Saturday, Wallaceburg captured the Ontario Minor Hockey Association juvenile "B" crown here before a good-sized crowd. The westerners had taken a 7-5 victory over Havelock in the first of the home-and-home finals a week before in Peterborough by virtue of a strong finish, and thus won the round by a 15-7 count. The visitors here Saturday were tired from their long trip but made it a keen battle most of the way before Wallaceburg spurted toward the finish to roll up the tally. Teams:

Havelock: Goal, Stackhouse; defence, Kerry and Drummond; centre, Laing; wings, Pollock and Newman; alternates, Paranuik, Chase, Ruttan, McMillan, Logan, Patterson, Crowley and Hickey.

Wallaceburg: Goal, MacKenzie; defence, Laing and Wasser; centre, Marshall; wings, Babcock and Freeman; alternates, Mann, Pratt, Rupert, Maynard, Finnegan, Emery, Mickle and Butterman.

Bert Grant's Rink Wins Rev. McDonald Trophy In Unique Curling 'Spiel

By Herb Martin

In presenting his trophy to Bert Grant's rink, the Rev. Wm. McDonald said:—"when the bonspiel committee gave me the green light to go on with this unique bonspiel, I expressed the hope that if Mr. Doughty's rink should be drawn against her husband's rink, she would trim him. And, ladies and gentlemen, that's just what she did. To-day's bonspiel has proven what I have contended for a long time, that, given an even break, the ladies are just as good at curling as the men. I want to thank you for your wonderful co-operation; you all did a splendid job, and we will make this an annual event. Your attendance here warrants that it should be so. Over my many, many years of curling I want to say that this has been the happiest of them all.—Thank you!"

VERY IMPRESSIVE

It has been the writer's privilege to attend many bonspiels and to listen to many of the speeches made during the presentation of the prizes, but he can't recall ever listening to one that had so much feeling in it as the one given by the Rev. Mr. McDonald. The applause from the curlers was tremendous and then when, by request, the reverend gentleman sang "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" that was the signal all were waiting for. Then they did really applaud.

As for the bonspiel, it was a real one and the ladies did well. It has made curling history, and no doubt that when next season rolls around it may be that this will develop into more than a one-day bonspiel.

Up at Welland, on Friday, in the banana belt bonspiel, M. Knox, Dr. D. Clark, Dr. L. Calvert and R. Bews won the General Tire Trophy. It was the third event in the bonspiel.

DO YOU OWN A CAR?

When the man who developed Bardahl Rad Conditioner brought his car to a garage for repairs, the garage owner phoned to ask him what on earth had he put in his radiator. He said that when they drained his radiator the water was so thick with dirt it would hardly pour. The Bardahl Rad Conditioner had removed rust, scale and dirt untouched by a popular brand chemical cleaner. The garage owner immediately placed an order for their own use. Since then hundreds of thousands of car owners in Canada and the United States have used Bardahl Rad Conditioner. If you own a car you should try it too . . . If your car is new it will keep your radiator in permanently new condition . . . If you have been running your car for a few years you'll be amazed at the dirt, rust and scale it will remove. Bardahl Rad Conditioner keeps radiators clean . . . eliminates rust formation which can insulate a motor, causing harmful overheating . . . and it also lubricates and stops squeaky water pumps. Bardahl Rad Conditioner costs only 89c. Ask for it at your Service Station.

Killer Bruins Grab NHL Lead, Defeat Wings 2-1

By ED SIMON Canadian Press Staff Writer

The remarkable Boston Bruins have the hockey spotlight all to themselves today.

Lynn Patrick's hard-trying third placers, barbecued with dismal regularity all season by the formidable Detroit Red Wings, confounded the experts Sunday by whipping the National Hockey League champions 2-1 in overtime to lead by a similar margin in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final.

It was underdogs' night as Chicago Black Hawks defeated Montreal Canadiens 2-1, also in overtime, for their first victory in three tries in the other semi-final bracket.

But the big share of the glory belonged to Patrick and his crew.

McINTYRE STARS

The climax was provided by Jack McIntyre, a 22-year-old left-winger, who hadn't scored a goal in his last 20 games. The converted defenceman from Brussels, Ont., snared Dave Creighton's pass and picked the corner of the Detroit net at 12:29 in the overtime period to break up the game.

The happy youngster shared the credit with the club's nucleus of veterans, and with coach Patrick himself, who stuck to his defensive strategy even after the Wings murdered him 7-0 in the series opener and now is watching it pay off.

Against the high-scoring Detroit trio of Gordie Howe, Ted Lindsay and Marty Pavelich, the Boston coach sent out three of the oldest men on his club with instructions to stick with them every time they hit the ice.

PERFECT JOB

Opposite the brilliant Howe was 36-year-old Woody Dumart, a 200-goal man himself, who did a perfect job of shadowing the Detroit sharpshooter. Teamed with him were captain Milt Schmidt and defensive expert Joe Klukay, both in their 30s.

While Lynn's greybeards checked the top Detroit threesome to a standstill, he sent his youngsters out against the champions' second-stringers and had them play it cosy while they waited for the breaks.

The first break came in the opening period when Eddie Sandford took a perfect pass from defenceman Bill Quackenbush and drove one waist-high past Wing netminder Terry Sawchuk.

Little Tony Leswick tied it up in the second period on a back-board relay from Marcel Bonin. Then Boston goalie Sugar Jim Henry, backed by a willing defence, turned aside Detroit's best drives until McIntyre went into his act. The Bruin backstop handled 44 shots to 32 for Sawchuk.

CHICAGO HERO

At Chicago the hero was defenceman Al Dewsbury, who set up the tying goal and scored the winner himself after the Canadiens had reversed the pattern of the two previous games by taking an early lead.

Bernie Geoffrion scored for Montreal in the second period, fooling Al Rollins with a slow shot instead of his usual booming drive.

Less than two minutes before regular time ran out, Bill Mosienko took a relay from Dewsbury and Vic Lynn to sink the tying goal. The big defenceman's winning effort, a 30-footer, came off George Gee's passout at the 5:18 mark in the extra session.

It was the first playoff victory for the Hawks over Montreal in 11 meetings.

Action resumes Tuesday night in both semi-final brackets with the Wings at Boston and Canadiens at Chicago.

Turpin, Humez To Fight Title Bout

LONDON (AP)—Randolph Turpin of Britain and Charles Humez of France will fight for the "world" middleweight boxing championship here June 9, promoter Jack Solomons announced today.

Everything now is "signed, sealed and delivered" for Turpin, British champion and former world champion, to meet Humez at London's White City stadium for the title vacated by Sugar Ray Robinson last December.

The latest move in the international battle over the 160-pound crown came only three days after the American field of contenders for the championship was cut to two. They were Paddy Young of New York, who eliminated Ernie Durando of Bayonne, N.J., Friday night, and Carl (Bobo) Olson of Honolulu.

SOLVES DIFFICULTY

"After a long discussion with Turpin and Humez," Solomons said "I have solved the purse difficulties by giving Humez the 50 per cent he wanted and by allocating 50 per cent to Turpin, plus a further 10 per cent out of my own pocket."

The joint board of the New York State athletic commission and National Boxing Association in the United States had it all mapped out for Young to fight Olson for the American crown, with the winner to meet the victor of the Turpin-Humez scrap in Europe

Even before Solomons' move today, however, Young said he was interested in meeting Turpin himself without facing Olson. And Olson, too, had said before the Young-Durando scrap that he wanted Turpin without having to face Young or Durando.

Remember When

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Detroit Red Wings, who have just established a record by winning their fifth straight NHL title, won their first league championship 19 years ago tonight by beating Toronto Maple Leafs 1-0 in the deciding game of the best-of-five series. Wings won the league title again in 1936, 1937 and 1943 before starting their present string in the 1948-49 season.

Montreal Canadiens Voted Most Colorful NHL Team

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—The National Hockey League's most colorful team? Montreal Canadiens by a whopping majority.

That's the way sports writers and sportscasters of the six NHL cities saw it in a Canadian Press poll. And the overwhelming margin given the Montrealers over Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs—the only other clubs to receive votes—stamped the red, blue and white club as the greatest boon to box-offices in the game.

A big measure of credit for Canadiens' popularity should go to Maurice Richard, voted the most colorful guy in the game The Rocket won it easily over Gordie Howe of Detroit and Milt Schmidt of Boston Bruins, the only others receiving a vote.

The writers and announcers probably had their eyes on the standing-room only accommodation at Montreal Forum and on the attendance figures of other NHL cities when Canadiens were playing.

The reason was summed up neatly by Vince Lunny, sports editor of the Montreal Herald, with this observation: "Canadiens must be the most colorful, they outdraw all other clubs on the road." The same view was expressed by Baz O'Meara, Montreal Star sports editor.

Sportscaster Frank Fallon of WMEX, Boston; Andy O'Brien of Weekend Magazine, and sportscaster Frank Starr of CJAD, Montreal, agreed with Lunny and O'Meara, but others emphasized the color of Montreal players.

"Personalities," was the one-word description of Canadiens by John Gillooly of the Boston Daily Record. "Fast and flashy," said Dana Mozley of the New York Daily News. "They have every type of player out there," observed sportscaster Foster Hewitt of CKFH, Toronto.

"Detroit is workmanlike, efficient; so is Montreal—but Canadiens also are a rough, tough bruising, spectacular crew who will fist fight when necessary," summed up Dan Desmond of the Chicago Herald-American.

"They are the most colorful because of their wide-open play," said Red Burnett of the Toronto Daily Star.

Another Canadiens supporter was Nick Del Ninno of the Boston Traveler who added a good word for coach Dick Irvin. "Canadiens are the most colorful probably because Irvin works on making them colorful," he said.

Joe Falls of The Associated Press, Detroit, and sportscaster Phil Stone of CHUM, Toronto, were the only selectors to pick the Leafs. "They're sort of like the 'Pride of the Yankees,'" the AP writer said. "If you are a Maple Leaf you have to be good and rough."

Voting for the Red Wings were Bobby Hewitson, sports editor of the Toronto Telegram; Marshall Dann, Detroit Free Press; Ben Olan, The Associated Press, New York; Sid Abel, Chicago Black Hawk playing-coach and former Wing player, and sportscaster Ward Wilson of WMGM, New York.

Flyers Take Junior Lead, Trip Irish 4-1

TORONTO (CP)—Barrie Flyers Saturday took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-nine Ontario Hockey Association Junior A finals when they downed St. Michael's Majors 4-1.

The Flyers' goals were divided among Skip Teal, Jim Robertson, Orv Tessier and Don Cherry. Bill Dineen tallied for the Majors.

Barrie took a 1-0 lead in the first period when Teal nabbed Jim Robertson's pass and fired a hard shot from 20 feet out that caught the top right-hand corner of the net. Robertson tallied in the second with a flip shot over Ed Chadwick who was sprawled on the ice. Tessier was given credit for the third counter but it appeared to have been deflected in by a St. Michael's player, again while Chadwick was flat on the ice. Dineen's goal came from a scramble in front of the net. Cherry took a pass from Tessier to finish the scoring.

The Irish were outclassed by the Flyers. In the third period the Barrie team toyed with the Majors and kept them on the defensive for most of the session.

The second game will be played in Barrie Tuesday.

QUEEN'S PLEDGE—This is an artist's drawing of the scene to be enacted in Westminster Abbey during the Coronation services of Queen Elizabeth next June. The solemn consecration ceremonial dates back more than a thousand years. This drawing depicts the Queen, having been accepted by her people, about to make her solemn oath to serve the law and uphold the faith. This ceremony is near the beginning of the long service of the Coronation.

Egyptian Flag Tells Story Of Liberation Party

By HAIG NICHOLSON

CAIRO (Reuters) — Egypt's new Liberation Rally, formed by Premier Mohammed Naguib after his dissolution of the country's political parties, tells its story in a nutshell in the colors of its flag — black, red and white.

Black represents the "bad old days" and dark deeds of the former system of party politics with its accompanying graft and corruption.

White represents the dawn of better and brighter days under the Naguib regime.

Red is supposed to symbolize a warning sign that the people are prepared to struggle and make sacrifices to achieve complete independence.

The Rally says it is not a party, but a movement organized by Egypt's new regime to channel the hopes and aspirations of the Egyptian people. Naguib said recently: "The movement is not associated —from near or far—with any party . . . it has no relation to communism or fascism."

Anyone is eligible to join, and those unable to pay the small membership fee can become members free of charge.

"Supreme objectives" of the Liberation Rally are:

1. To obtain evacuation of foreign troops from the Nile valley and to liberate it from imperialism whether political, economic or social.

2. To create conditions under which the Sudanese people will be able to determine their future free from any external influence.

The Rally says it aims at creating a new social structure in Egypt "on the basis of belief in God and country," and asserts that it wants to make social justice a "reality, not a mirage."

A booklet explaining the origin and ideals of the Rally has been widely circulated. Of the "bad old days," it says: "No one desired to give sound education to the peasants . . . their land was the prey of profiteers, who purchased land and treated the fellaheen (peasants) and small tenants as though they were slaves."

Meanwhile, middle-class people were the victims of increasing prices imposed by greedy merchants in agreement with officials devoid of mercy or patriotism.

"Parties," it says, "resembled business companies whose sole aim was to exploit the people and to live on its sufferings."

Then, the pamphlet says: "Above all these, there sat on the throne a man who dragged the reputation of the country to the ground."

Of the future, it declares: "In the Rally every Egyptian will find the freedom of desires.

"It is the single organization of Egypt—the new Egypt which is going forward towards the light and resurrection."

Want Royal Oak For Omemee

OMEMEE (ENS). — There was a good attendance at the Omemee and District Horticultural Society meeting to hear reports by convention delegates the Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt and E. A. Corneil.

Mr. Corneil told of the talks on roses and small shrubs and soils and conservation of soil. Mr. Zufelt reported the discussions on hedges, hedge planting, and pruning and administration.

Both delegates expressed disappointment in what the convention offered of interest and profit to home societies.

The advisability of planting more shade trees in the village was discussed. Hard maples were offered by Wesley Wilson from his bush. It was decided to write to the St. Williams reforestation station asking for one of the royal oaks which have been successfully grown from acorns from the oaks of Great Windsor Park in England—a gift to Canadian horticulturists from the Royal Horticultural Society.

The door prize for the month consisted of dwarf African marigold seeds. Prize lists were distributed for the window flower show to be held April 3 and 4, in O. J. Linton's store window.

Fruit Crops Show Slight Increase

TORONTO (CP)—Fruit crops in Ontario last year showed a slight increase in value over the previous year, the agriculture department's seasonal fruit and vegetable table report shows.

Value of fruit crops was estimated at $15,412,500 compared to $15,105,000 in 1951. Of the 10 main fruit crops, four showed a gain in volume. They were cantaloupes, sweet cherries, peaches, plums, prunes. Price changes were generally upward.

Value of the 12 main vegetable crops also showed an increase over 1951. Value of the 1952 crop was estimated at $25,854,300, an increase of 26.1 per cent over the previous year. The 12 main crops are asparagus, beets, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, lettuce, mushrooms, onions, parsnips, spinach and tomatoes.

Hanson Ferris Dies

SIMCOE (CP)—Superintendent of the Long Point Company for the last 32 years, C. Hanson Ferris, 71, died at his home here Sunday. Among his acquaintances were various governors-general of Canada who had visited Long Point through the years. Active in the municipal life of his native Port Rowan he served as reeve six years, and warden of Norfolk county in 1932.

Blame Official For Vote Loss

TORONTO (CP)—A labor board examiner who slept late one morning was blamed by an employees association in an appeal against the result of a vote among employees of the Stokes division of the General Tire and Rubber Company at Welland.

The association lost by 25 votes to the United Rubber Workers (CIO-CCL), reversing the result of an earlier election in which the union failed to gain a majority.

Arguing before the Ontario labor relations board Saturday, the association claimed that the examiner slept in on the morning of the vote and instead of being ready to supervise the vote of the night shift at 7.30 a.m., turned up at 9 a.m. Some 15 workers had gone home and the rest were growing impatient, association's counsel said.

The association submitted that workers aimed their resentment at the delay at the association, which held the bargaining rights, and voted for the CIO union. Evidence was also given that employees who waited received time-and-a-half.

Monsignor Cullinane Dies In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Rev. Michael W. Cullinane, 65, who held a number of clerical posts in Ontario, died Friday.

Well-known in the Toronto and Niagara district, Msgr. Cullinane became a priest in 1909 in his native Ireland. On coming to Canada, he served as assistant priest in Toronto and Barrie churches and was then appointed pastor at Uxbridge and Fort Erie.

In 1936 he was appointed pastor of St. Catharines' Church and dean of Niagara, a position he held for 10 years. He came to St. Cecilia's Church, Toronto, in 1946.

Among survivors is a brother, the Rt. Rev. Dennis Cullinane of St. Mary's-on-the-Lake, Kingston.

Fire Damages Church

PARIS, Ont. (CP)—Fire starting from an overheated flue pipe in the basement caused extensive damage Saturday night to the 96-year-old Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church. The church is regarded as the finest example of gothic architecture in Brant county. The floor beams and underpinning were badly damaged, Fire Chief Jack Gibson said.

Service for Mariners

GODERICH (CP) — Mariners shortly to leave this port were wished good sailing and God's blessing on their season's labors at the historic mariners' service Sunday night in Knox Presbyterian Church. The Rev. R. G. MacMillan, church minister, conducted the service.

University Will Move Into Modern Buildings

By JEAN E. STENTON

MEXICO CITY. — When the 402-year-old University of Mexico moves into the nearly completed University City on the outskirts of Mexico and has a unified campus for the first time, it will be a cause for great rejoicing.

* * * *

This new group of modern buildings rising from a lava bed to the south of Mexico City is said to comprise the finest campus in Latin America. The library is a striking combination of old and new. The rich mosaic murals are a blending of Indian, Spanish Colonial and modern culture. The humanities building is more than 1,000 feet long. Several of the buildings are 14 storeys high, all with clean, straight lines of 20th century architecture. In many cases the outside walls are ceiling-to-floor glass panels which can be pushed open. The maximum use is being made of light and air.

* * * *

University City is including a physics institute, making Mexico the only Latin American country to own the highly specialized van der Graf equipment for nuclear research. Atomic study related to other sciences, industry and agriculture will be taken in the new institute.

* * * *

The new university was the pet project of former president Aleman, whose term of office expired a few months ago. In only three years, by working day and night, the university is almost ready for use.

* * * *

FAST WORK

"This is the fastest piece of construction Mexico City has ever seen. Nobody thought it could be done," one Mexican stated.

* * * *

The University of Mexico was founded only 32 years after Cortez conquered the Aztec empire. Much older than the republic it serves, the national university has shared in and reflects the history of a country that won independence only after bitter conflicts with foreign conquerors. It has seen innumerable political revolutions and crises surviving through them all as a great educational institution.

* * * *

The university owes its existence to a letter written in 1551, by a monk named Juan de Zumarraga to Charles V of Spain.

* * * *

On September 21, 1551, Charles V signed the royal decree which created the Royal and Pontifical University of Mexico. The doors to the school did not actually open until two years later. The first headquarters included the old building which houses the National Pawn Shop on the Zocalo today.

* * * *

MAD UPS AND DOWNS

The ease with which the institution was founded however, did not mark many of its later efforts. The school has been closed on more than on occasion as revolutions broke out or when Mexico's great Indian leader, Benito Juarez, rose up to drive Maximilian out.

* * * *

Although frequently closed, it has always reopened its doors. Since 1910 classes have continued uninterrupted.

* * * *

The university faced other difficulties. In 1933 there was an effort by jealous educators outside the federal district to limit the educational institution's realm of influence to the "distrito federal." The critics claimed it was dominating the educational system of the country. But it weathered all storms and remains the national university.

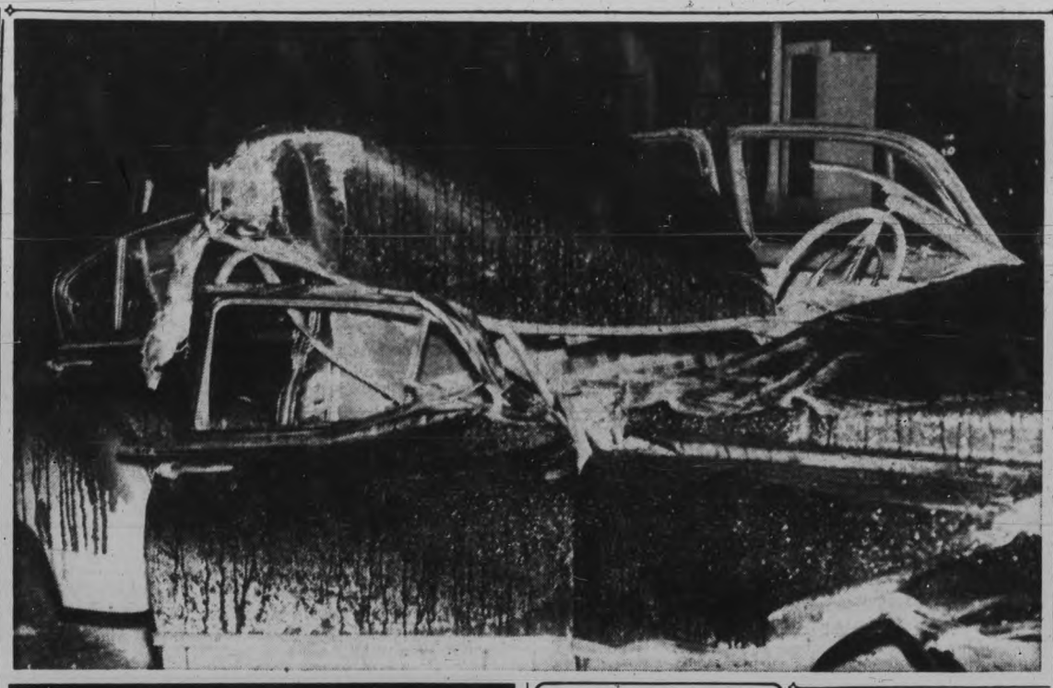
* * * *

IMPORTANT ROLE

Mexico's university has had an important role in the history of its country. Ignacio Garcia Tellez, a widely-known Mexican educator, describes the university as an important influence on the destiny of Mexico.

* * * *

"Through the halls of the university have passed the dogmas of absolute monarchy . . . (and) the desires of emancipation of the fathers of independence," he observes.



* * * *

Like Canadian campuses, the new university grounds will have dormatories, each to house 400-500 students. The dormatory is new to Mexico. Professors will live right on the campus, too. There is also a stadium which will accommodate at least 65,000 people.

UNIVERSITY CITY IS one of Mexico's most interesting projects. One of the dominant features of the campus is the Monolithic library (top). This striking combination of old and new—the Aztec symbols in the rich mosaic murals and the clean straight lines of modern architecture sets the pattern for the whole project—a blending of Indian, Spanish colonial and modern cultures.

Trapped

The narrow slot in a cement bicycle stand in the city's market parking lot was just a trap for a youngster today who had to have the help of both her parents to get free. The moppet's foot had slid into the slot and was caught there. The child was quite calm about the affair, but the young father worked himself into a lather of exertion. Finally he managed to pull the youngster's foot out of the shoe and then pulled out the crumpled white shoe. He had some nasty things to say about bicycle stands.

Ball Of Fire Explodes Four Firemen Burned Fighting Greenhouse Fire

Overheated Coal Stove Blamed For Causing Fire Which Burst Out Door Of Greenhouse On Sophia Street

Four city firemen were burned—one of them seriously enough to be admitted to hospital—when a ball of fire exploded out the door of a burning greenhouse shortly before Sunday midnight at 182 Sophia St. Fireman Peter Nicholson, 32, of 320 McKellar St. is reported to be in good condition today in St. Joseph's Hospital. He was burned on the front and left side of his face and his eyebrows were singed. He was kept in hospital overnight for observation and treatment and he will probably be discharged later today.

SINGED ABOUT FACE

Acting Assistant Chief Albert Mason was given outpatient treatment at the hospital after receiving burns on the left side of his face. Two others were singed about the face — Firemen Jack Wilson and Frank Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald who just recently joined the force also had a minor burn on his hand.

The fire caused $600 damage to the greenhouse owned by Fred Legon. Included in the loss are a quantity of vegetable and flower plants, particularly tomatoes, petunias and snapdragons.

An overheated coal stove, used to keep the greenhouse warm, is believed to have started the blaze that was first seen by a neighbor of the Legons about 20 minutes to midnight. A wooden bench was destroyed, some garden tools and other equipment.

The firemen were grouped around the door of the greenhouse and were playing a two-and-a-half-inch hose line on the fire when "a ball of fire" burst out of the greenhouse door with explosive force. The puff singed all four of them on their exposed skin.

Mr. Legon has the greenhouse for his own personal use and he also sells some plants. Though it was not burned down he describes it as "completely ruined," and he estimates his loss at $600.

Office Staff Of Trent Canal On 5-Day Week

Sixteen office staff workers of the Trent Canal System have been notified that they will go on a five-day week, starting today, the year 'round. Formerly the office hours were five and one half days a week while the House was in session with two months in the summer, only, on a five-day basis.

There was always a skeleton staff at work on summer Saturday mornings and now the same measure will be adopted throughout the year.

Under the new working hours the annual leave for employees has been cut from 18 to 15 days.

There will be no change in the working hours of operations staff.

The Lift Lock and all the locks of the system will open officially on May 15 and close approximately Oct. 15.

Trent engineers estimate that the spring water flow is just about at its peak with 6,544 cubic feet per second rushing downstream. This is only half of the maximum freshet flow that has been experienced in heavy snow winters and swollen spring rain weather in past years.

Engineers admitted the scarcity of winter snow this year had them worried as to whether they would be able to "pond" enough water reserves for a constant summer flow, or not.

At the request of Hydro and other power manufacturers on the Trent system they took the precaution of cutting back the water flow about a month ago for a three-week period to 1,600 cubic feet per second.

Last week's rains have brought smiles to their faces again and they report that lake-holding reservoirs are filling up nicely and will soon be at normal heights.

Car Wrecked Driver Scratched

Although his car was almost totally damaged, Neil Paudash of RR 2, Keene, escaped serious injury Saturday night after his car smashed into the rear of a heavy transport on Lansdowne St., just east of George St.

Paudash was driving east on Lansdowne and had just passed the George St. traffic lights when he noticed the tractor-trailer ahead of him.

He pulled to the left to try to avoid the truck but hit the larger vehicle's left rear corner, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to the late model car.

Paudash escaped with only minor facial lacerations, and the truck escaped with only $25 damage.

City police constable William A. Scott investigated.

Woman Hurt In Accident Driver Charged

LINDSAY (ENS).—Edith Ranning of Lindsay, a passenger in car that was wrecked in an accident Saturday night, received a broken nose and a cut over her right eye.

The driver of the car—William McKinnon, 20, of Sherbourne St., Toronto—faces a charge of dangerous driving laid by Lindsay police after his vehicle smashed into the rear of a parked car on Kent St.

DRIVEN 60 FEET

Sgt. Gordon Eberts reported that McKinnon was driving east on Kent St. and was near the outskirts of the town when he collided with the rear of the parked car owned by A. L. Strachan of Lindsay. The force of the impact drove the parked car 60 feet over the curb and against a steel pole bearing a tourist-home sign. The pole was almost uprooted from its base.

McKinnon's car continued on for about 20 feet having also jumped the curb. It was wrecked in the collision and damage is estimated at $500. Strachan's car received $350 damage.

B.C. Election To Be Held Before June 15

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia's four major political parties swung into action during the week-end following word from Premier Bennett that a provincial election will be held on or before June 15.

The premier's announcement came after dissolution of the 23rd legislature Saturday by Lieutenant-Governor Clarence W[illegible]e. The lieutenant-governor turned down a bid by the CCF to form an administration following defeat of the minority Social Credit government on the floor of the House last Tuesday night.

A meeting of B.C. Liberals Saturday decided to hold a provincial convention in Vancouver April 8 to elect a leader to succeed former premier Byron Johnson and complete their election platform.

The meeting was attended by Mr. Johnson, who has announced his intention of stepping down as leader, and Fisheries Minister James Sinclair, representing the federal Liberal party.

OPTIMISTIC NOTE

At a quarterly executive meeting of the Progressive Conservative party, Deane Finlayson, youthful provincial leader, said "things have never looked so good for the Conservative party in B.C." Mr. Finlayson, 33 is expected to contest the Oak Bay riding in the election.

First item of business at the provincial CCF convention at Vancouver April 10-12 will be the resignation of party leader Harold Winch, announced Saturday.

Mr. Winch, a member of the House for 20 years, said he had offered his resignation because "I'm tired." Randolph Harding, CCF member for Kaslo-Slocan, said Mr. Winch had submitted his resignation "some days ago" and it had been referred to the convention.

ASK TO FORM GOV'T

Earlier in the day Mr. Winch had gone to the lieutenant-governor to ask that the CCF be allowed to form a government. Mr. Winch told the lieutenant-governor a CCF government would deal strictly with public business and would not introduce socialist policies prior to an election.

Mr. Winch said the lieutenant-governor had told him he could not ask the CCF to form a government unless it could command an over-all majority. The balance-of-power Liberals had indicated they would not support the CCF.

A main plank in the Social Credit election platform is expected to be a new scheme of financing education costs introduced at this session. It was this issue which led to the defeat of the government Tuesday.

Standing in the 48-seat legislature at dissolution: Social Credit 19, CCF 18, Liberals six, Progressive Conservatives two, Labor one, vacant two.

KING-SIZE CATCH—Though there isn't much time for fishing, French and Vietnamese Commandos hoist a mammoth prize they caught in the area of southern Tonkin, Indo-China, between skirmishes with rebel Red guerillas.

Hundreds Attend School Fair See Children, Adult Work

LAKEFIELD—(ENS) —Despite rainy weather Friday evening, hundreds attended the annual School Fair held in the public school by the Lakefield Home and School Association. This event has been held by the Association for a number of years and is eagerly looked forward to by children and adults alike.

The display of work done by the pupils, which included art, writing, map drawing, sewing, baking, wood work, collections of various kinds and leather work was excellent.

The Sea Scouts and Cubs also had an exhibit of knot tying, coins and other items. The school hobbies were under the direction of Mrs. S. R. Henderson, Mrs. Clarence Coons and Mrs. A. Kingdon.

A great deal of interest was shown in the adult hobbies, and the display was one of the finest shown yet. In charge of this department were Mrs. Chester Lilley and Mrs. T. E. M. Last. In the art section paintings were on display done by Mrs. Douglas Davis, John McKerchar, Jack Butterworth, Oscar Schleinger, Mrs. M. Lee, Mrs. George Graham, Mrs. M. Deck, Mrs. M. Dainton, Miss Eleanor Deck and J. Randall.

An interesting display of moths of Canada and other countries, the property of Eldon Johnson, drew many comments as did a collection of antique jugs belonging to Mrs. Paul Irwin. Beautifully dressed dolls were exhibited by Mrs. Douglas Davis, Mrs. E. Waldon and Miss Mary Irwin. The dolls in Miss Irwin's collection were a source of admiration as they were representative of many countries such as England, France and even an Eskimo completely clothed in fur. All these dolls came from the countries they represented.

The Women's Institute display included fancy pillows, leatherwork, knitting, weaving and other articles, many of them made at the recently held "Work Shop".

Mrs. L. Priker and Mrs. J. Orr, both from Holland had an interesting display from their native land.

Other adult hobbies included smocking, sewing, leather work, jewellery, antique china and many other lines.

Mrs. J. McKerchar was instructing in the art of loom weaving, Mrs. Wilfred Lee in textile painting and Roger Davis in jewellery making use of shells.

The many guests were received in the tea room by president, Mrs. Stanley Burger, Mrs. H. E. Gastle, Mrs. A. W. Newson, Mrs. J. Kennedy and Mrs. William C. Grant. Tea was poured by Mrs. R. H. Campbell, Mrs. W. B. Walker, Mrs. William Whetung and Miss H. Spannis. The table was attractively centred with spring flowers in a blue hobnail glass bowl, flanked on either side by matching blue candles in silver holders. Tea was served on small tables. Conveners of the tea room were Mrs. Eldon Johnson and Mrs. J. A. Arnott.

General conveners of the fair were Mrs. Gastle and Mrs. Newson. Other conveners were: home baking, Mrs. J. Sabatino; candy, Mrs. M. Kingdon; ice cream, Mrs. George Stenner; fish pond, Mrs. D. Nichols; publications, Mrs. T. Corkery; movies, William Webb; cashiers, Mrs. T. Payton, Mrs. C. Foster, Mrs. M. Coughlin and Mrs. J. Twist.

Falling Out Of Malenkov, Beria Would Spell Danger

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

Georgi M. Malenkov heads a cautious regime in the Kremlin today, and will continue to head it as long as he stays on good terms with his twin in power, Lavrenty P. Beria. If they fall out one would have to liquidate the other and the winner would be in serious danger.

This is a regime which must avoid taking unnecessary chances.

To give themselves time to buttress their regime at home, Prime Minister Malenkov, ruler of the Soviet Communist party, and Interior Minister Beria, ruler of the omnipresent secret police, are likely to launch a great peace offensive abroad. It will not necessarily be aimed at peace, but at giving the regime time to fortify its own safety.

The Malenkov - Beria combination has already given an indication of its course. The party has been told that disunity—meaning any shadow of disobedience—will be swiftly punished.

KEEP UP COLD WAR

Satellite Communist leaders and Communist leaders from the non-Communist countries were told by Malenkov in the Stalin funeral oration that the U.S.S.R. is not giving up its concern for "workers of colonial and capitalist countries." The cold war, they are told, must not slacken.

Responsible for tightening the grip on the satellite world will be Beria, the most feared individual in the Red empire.

Beria—his real name is said to be Moluta Skuratov—is a Georgian, as was Stalin. He can be a convial fellow but out of the social atmosphere, he is forbidding and terrifying.

SECRET POLICEMEN

All his Communist party career has been enmeshed in the grisly business of secret police, from the days of the revolutionary Cheka, through the OGPU, the NKVD and up to his present pre-eminence as ruler of an empire of spies, informers and executioners.

Beria's own organizations are laced with spies of the Communist party apparatus, ruled by Malenkov. Both the party apparatus and the secret police have spies in the army, navy and air force, now headed up by the non-military marshal, Nikolai Bulganin, an old time Stalinist.

PROTEGE

Malenkov has installed Nikita Sergeivitch Khrushchev, 58, as his chief lieutenant heading up the apparatus. Khrushchev, a Bolshevik since 1918, was a protege in the party of the powerful "iron commissar" of the Ukraine, Lazar Moisyevitch Kaganovitch, the only Jew in the hierarchy and reputed to be the brother-in-law of Stalin.

The men represent the pyramid of power today in the U.S.S.R.—the inner cabinet of Malenkov, Beria, Bulganin, Kaganovitch and Molotov, plus Khrushchev.

There is apparently no absolute dictatorship any more. Malenkov must share with Beria. Both keep a wary eye on Bulganin with his armies and Molotov with his prestige as an old comrade of Stalin. They must hang together to avoid hanging separately.

Economic Plans All Baloney To Lyttelton

LONDON (CP)—Economic planning in the opinion of Britain's colonial secretary, Oliver Lyttelton, is just a great big bit of baloney.

Closely-linked with the industrial fabric of the country as wartime president of the board of trade, the minister brought murmurs of "hear, hear," with his blunt definition before the Conservative Society of the London School of Economics.

"To talk about economic planning and discard direction of labor is a great hyprocrisy," Mr. Lyttelton said. "Economic planning has been shown to be, in the sense in which the words are used, a great big bit of baloney. You cannot, in fact, have economic planning and individual freedom — you have to choose between the two."

It was better, he said, to ensure that the lowest-paid workers had enough money to buy a reasonable standard of life and a fair supply the necessities and amenities of life, than to give them much less money and sell the necessities at an artificial or subsidized price.

One of the chief merits of trying to regulate economic trends by use of financial rather than the physical instrument, Mr. Lyttelton continued, was that the financial could be regulated by a handful of men.

He added: "It does not require a horde of officials, myriad forms, tons of paper, snoopers, questionnaires and intrusion into the kitchens and the bedroom of every house in England, to carry out the policy."

Go North, Young Man

MONTREAL (CP)—A call to Canadian youth to seek adventure in the Canadian north was sounded by Lt.-Col. P. D. Baird, director of the Montreal office of the Arctic Institute of North America. In an address here he said disappointingly few young Canadians volunteered when expeditions are being fitted out to explore Arctic regions.

Veteran Canadian Geologist Found Oil In Alberta 1893

By PETER REILLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Alberta's oil boom came as no surprise to a veteran geologist in Toronto. As long ago as 1893 he knew there was oil in the Edmonton area.

Dr. Joseph Burr Tyrrell's surveys in coal, oil and gold in Western Canada have been called among the best made in North America by any one man. He can point to the rich coal fields of Drumheller, Alta., and claim a first there. It was his findings which led to some western gold developments and to oil drilling in Alberta.

The 94-year-old geologist, senior fellow of the Geological Society of America, recalls that in 1893 he found indications of oil of strong intensity near Edmonton. But the man who directed the subsequent drilling located some 30 miles away from the spot indicated by Dr. Tyrrell and no oil was found. Besides, says Dr. Tyrrell, the drilling was not deep enough and present-day conditions confirm that statement.

IN ROCKIES IN 1881

The famous geologist was appointed to the Canadian geographical survey staff as an explorer in 1881 and two years later he was working in the Rocky mountains. He made important discoveries on the Prairies before the Riel Rebellion and between 1887 and 1889 he explored northwestern Manitoba.

Born at Weston, now a Toronto suburb, in 1858, Dr. Tyrrell was educated at Upper Canada College and University of Toronto where he took an arts course. That was in 1877, before the university had established an engineering department. During that period he became interested in chemistry and geology which later became his life work.

When he was graduated from the university, he entered a law office but was forced to get work outside because of his health.

His early travel itinerary reads like the amateur explorer's dream. He visited such spots as Lake Athabaska in 1892. And he became the first white man to make the perilous overland hike to Lake Winnipeg from Churchill.

Dr. Tyrrell took part in the Klondike gold rush. He didn't make any fabulous strikes, but says the experience he gained was well worth the trip.

VALUABLE ADVICE

The experience was to make many people glad they had taken the geologist's advice. For instance, there was the time he was going through Northern Ontario's Lake Shore Mines with the owner—the late Sir Harry Oakes. Dr. Tyrrell noticed a crack in the wall of a stope and said, "I think there's a vein there."

"Nothing of the sort," scoffed Sir Harry.

But blasts were set off. The result was a large vein whose production was around $200 a ton.

There were other times in Dr. Tyrrell's career when people had cause to regret ignoring his advice. He once unsuccessfully tried to interest a group of English business men in buying what became the Teck-Hughes gold mine for $200,000. Since that time gold worth some $40,000,000 has come out of Teck-Hughes.

Despite his age Dr. Tyrrell is still able to carry on his duties as president of the Kirkland Lake Mining Company. He is the oldest living member of the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario and the oldest living graduate of the University of Toronto.

Since the death of his wife, he lives alone, in a large old house in Toronto's west end.

Marmora WMS Conducts Service

MARMORA (ENS). — At St. Andrew's United Church on Sunday morning the sacrament of Holy Communion was administered by the pastor, Rev. K. J. Crawford. The anthem was "Easter Dawning," Piersol, and the sermon subject "The Last Supper."

The WMS was in charge of the evening service with Mrs. W. Tupper, president, as leader. Prayers were offered by Mrs. J. Sproul. Misses Barbara and Mary Meiklejohn sang the duet "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," Laurenz.

The scripture reading was taken by Mrs T. J. Bateman.

As the offertory was taken by Mrs. G. Jarvis and Miss D. Airhart, Mr. Crawford played Handel's "Largo" as a violin solo with Mrs. A. F. Fraser, organist, accompanying.

The pastor next showed a series of colored slides entitled "From Sea to Sea With The United Church."

The service closed with the benediction being pronounced by Mrs. Tupper.

Plane Crashes Pair Escape With Mud Bath

SUTTON —An Islington couple escaped with only a mud bath Sunday when their rented three-seater private plane clash-landed in a wheat field four miles south of here.

Russell Tombs was flying his wife Delphine on a 153-mile round trip from Toronto's Island Airport to Jackson's Point and Camp Borden when the engine suddenly gave out a few minutes after they were returning from Lake Simcoe.

Talking with his wife in the kitchen of their farmhouse, Fergus Lockie heard a plane flyin low, having engine trouble. Hi son Gordon looked out the window to see the plane drop into the field and bury its nose in the mud.

Shaken, but uninjured, the Tombs climbed out of the plane, owned by Central Arways. The plane's propeller was smashed in the landing.

LOSES SHOES

Mrs. Tombs lost her shoes in the mud while walking 300 feet to the highway. With 115 flying hours to his credit as a private pilot, Tombs admitted he had always wondered what it would be like to make a crash landing.

The plane was pulled from the field to the highway by a 300-foot cable attached to a tow truck. It will be dimantled and returned to the city.

Invest More Money In Automobiles Than In Farms

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Canadians have more money invested in automobiles than in farms, the Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce, Inc., says, in effect, in its recent booklet, "Facts About a Great Canadian Industry." Says the booklet:

"There are on the roads of Canada more than 3,000,000 cars and commercial vehicles, representing an investment by their owners of more than $4,500,000,000—a sum that is far greater than the total value of all land, buildings, implements and livestock in the entire agricultural industry of Canada."

This automobile industry, created within about 50 years, is responsible for our modern highway systems, but some man-sized roads were built long ago. The current letter of the Royal Bank of Canada recalls one of them.

This highway, built before the Christian era, says the letter, was "the Inca road of Peru, 4,000 miles long and 25 feet wide, traversing some of the roughest, most mountainous country in the world.

GREAT TUNNELS

"Mountain peaks were pierced by tunnels hundreds of feet in length; smooth pavements of stones were laid across hundreds of miles of burning desert; dykes were constructed across swamps and shallow lakes, and for much of its length this amazing highway was surfaced with asphalt.

"'Nothing we moderns have ever constructed in the line of arterial roads can equal or even approach this highway,' said A. Hyatt Verrill in 'Under Peruvian Skies' (1930)".

From other annual reports we learn:

The Canadian electrical industry will be called upon to produce as much equipment in the next decade as during the last 60 years, says Harold M. Turner, president of Canadian General Electric Co., Ltd. He bases this prediction on "reliable estimates" that over the next 10 years Canadian utilities will double their present installed generating capacity.

Sun Oil Company of Philadelphia says 1952 saw "petroleum supply overtaking demand" in the United States. This resulted, says Sun, from expanded productive capacity and increased oil imports, coupled with a levelling out of the increasing rate of demand for petroleum products in the post-war years." Sun adds:

"Contributing to the slackening in the increased rate of demand for oil were increasing supplies of natural gas at prices which were held below a competitive level by regulatory authorities."

Sun is building a refinery at Sarnia, Ont., on a site which has huge salt beds several thousand feet beneath it. The company now has drilled three wells and is washing out cavities in the salt formation to provide underground storage for liquified petroleum gas.

Apprentice Weaves Shining Cloth Of Gold For Queen

By MURIEL PENN

BRAINTREE, Eng. (Reuters)—A 16-year-old apprentice boy named Alfred Fuller is weaving the shining cloth of gold which is to be used for the stole and girdle with which the Queen will be invested shortly before she is crowned in Westminster Abbey June 2.

One of four apprentices working on the hand looms at the mills of Warner and Sons, Limited, here, he weaves about one yard of cloth a day.

The cloth is woven in silk shot with a flat metal thread composed of 90 per cent silver and 2½ per cent pure gold, and is presented for the ceremony by the worshipful company of girdlers of the city of London.

Nearby, work is going fullspeed ahead on the rich, vivid blue and gold fabric which is to be used for the frontals to the balconies and various curtains in the abbey.

Woven into the blue ground with a metal thread is a golden design embodying the national emblems of the United Kingdom—the rose of England, the thistle of Scotland, the leek of Wales and the Irish shamrock—framed in a chaplet of English oak leaves and acorns. Over each design is a royal crown composed of fleur de lys and ivy leaves, with tudor roses.

The same cloth, woven in all gold silk is being made for the frontal of the royal boxes in the abbey and for covering the regalia table in the vestibule.

In another part of the mills, on a special handloom on which the purple velvet for the Queen's Coronation robe was woven before Christmas, a woman is now weaving the crimson velvet for the Queen's parliamentary robe, in which she will arrive at the abbey for the Coronation.

The blue and gold which form the "theme colors" of the abbey hangings and carpets will be echoed in the capes to be worn by the canons of Westminster at the service. The cloth for these, a rich silk with a gold "pineapple" first taken from 15th century Italy is also now being woven on a handloom at these mills.

Daily Scrub Can Keep Elbows Soft

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

When you wear short sleeves, do you ever think of the appearance of your elbows? They are constantly visible to others and, if uncared for, their grey, pebbly wrinkled look can make you seem years older than you are.

To keep elbows smooth, soft, and snowy, every day use a complexion brush to scrub them with thick soap lather, using a firm rotary motion. Bend your arm frequently during the process.

For very bad cases, use pumice or a fine abrasive powder of the type used to clean bathtubs.

When you put on your night cream, scoop a little extra from the jar for your elbows. Massage upwards to help take off the overhanging lump of fat that collects above many girls' elbows.

Constant resting of the elbows on tables and chair arms helps cause the darkening. So eliminate this as much as possible.

To bleach elbows, cut a lemon in half, squeeze the halves, but not too thoroughly, and rest your elbows in them.

SMOOTH, young-looking elbows are achieved by this girl with a nightly scrubbing, using brush and soap lather.

THE COSTUME LOOK is at its best in this three-piece Canadian-made ensemble. Restrained fullness is seen in the coat of soft grey moire taffeta with deep cocktail cuffs on the full sleeve. A two-piece dress of organza is in pink and grey and matches the striped coat lining.

Designers Of Texas Stress Wide Use Of Cottons

DALLAS (NEA). — In this friendly and open-hearted southwestern city (the Texans like to call it "Big D"), fashion is first. On the streets of Dallas, you see many smartly-dressed women as well as the tall, lean Texas men in their western suits and broad-brimmed hats.

In the summer collections of Dallas designers, cotton is king. It gets many treatments. Denim, for instance, may be trimmed with rows of ruffled lace or with black silk braid. There are many stripes (some worked diagonally), polished pimas, embroidered batistes any many prints, these chiefly in sundresses.

The sleeveless dress with little jacket or stole and the halter top (replacing the strapless sun dress) are important at nearly all Dallas houses. The sheath, with scooped neck or crossed-V neckline, is straight up and down. It has a slight edge over the wide skirt, though many of these fuller skirts are shown.

Even the jackets worn over sheaths are sleeveless. These are, for the most part, straight matchbox types. For the print sundress, these jackets are done in black cotton.

Touches of red enliven the separates group. This red may appear in embroidered arrows, in piping, pocket or collar trim. In the dressy separates, favorite color combinations include white or natural, teamed with black.

Terry gets a big play in sunclothes. One designer makes a sheath-like, long-sleeved dress of it, trims it in linen and belts it in calf. She also uses it in intense colors (hot pink, bright turquoise) and combines it with linen in shell pink or fleece blue.

A straight, sleeveless sheath dress in shell pink linen has its own little jacket in hot pink terry, lined in pale pink linen.

Dawn To Dusk In Shoes

For the woman who wants a well balanced shoe wardrobe Canadian shoe manufacturers have designed many attractive styles to suit every occasion from dawn to dusk. There are smart comfortable shoes for long shopping tours, tailored but snappy shoes for luncheon parties, ultra feminine shoes for afternoon events and chic sophisticated styles for the after dusk hours. Starting lower left and reading clockwise, a medium low heeled, closed toe shell pump in grey flannel with mudguard in black kid, ideal for suits. For that "extra lift" for an important luncheon, change into black patent leather high heeled pumps with a Spring-like note in the white daisy buckle. For a truly feminine note switch to the "open look" in brown suede. The vamp is made up of narrow suede strips intricately patterned. The slingback, open toe black suede pump is the thing for after dusk loveliness. The shoe has a platform sole studded with rhinestones, and for extra glamor, rhinestones are used to trim the throat of the vamp and side of the shoe.

JUNIOR'S BASEBALL inspired outfit is made in viscose fabric with bands of knitted jersey at the waistline, collar and cuffs.

Played Organ In Church For 60 Years

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Mrs. Sophia Doering, 75, is celebrating her 60th year as organist of St. Paul's Lutheran Church at nearby Erbsville.

One of the oldest church organists in Canada, Mrs. Doering is a small, active woman who lives alone in a picturesque house near the church. She began her career on an old reed organ at the age of 15.

One of the most vivid memories of her youth is the installation of the old pipe organ in 1902. That organ was run by a hand pump, and often she had to flick the pump signal to a boy who had fallen asleep or was deep in day-dreams.

Mrs. Doering is an independent soul who still does her own housework. In summertime her garden is a mass of flowers. She was born on a farm near the church and as a girl walked four miles to take organ lessons. She has been content to stay close all her life to this Western Ontario community.

CGE Test Club Annual Formal

A gay formal party Saturday evening at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club was the CGE Test Club's annual spring dance. The 175 guests included a small number of ex-Peterborough test men with their wives and friends.

The club president Gord Drew was assisted in extending welcome at the door by works manager Mr. R. T. Bogle and Mrs. Bogle, division manager Mr. J. E. Girven and Mrs. Girven, and works engineer Mr. J. L. McKeever and Mrs. McKeever.

Decorations featured the crests of the various universities which the men have attended and there were cartoons of the head men of departments connected with Peterborough Test and comic verses about them. Streamers over and around the dance floor and bandstand added a festive effect.

Highlight of the entertainment was a quartette of two present test men and two ex-test men singing old songs, like "I want a girl" and a specialty titled "Old test men never die." The vocalists were Bob Grant, John Dinsmore, Stan Jones and George Brethin.

During the orchestra's intermission delicious refreshments were available from the buffet.

Door prize winner was Mr. Jack Tirie.

DOROTHY DIX:

Girl Fears That Lad Finds Methods In His Dating Her

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm still in my teens, and not attractive at all. A boy I like very much has dated me for quite a while, after breaking off with his former girl friend. About a month ago he dated her again, then broke up. He has asked me for another date, saying he and the other girl are through for good. However, I'm afraid he only takes me out to make her jealous. I certainly don't want to be the scapegoat in this affair. W. O.

ATTEND TO PERSONAL APPEARANCE

ANSWER: First of all, I must scold you for saying you aren't attractive. There's no reason in the world why any teen-ager today can't be attractive. There is information readily available to teach you how to overcome any physical blemish or defect, be it straight hair, muddy complexion, poor figure, even crooked teeth. So go after the points that you believe detract from your personal appearance and correct them.

Perhaps the boy IS dating you in an effort to re-arouse interest in the other girl, but stop worrying about it. Don't let him know you even suspect such a thing, and make up your mind that dating you will become so interesting that the other lassie will be completely left in the cold. Even if it should happen that he goes back to her, at least you've had good experience in being an entertaining guest, and when less fickle lad appears, you'll be equipped to charm him.

If you need help in evaluating your appearance, get it from the physical-training teacher at school.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been married three months, during which time my husband has been called into service. The problem is that every week end he comes home and wants to eat and stay at his mother's. This is causing many quarrels between us. E. C.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Your husband is obviously a very young man, and the fact that he rushed into marriage just before entering the service hasn't given him any time to adjust to his new status. Of course, his place is with you when he's home week ends, and his mother should make the fact apparent to him if he can't see it for himself. There's not much sense quarreling with him and widening the breach between you; perhaps these quarrels are an added reason for avoiding you. Impress upon him, but pleasantly, that his place is with you, and be sure to schedule a visit to his mother while he's at home.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Why is it so wrong for a girl to telephone a boy? My mother makes a big fuss whenever I want to call a boy friend.

Is it all right for a 12-year-old girl to use lipstick?

Is it all right for a 12-year-old girl to meet boys at the show? My parents say it isn't, but I see no harm in it. E. S.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: While we're on the subject of what a 12-year-old girl should or should not do; she certainly should be able to spell simple words better than you do. A little less time with the boys and a little more attention to school would be a wise adjustment.

It isn't wrong for a girl to call a boy, but it IS unwise, since boys prefer to do their own telephoning and are apt to feel a girl is chasing them if she preempts their rights.

The lipstick question is squarely up to your parents. My opinion is "no."

If you go to the show in a group, it's inevitable that you'll meet the boys there. In most communities the movie house is the accepted place of Saturday afternoon recreation. Whether the meeting is prearranged or not, the outcome is the same, so the problem is academic.

CORONATION ROBES—At right is the velveteen robe with white rabbit trimming, designed on request by Norman Hartnell, the Queen's dressmaker, as an alternate robe for peeresses under the rank of countess who cannot afford the more expensive, traditional robe shown at left. Robe styles have been unchanged since the coronation of Queen Anne.

ECONOMY GALA OUTFIT—This is an economy gala outfit designed by Norman Hartnell, the Queen's dressmaker. It is so-called because the aquamarine and white grosgrain coat, styled on the lines of the new Coronation robe, can be worn over both dresses. The white net starred in diamante has a cummerbund of aquamarine grosgrain, and the white dress beneath the coat has aquamarine straps and embroidery.

Britain's Love Of Splendor Desire For "Grace" Places Emphasis On Velvet

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Economy is a rank outsider in the race for Coronation trappings, even though the thinning purses of the nobility resulted in the Queen's acceptance of an alternate, less sumptuous Coronation garb for peers under the rank of earl.

Britain's love of splendor and desire to "grace" an occasion are impulses which will see the Westminster Abbey emphasis on robes of velvet rather than velveteen.

By request, royal dressmaker Norman Hartnell designed a contemporary robe of velveteen trimmed with white rabbit skin, selling around £50. The waisted, sleeveless robe with deep ermine collar, cut on the lines of a flowing evening coat with train, will be worn by many peeresses under the rank of countess—but mostly in velvet.

HARD ON VELVETEEN

Women attending the abbey ceremony may, of course, prefer to economize in other ways. This is because the long hours of sitting before the ceremony starts—guests must be in their places some three hours in advance—would be hard on velveteen. On the other hand, silk velvets, nylons and silk-and-cotton velvets, materials sold in the top ranges, are just about uncrushable.

A spokesman for Norman Hartnell says they are selling cheaper robes, but that requests are few. This is confirmed by a robe manufacturer (Baroque) who, so far, has sold just 17—one to Canada. This manufacturer finds that many orders for the velveteen gown are for store windows. Some of these orders are from Canada.

Another robe stylist, close to the law courts and Fleet street, is not making one robe in velveteen. This firm (Ede and Ravenscroft) has produced robes since the coronation of William and Mary in 1689, and most of their robes come in the present traditional styling which dates to the Coronation of Queen Anne.

ECONOMIZE IN FUR

More than one authority confirms that peers wearing the traditional robe may economize in the quality of fur trimming, but all are choosing good velvets. The furnishing firm (Warner and Sons) which regularly supplies the handwoven purple velvet used in the robe of the monarch says that a small quantity of handwoven velvets are being supplied for Coronation robes. These are in red

The Royal Dukes including the Duke of Edinburgh will wear the same red as the peers. The only members of the Royal Family so far known to be wearing purple are the Queen, the Duchesses of Kent and Gloucester and Princess Margaret. It is not yet known what will be worn by the Queen Mother.

Peers who can't afford the heavy cost of new robes are allowed to wear parliamentary robes — red wool trimmed with ermine—but Lord Hawke, chairman of the Independent Association of Unionist Peers, said a scheme has been started to help those without robes. Through the association, peers unlucky in the ballot for seats in Westminster Abbey will offer robes to those with seats.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Good Johnnycake Recipe Your Easter Dinner Menu

Since Good Friday comes in this week I have moved up to today the letters and my answers that would normally appear in this column on a Friday.

QUESTION—Please give recipe for light and open Johnnycake.—Betty W.

ANSWER:

JOHNNYCAKE No. 1

Two-thirds cup sifted all-purpose flour, ¾ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon each baking powder and baking soda, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1⅓ cups yellow cornmeal, 2 well-beaten eggs, 1 2/3 cups sour or buttermilk, ¼ cup melted shortening (good bacon fat is delicious). Combine and sift first 5 ingredients; stir in cornmeal. Combine eggs, milk and shortening and add all at once to dry ingredients. Stir until barely blended. Turn into greased pan about 11 x 7 x 1½ inches and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 30 to 35 minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot.

JOHNNYCAKE No. 2 (Cornbread)

Three-quarters cup white or yellow cornmeal, 1½ cups plus 2 tablespoons sifted white flour, 1 tablespoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 well-beaten egg, 1 cup milk, ¼ cup melted shortening. Sift together flour, cornmeal, baking powder salt and sugar. Combine the egg, milk and shortening. Turn liquid ingredients into dry all at once, stir quickly until barely mixed. It may still have a slightly lumpy appearance. Turn into greased pan 8 x 8 x 2 and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 25 to 30 minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot.

QUESTION: . . . my husband is in the poultry processing business and we eat a lot of chicken. Often I used scalded or skinned birds that are not saleable but perfectly edible. We like them prepared differently and I don't hesitate to experiment, but there is one recipe I am always looking for and that is cold chiken loaf—not salady with peas and celery, but one with only chicken and stock or gelatine and good seasonings.—Isabel R.

ANSWER: Ask me up sometime, won't you?

PLAIN JELLIED CHICKEN

Soften 2 tablespoons best quality gelantin in ¼ cup cold water 5 minutes. Dissolve this in 2½ cups strained well-seasoned chicken stock which has been chilled and skimmed free of fat and reheated. Add 4 cups cut up, sliced or cubed chicken meat and 1 teaspoon salt. (The salt flavor diminishes when gelatin mixtures cool.) Pour into loaf pan about 9 x 5 x 3 inches. Chill until set. Unmould on cold platter garnished attractively. Slice with very sharp knife. See tomorrow's column for a perfectly superb hot chicken loaf.

QUESTION: It it is at all possible I would like the recipe for "Heavenly Hash" . . . I believe it is a fruit salad concoction which is delectable.—S.B.

ANSWER:

HEAVENLY HASH (Serves 24)

One No. 2 can grated pineapple, 1 lb. cut up marshmallows, 1 cup chopped nuts, 2 cups cream, whipped. Mix pineapple and marshmallows and allow to stand overnight covered. Just before serving add nuts and whipped cream folded in, not stirred. Additions are drained canned Mandarin oranges, peeled and stoned grapes, sliced green and red maraschino cherries.

QUESTION: . . . my husband has recently been put on a special diet . . . I'm already feeling pinched as to what to serve for dinner . . . what I would particularly like is something along the chicken line, also beef that is not fried.—Mrs. Frank W.

ANSWER: See jellied chicken above, also Hot Chicken Loaf in tomorrow's column.

SHORT RIBS EN CASSEROLE

Two lbs. short ribs of beef, 2 tablespoons French dressing (optional) 2 sliced onions, 2 cups stock or water, 6 small potatoes. Wipe meat with damp cloth, brush with French dressing (or mixture of half oil and half lemon juice) and let stand 1 hour. Put in greased baking dish, cover with the onion, pour in stock, cover and bake 1 hour longer. Uncover and bake 30 minutes longer. Season as desired during baking period.

Woman Makes Living Working Under Cuban Seas

By ANNETTE JEWETT
NEA Staff Writer

NEW YORK (NEA)—One society in which a woman's place in life is very much prescribed is in Cuba. But a Cuban girl, Martica Alberni, decided to do something different—she now makes her living under water.

She met her husband and business partner, Bronson Hartley, five years ago, when she was 19. As part of his courtship, he took her down to a coral reef, 25 feet under the Bermuda waters. There he had made friends with a colony of fish—angel fish, parrot fish, sergeant-majors, sea horses, hogfish, snappers and many others.

To say he made friends with them is no exaggeration. They were his close associates in an unusual occupation, that of taking tourists deep under water to see strange fish and vegetation.

Bronson has been taking people under water since the age of 11, when he built his first diving helmets for himself and his friends. Now, as a young man, he makes his living at it.

He knows the fish so well—the same fish visit after visit—that they come to him when he offers them food, mainly mussels. Identifying marks on the fish are pointed out to skeptics who don't believe they are his friends.

This familiarity with the fish has resulted in an unusual color movie, "Main Street, Under Sea."

Bronson showed some of his own film taken under water to a visiting producer, who conceived the idea of a fantasy film with the fish as characters, the coral reefs as the buildings in a town and Martica as the only human being in the film.

For most of the film's shots, Martica wears a diving helmet with glass on three sides, in addition to a variety of attractive bathing suits. She goes under water to find a dream world but finds the fish world much the same as the human world.

Woman Makes Living

A red hind plays the part of a solid citizen, an angel fish is a cabaret dancer, two sea horses are young lovers, a pink squirrel fish is a spinster, a porcupine fish is the mayor, lobsters and an octopus are racketeers and hoodlums.

The Hartleys have made thousands of undersea dives, mostly from 15 to 20 feet under.

Martica's part in the day-to-day business of showing tourists the undersea sights is to run and take care of the 30-foot boat's engine, make the tourists comfortable on board, and supervise the oxygen tank while tourists are under water. Two tourists at a time accompany Bronson down a ladder—15 to 20 feet below the surface, although with Bronson's helmets they can go as deep as 60 feet.

Communists Gain Success In Middle East Nations

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

A young Arab leader is lionized by Communists on an all-expense-paid trip to Vienna . . .

A Moslem priest is lured behind the Iron Curtain as a peace delegate and finds the red carpet rolled out for him . . .

A university student with powerful family connections is flattered as an advance-guard intellectual . . .

The young Arab returns to the Middle East and soon finds himself a cog in the Communist organization within his trade union. The mullah preaches that religion is respected in the Communist world, that communism is not incompatible with Islam. The university student's connections get him a job with a key government ministry, and either through flattery or blackmail he is induced to take orders from a Communist contact.

This is the way Moscow's agents work in their long-range program in the Middle East. The stakes are domination of 100,000,000 people, control of strategic approaches to three continents and access to the world's greatest oil resources.

CONCENTRATE ON YOUTH

This interest centres on youth. The slow, steady drive has been spreading infection among young people—students, intellectuals and workers. An extensive tour, all the way from Kenya colony in East Africa to Iran on the USSR's borders in Asia, makes these conclusions inescapable:

1. Soviet agents in many guises, aiming at the young educated groups, have achieved notable gains which have permitted communism to penetrate high places.

2. Soviet propaganda hits first at intellectuals, then labor, then religion, preying upon youthful ideals of social justice, upon the embitterment of mass poverty and upon the ancient and modern prejudices and conflicts in which the whole area abounds.

3. The Communists have successfully penetrated virtually all nationalist movements.

Communist success in penetrating universities of the Middle East is admitted by most persons in authority. The penetration has been extremely strong in Egypt and the Sudan.

In the field of labor, the Communists have made steady gains. In the Sudan, they have taken over the executive of the Trade Union Federation. The World Federation of Trade Unions, a tool of the Soviet Union, has steadily increased its pressure throughout the Mid-East in the last year.

In the field of religion they have used the services of embittered or ambitious sheikhs and mullahs to further Soviet propaganda.

WIN ALLIANCES

In areas where virtually all political parties are suppressed, Communists have succeeded in achieving alliances, joining dissident groups to work against the established authority.

In Iran, on the eastern flank of the West's civilization, communism is strong and better organized than any other political group. In Arab lands—Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, Jordan—the party is still in the conspiratorial stage, but extremely active on a small scale.

Communist sympathies abound among refugees from Israel camped in Arab countries.

In exploiting differences between Arabs and the West, the Communists have not overlooked the Moslem religion. Religious leaders lured to Moscow or Iran Curtain countries are given the full treatment and return home to preach that communism is Islam's friend. They overlook the fate of millions of Moslems under Soviet domination.

Such Arabs have been sold an anti-Zion bill of goods. They quote the old Arab proverb: "The enemy of my enemy is my friend."

Dies On Way Home From Florida Trip

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — R. L. (Bob) Stratton, former district manager of the Bell Telephone Company, died of a heart attack Saturday in Petersburg, Virginia, on his way home from a holiday trip to Florida.

In the course of his career with the telephone company which started May 1, 1900, he served in London, Hamilton, Owen Sound, Woodstock, Chatham and Brantford—but most of the period here: from 1927 to 1939 as city manager and from then until Jan 1 of this year when he retired as district manager.

Mr. Stratton was regional commissioner for Western Ontario of the Boy Scouts Association.

$50,000 Fire Sweeps Casket Factory

HAILEYBURY (CP) — A $50,000 fire swept through the casket division of the Cobalt Manufacturing Company here Sunday night, and left the owner's family of eight homeless.

The blaze, fought by both the Haileybury and Cobalt fire departments, levelled the plant, which included an apartment where Mr. and Mrs. Paul Oblin, owner of the factory, and their six children lived.

Firemen concentrated their efforts on saving adjoining property, soaking the exterior of both the Matabanic and Lakeshore hotels, threatened by the raging flames.

More than 100 finished caskets were destroyed in the factory which employs 18 workers. Little insurance was carried.

Pushes Opponent Through Glass Door

LINDSAY (ENS) — An argument between two Lindsay women on Saturday reached the violent stage. To emphasize her point one of the women shoved the other through a large plate-glass door of a men's wear store on Main St.

The winner of this brief encounter apparently cooled off rapidly. Later she went to the police station and contritely told of her part in the affray.

No charges were laid and all is forgiven. Though she may have to pay a bill for the broken glass door.

Grant Approved

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has approved a grant of $215,333.33 to Brantford General hospital for the purpose of supplying to 210 active treatment beds and 16 nursery basinettes. The grant was announced today in the legislature.

One-Time Look

CASTLE DONINGTON, England (CP)—An ancient inn in this Leicestershire town was purchased by a chain-store company for conversion to a meat and fish shop. Council ruled that its historic bow-window must be retained to match the rest of the street.

Music Features Rally Service

HAVELOCK (ENS). — The Rally Day service, at the Havelock Baptist Mission Sunday school on Sunday morning, conducted by Pastor L. Bigelow, had a record attendance of 73.

The scripture reading was given by Paul Martin; a duet, "Open The Door For The Children," was sung by Beth and Eleanor Brumwell. Recitations were given by Faye Thompson and Sherron McLean; a piano solo, "No Room," was played by Shirley Taylor; two solos were sung by Minnie Martin: the "Wordless Book" was by Clifford Clark"; piano solos, "Zaccheus" and "Beautiful Little Eyes" by Gail Baptie; four action choruses were sung by the school.

The first prize in the memory verse contest was won by Eleanor Brumwell for saying 17 verses with refences. The second prize went to Leone Baptie for eight verses with references. Eleanor Brumwell was also the prize winner of the super sword drill.

Easter crosses were given all the other participants in the drill as a consolation award. Ona Lee Curry won the prize from bringing the most visitors to the service.

Prizes for perfect attendance for the first quarter went to Sherron McLean, Timothy Bigelow, Clifford Clark, James Hoard.

Palm Sunday Hymn Composed By Rector

ROSENEATH (ENS)—A special Palm Sunday service was conducted at St. James' Anglican Church Sunday afternoon by the rector, the Rev. A. J. Patstone.

The chancel of the church was decorated with palms. A hymn "Hosanna" was sung. The words and music were composed by the Rev. A. J. Patstone.

During the service tribute was paid to the memory and influence of the late Queen Mary with special prayers for the Royal Family.

Capture 46 Agents

TOKYO (AP)—The Red China radio said today that 46 armed agents of the UN Far East command, disguised as members of the Korean Red army, were captured "within a few days after they had been air-dropped in February." The broadcast said the agents were under orders to wreck factories, rail lines, bridges and warehouses and to assassinate government officials in North Korea.

CBC Board Approves 7 Applications

OTTAWA (CP)—The— CBC board of governors today recommended approval of applications for privately-owned television stations in Hamilton, London, Sudbury and Windsor, Ont., Quebec City, Saint John, N. B., and Sydney, N. S.
OTTAWA—1st add cbc television

The 11-member board recommended against an application for a privately-owned station in Kitchener, because the applicants contemplated using a channel allocated to the Toronto area.

Recommendations of the board, issued following a three-day meeting here last week, will be passed on to the licensing authority in the transport department. The board's recommendations are almost invariably accepted.

The applications were the first to be handled by the board since the government announced in November its new policy on television.

OUTSIDE AREAS

The government announced that privately-owned television stations would be permitted in areas not now served or to be served by the publicly-owned CBC. The CBC has stations in Toronto and Montreal and plans others in Ottawa, Winnipeg, Vancouver and Halifax.

The Hamilton station will be operated by Niagara Television Limited. The coompany is made up of three firms now operating radio stations in Hamilton—Maple Leaf Broadcasting Company, operator of station CHML; Wentworth Broadcasting Company, operator of station CKOC; and the Hamilton Spectator of station CJSH-FM.

The London Free Press Printing Company Limited will operate the station in London. At a public session Friday, the CBC board was told the aim will be to have the station in operation by November.

Radio station CKSO of Sudbury will operate the TV outlet there. The board was told that at the outset the station will depend largely on programs supplied by the CBC.

SATISFACTORY APPLICATION

In giving approval to the Hamilton, London and Sudbury applications, the board said in each case:

"In the opinion of the board the application is satisfactory; and the station would give national service coverage as well as providing local service. It is technically acceptable. The proposed station would provide an adequate service to the region it is intended to serve."

The Windsor station will be operated by Western Ontario Broadcasting Limited, owners of radio station CKLW. The board said:

"The board recommends approval of this application on the understanding that the station would be fully obligated to carry available national program service at times specified. It is technically acceptable. The proposed station would provide an adequate service to the region it is intended to serve."

The application for a TV station at Kitchener was made by Central Ontario Television Limited. Famous Players Canadian Corporation would hold 50 per cent of the stock. The remainder would be split between Carl A. Pollock, Kitchener industrialist, and Gilbert Liddle, one of the owners of radio stations CKCR in Kitchener.

DUPLICATE SERVICE

In recommending denial of the application, the board said:

"The station as proposed with very wide coverage would to a large extent duplicate service from other stations. The board does not believe that for this purpose it would be justified in recommending the transfer of a channel allocated to the Toronto area.

"The board does not believe it would be desirable to have a station serving more immediately the area around Kitchener. At the same time it wishes to point out that cognizance must be taken of channel availabilities."

Will Study Return To Gold Standard

WASHINGTON (AP) — The idea of the United States returning to the gold standard, after 20 years off it, will be studied by an independent research agency at the request of Senator Hugh Butler (Rep. Neb.)

The finance committee member, in announcing this Sunday night, said his request was based on overwhelmingly favorable replies to questionnaires sent to 15,000 U. S. business and industry leaders.

Under a gold standard system, a specified weight of gold represents the value of money, which is exchangeable for its equivalent in gold.

Discover Grandmother Undercover Operator

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Mrs. Edith Macia, 68, told the congressional committee on un-American activities Saturday that she had been an undercover operator for the federal bureau of investigation in cells of the Communist party for five years.

The gray-haired grandmother read names of some 120 participants in three Communist party units. She told of scribbling the names in a concealed notebook during party meetings from 1943 through 1948.

The list was reported to consist almost entirely of obscure individuals with the exception of Mrs. Sarah Kusnitz. Mrs. Macia concurred with the committee suggestion that Mrs. Kusnitz had been identified as a sister of a member of the Soviet Union's polit-

Passenger Receives Minor Injuries

A passenger received minor injuries Saturday in a two-car, $800 damage accident at the intersection of Rose and St. Catherines St. Drivers involved were Harvey Weidner of 472 King George St. and James LaVack of 678 Erskine Ave.

Weidner was driving north on St. Catherines and had entered the intersection of Rose St., when his car was in collision with LaVack's who was driving west on Rose.

Mrs. Harvey Weidner received bruises to her right forearm and right knee, cuts on her left hand and cuts around her left eye.

Damage to Weidner's car was estimated at $300 and to LaVack's, $500.

PC Jack Wilson investigated.

RCAF To Evacuate Injured Motorist

EDMONTON (CP) — An RCAF search and rescue plane left Edmonton Sunday to evacuate a severely injured American motorist from Fort Nelson, B. C.

The motorist, Charles Lee Mott of Pasco, Wash., suffered a spinal fracture when his car left the Alaska Highway at mile 335, five miles north of Fort Nelson and 500 miles northwest of Edmonton.

One report said Mott's car went over a cliff.

Aboard the plane were an RCAF doctor and a nursing sister. The pilot was M. G. Bryan of Fort William.

Protection Poor

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The head of the federal civil defence organization said Sunday night that seven out of 10 Russian planes could penetrate United States' defences to drop atomic bombs. Val Peterson, interviewed on the television show, said, "They (the Russians) can put one or more atomic bombs in every high priority industrial area in America at one time."

Pipeline Law Signed In Michigan

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Legislation permitting construction of the world's second largest pipeline to carry Canadian oil across Michigan was signed into law by Governor G. Mennen Williams today.

The measure authorizes the state conservation commission to grant easements for the laying of the pipeline across state land and under the Straits of Mackinac.

It will permit the Lakehead Pipeline Co., to extend a pipeline now ending at Superior, Wis., across the upper peninsula, under the Straits of Mackinac and through northeastern Michigan to Port Huron where it will go into Canada at Sarnia, Ont.

COSTS $0,000,000

The route across Michigan is expected to cost $60,000,000.

The governor said the Michigan public service commission is expected to issue a permit for the pipeline construction within a few days.

"The construction of the pipeline, permitted under this legislation," Williams said, "is but another step in the joint defence effort of the American and Canadian governments, which have long recognized the need for crude oil transportation from northwest Canadian oil fields.

"The effect of such a project should soon be evident in a general stimulus to our northern economy as well as providing Michigan refineries with an additional source of supply of crude oil."

Driver Admits Two Charges After Accident

LINDSAY (ENS)—Alan McGee, 22, of Lindsay was fined a total of $40.15 after pleading guilty today in magistrate's court to a charge of leaving the scene of an accident. His driving licence was automatically suspended.

McGee pleaded guilty after Lindsay police found that his car had struck a parked truck owned by Harry Griffiths of Lindsay on March 21. He had then driven away.

A four-hour search ended when Sgt. Gordon Eberts and Constable John Hanley found the car at a service station. A sheet of chrome stripping from McGee's car was torn off at the scene of the accident on William St. N.

FENDER REMOVED

Police noticed that the fender that struck the Griffiths car had been removed and they charged Harry Thompson, a mechanic, with failing to report the damage. In a separate trial in magistrate's court today the charge against Thompson was dismissed. He said McGee had assured him that he would report the damage to the police himself.

Crown Attorney Lorne W. Jordan said Thompson had probably been taken in by McGee and he had removed the fender in apparent good faith.

McGee told the court that he must have been asleep when the car collided with the truck. He said he thought the damaged fender was from an accident the week before.

Heavy damage was reported to the second car.

FARMER SUCCEEDS DAWES

TORONTO (CP)—Ken Farmer, a 40-year-old boyish-looking accountant who played with Canada's 1936 Olympic hockey team took over as president of the Canadian Olympic Association Saturday.

He replaced A. Sydney Dawes, 64, of Montreal, who held the job for the last seven years. Dawes declined to run this year. However, he continues as the Canadian representative to the International Olympic Committee.

The association approved members' reports on Canada's 22nd placing at the Olympics last year.

Dawes said after the election: "I'm too old for this job. It's the kind of a position that should be passed along to younger men; vigorous men who will do a lot of good for sport. Ken is a great fellow for the job."

Other officers named: Treasurer, A. W. Parrish of Hamilton, who succeeded Alexander Muir of Hamilton; secretary, M. Howard Radford of Montreal; vice-presidents, Prof. Nelson C. Hart of the University of Western Ontario, London; Jim Worrall of Toronto, Ken MacKenzie of Vancouver and Muir.

Members unanimously approved the reports, including Dawes' rundown on Canada's showing last year.

Dawes wasn't making any excuses for the performance but said he found it "unfair to say that their (the athletes) showing was anything to be ashamed of." Using the 1952 games—in which Canada won only one gold medal—as a yardstick, he made suggestions for the future, particularly in the rowing, paddling, track and field and cycling divisions.

He said there was a need of specially-designed indoor tanks for paddlers and oarsmen—equipment which other countries have. Tanks provide for winter training and afford coaches an opportunity of perfecting proper techniques.

On cycling, he said if Canada is to continue sending competitors to the Olympics, there should be a 400-metre velodrome in this country.

Approve 2 Major Rugby Rule Changes

By GRAHAM TROTTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP)—The Canadian Rugby Union ended a surprisingly harmonious annual meeting Saturday by approving two major playing rule changes and giving unofficial blessing to an August, 1954, Shrine Bowl all-star game.

Along with the shift in CRU voting control from the minor leagues to the East's Big Four and the Western Interprovincial Football Union, retention of the eight-man American import quota and the increase in Grey Cup seat prices, these two features ranked as the top business of the two-day meeting.

At no time in the meeting, which installed Sarnia's Norm Perry as 1953 CRU president, was it necessary for the two big conferences to use their commanding voting power. Absence of any heated debate was conspicuous.

RULE CHANGES

1. Any pass thrown in a forward direction, including the shovel or screen pass, is regarded as a forward pass whether or not it crosses the line of scrimmage. Blocking by linemen 10 yards ahead of the receiver is permitted as before on the shovel pass, thrown behind the line of scrimmage to a receiver also behind the line.

2. Unlimited blocking by the receiving team on kickoffs from one goal line to the other—not just to the line of kickoff as last year—provided the receiving club has at least six men within 10 yards of the line of kickoff at the instant the ball is kicked.

3. Use of a tee permitted on kickoffs if the ball is not elevated more than one inch above the ground.

4. A 15-yard penalty to teams taking "unfair" advantage of free player substitution to set up a "sleeper" play.

5. When the receiving side on a kickoff has fewer than the required six men within the restraining zones, the kicking side will be awarded the kick again 10 yards ahead of the previous kickoff line, dispensing with the former illegal interference penalty.

CLARIFY ROUGHING

The rule-makers, at the insistence of the WIFU, clarified their "roughing the passer" definition by stipulating that a passer must not be hit, either intentionally or unintentionally, at the moment he passes the ball.

The all-star benefit game, suggested to the CRU by Winnipeg's Khartum Shrine Temple through WIFU past-president Ralph Misener, will be acted upon by the CRU executive after further investigation by Misener.

Suggest Charity Game For Grey Cup Champions

EDMONTON (CP)—A charity game in August, 1954, between next fall's Grey Cup champions and the 1953 all-stars of two major football leagues is a distinct possibility and may become an annual affair.

Brain-child of Winnipeg's Khartum Shrine Temple, the idea was brought before the Canadian Rugby Union annual meeting Saturday by Ralph Misener of Winnipeg and won unofficial support. Misener, past president of the Western Inter-provincial Football Union, was requested to investigate further and report back to the CRU executive.

PLAYED IN BIG CITY

The game would be played in some large Canadian city a week before the regular football season opens.

The "dream" squad opposing the Grey Cup champions probably would be made up of the official all-stars of the Big Four and the WIFU. Any all-stars on the Grey Cup winner would play for their own team.

Misener noted that football had a chance through such a game to raise between $125,000 and $250,000 for crippled children.

Move Afoot To Give Unity To All African Peoples

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A ranking Negro leader says there is a move afoot by non-whites to give unity to all the African peoples' struggle for equality with their white rulers.

Nelson Mandela, Transvaal provincial secretary of the African National Congress, said a pan-African congress may be called some time this year.

"We want to insure that all the genuine national movements on the continent do not deviate into anti-white racialism," he said in an interview Sunday. "If some nationalism were to take that form he who fights for freedom might be faced with intervention of some great powers, including the United States."

If the congress materializes, a common program of action will be submitted for adoption by such movements as South Africa's non-white defiance campaign, the Kenya Africa Union, the African democratic rally in French colonial territory, the African national Congresses of Southern and Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, the Convention Peoples party led by Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah in Britain's Gold Coast colony, and by similar movements in such territories as Nigeria, Uganda and Tanganyika.

The move comes at a time of tension south of the Sahara, where the black man is awakening. About three million whites now rule 160 million non-whites.

In the Union of South Africa, black-white relations form the main issue of the crucial April 15 election. Nearly 9,000, mostly Negroes, have been jailed for purposely breaking Jim Crow laws. The African National Congress, the political organization which speaks for most of the country's educated Negroes, claims to have multiplied its paid membership nearly five times to a total of 120,000 since the Gandhi-like passive resistance campaign began.

In Kenya the fanatical Mau Mau terrorizes whites and blacks alike, threatening to turn that Shangri-la of the empire into another strife-torn Malaya.

In Central Africa tribal chiefs are reported to have conferred with some labor unions on ways of resisting a proposed federation of Southern and Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, in which they fear they would lose some of the protection now afforded by the colonial office.

World's Greatest Athlete, Jim Thorpe Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Stalwart Jim Thorpe, 64, the Oklahoma Indian who became a veritable colossus in the world of athletics, died Saturday.

He suffered a heart attack in his modest trailer in suburban Lomita where he lived with his wife Patricia.

The news of his death brought words of tribute from men who played with him and writers who described him as "incomparable" and "the greatest athlete of all time."

The most talked-about sports figure of his day in football, track and field and later in big league baseball, Thorpe had suffered two previous heart attacks, one in 1943 and another last year.

After the glory years for Jim at the early part of the century there were some hard times. Several years ago he was discovered digging ditches. But some of the glory returned three years ago when sports writers and broadcasters of the United States, in an Associated Press poll, voted him the outstanding male athlete of the first half of the 20th century.

FAME AT SCHOOLS

It has been more than 40 years since Thorpe, born on a farm near Prague, Okla., gained his first fame at Carlisle Indian school. Playing with this little school, usually outmanned and outweighed in games against big eastern colleges, he scored 25 touchdowns and racked up a 198-point total in 1912.

In the Olympics that year, with almost no specialized training, he set point totals in the decathlon and pentathlon which stood for 20 years.

King Gustav V of Sweden told him: "Sir, you are the greatest athlete in the world."

But later his medals and trophies of the games were taken from him because it was discovered that he had violated the strict Olympic amateur code by playing professional baseball for $60 a month.

MADE TEAM

He made Walter Camp's all-American football team in 1911 and 1912. Then he played professional football and baseball for 16 years.

During his baseball career, Thorpe played for New York Giants and Boston where he batted .327 in 60 games. He played for Cincinnati for six years and later wound up his career in the minors at the age of 40.

Man Questioned Regarding Five Policies

REGINA (CP)—Saskatchewan's Crown corporations committee Saturday ended its 16th day of hearings on allegations of corruption in the handling of government insurance.

M. F. Allore, general manager of the Saskatchewan government insurance office, underwent close cross-examination regarding allegations that he took commission kickbacks from one of his company's agents.

Questioned at length about a list of five insurance policies, premiums and commissions, with a calculation of 40 per cent of the commissions allegedly in his handwriting, Mr. Allore said there were several possible explanations of the calculations.

Mr. Allore said he had suggested to Mr. Rawluk that he take another man into his firm to concentrate on the contract bonding business. The calculations could have related to discussions with Mr. Rawluk concerning possible remuneration for additional employees.

Mr. Allore said that when he first saw the exhibit he thought it was in his handwriting. He was prepared now to say only that it appeared to be in his handwriting.

Questioned about a cheque on Mr. Rawluk's personal account endorsed by himself and William George, Mr. Allore said he remembered cashing the cheque for Mr. Rawluk but couldn't remember where or when. He said it was possible Mr. George had cashed it for him, but it was also possible that someone else had cashed it for him and had not endorsed it when turning it over to Mr. George.

In an affidavit sworn out last May 23, Mr. Rawluk, former manager of Financial Agencies Limited in Regina, said his company had paid commission kickbacks of 40 per cent on certain government insurance policies to Mr. Allore and Provincial Treasurer C. M. Fines.

Mr. Rawluk alleged that the kickbacks were paid from salary cheques made payable to his wife, who was on the payroll of Financial Agencies but was not actually employed by the company. Mr. Fines and Mr. Allore have both denied the allegations under oath.

New Amnesty May Lead To Easing Of War Tension

By MICHAEL NEWMARCH

LONDON (AP)—Russia's sweeping new criminal amnesty may be the tipoff that Prime Minister Georgi Malenkov wants to ease cold-war tensions, some British diplomats believe.

Russia's harsh internal discipline often bears a direct relationship to foreign policy strains, these sources said, and there are several signs that Malenkov may aim at easing the bitter relations with the West established by his predecessor, Joseph Stalin.

It often has happened in the past that a tightening of discipline at home has coincided with deteriorating relations between Russia and the outside world, and vice versa.

However, the current signs that Malenkov may be feeling genial toward the West are not strong enough to change the West's present policy, and British officials are keeping an open mind on the whole issue until Soviet intentions become clearer.

PRESENT PICTURE

This is the way the picture looks now to some of the men who have been following the situation closely:

1. The whole issue is so big that great care must be taken to avoid jumping to conclusions.

The amnesty, which will free many thousands of Russians serving jail terms of five years and under, may be unrelated to wider issues.

It could be that Malenkov wants to begin his regime by courting popularity among the Russian population, and an amnesty is a quick and easy way of doing so.

2. But over long periods in the past, the harshness of Russia's internal discipline has shown obvious links with foreign affairs.

In 1947 Russia's penal code was amended and on May 26 the same year the death penalty was abolished. Many observers at the time figured the move indicated the emergence of a Kremlin group which believed there was a long peace ahead, and that the Soviets were confident they could achieve their foreign objectives without aggression.

But on Jan. 13, 1950 the death penalty was reimposed for "traitors, spies and saboteurs," and a few months later the Korean war began.

"The link is tenuous, but it is evidence for what it is worth. No one but a fool, however, would reach firm conclusions on this sort of testimony alone," one diplomat said.

Lindsay Victorious In School Bonspiel

LINDSAY— (ENS) — A Lindsay rink skipped by John Laidley won the annual Lindsay Collegiate bonspiel main event final here Saturday, scoring a decisive win over a fellow Lindsayite, Maurice Pennock.

In the secondary event of the 'spiel Jack Moseley of Lindsay won over Logan of Oshawa. The third event went to T. Patton's Oshawa rink, who beat Lanny Staples, of the Post club.

Rinks from Hamilton, Kitchener, Waterloo, Guelph, Oshawa, Peterborough, Haliburton, Blackstock and Woodville took part in the two-day 'spiel which saw some good school-boy curling, but which also saw Bobby Walker, Dominion champion, eliminated from the main event, in the second round and Moseley, Ontario runner-up do the same.

Disease Broke Out In Korea Not Likely To Invade West

DR. EDWIN P. JORDAN, MD
(Written for NEA Service).

A good many people have been disturbed and puzzled by reports in the newspapers or through the grapevine of a new and mysterious disease which broke out among United Nations and United States personnel in Korea about the middle of 1951.

It is now possible to discuss some features of this illness, since reports on it have begun to appear in the medical journals.

The disease is now known as epidemic hemorrhagic fever. It was first studied by the Japanese more than 10 years ago, and so far as anyone knows, it is not likely to constitute a danger to residents of the North American continent.

The symptoms are said to involve three stages: First is invasion, in which the victim becomes suddenly acutely ill with chills and fever, headache, backache, and general muscular aching. After a short time the toxic stage begins. The patient is likely to feel worse and severe vomiting is not unusual. At this time the urine is likely to show blood and albumin. The final stage is convalescence, and this lasts from three to six weeks.

Ninety-three out of 100 stricken by epidemic hemorrhagic fever recover. In those who recover there do not seem to be any lasting effects nor have there been any second attacks.

As is the case so often when a new disease develops, neither the cause nor the way in which it is spread are yet known. The indications are that it is probably a virus or a rickettsia, both small living organisms less easy to identify than ordinary germs.

Also, as with many newly found diseases, a good specific treatment has yet to be discovered. The most successful management, the medical reports say, seems to be bed rest, good nursing care, and measures aimed at the relief of symptoms.

Naturally, the appearance of epidemic hemorrhagic fever in the combat zones of Korea produced intense activity on the part of those medically responsible. They set to work with the most commendable zeal and have already made long strides in the understanding of this disease, even though there is much still to learn.

Parents, wives and others close to our men in Korea can feel that the chances are excellent that this disease will not strike. If it should the chances for recovery are good, and finally, that everything which can be done is being done.

Gallery Acquires 3 Masterpieces

OTTTAWA (CP)—The National Gallery has acquired three great European masterpieces from the hand of two of Europe's finest artists.

One of them is the 17th century oil, "Bathsheba at her Toilet," by the famed Dutch painter, Rembrandt.

The other two are from the hand of Philippino Lippi, great 15th century Italian artist. They are from the series, "The Life of Esther," depicting with the simplicity of early Florentine art the moving story of the biblical queen.

Citizenship Minister Harris Saturday announced details of the three purchases, made from an undisclosed European collection.

The purchases, giving the gallery the first great Rembrandt in a Canadian public art collection, were made on the advice of the noted British art expert, W. G. Constable, Mr. Harris said.

The cost, disclosed in the Commons Friday, was $276,000.

NATO Air Arm Celebrates Second Birthday

FONTAINEBLEAU, France (CP)—Allied Air Forces Central Europe, an air arm of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization defence system, observes its second anniversary April 2.

AAFCE started from scratch. Two years ago the AAFCE commander, Gen. Lauris Norstad, arrived in Fontainebleau with the headquarters in his pocket—in the form of an instructional letter from Dwight Eisenhower, then commander of Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE).

Airfields now sprout into operational existence at the rate of one a week.

Built or being built in AAFCE's area are 13 in Holland, 14 in Belgium, 30 in Western Germany, 41 in France and one in Luxembourg. Royal Canadian Air Force officers and men, flying 300 Canadian-built Sabre jets, will be based on four of these fields next year.

DEFENCE FACTOR

Radar surveillance is maintained daily for several hours from the sea-girt border of Danish Jutland to the Swiss Alps and from the Iron Curtain to the English channel.

National air chiefs or representatives of AAFCE contributing countries, including Air Vice-Marshal F. L. Miller, RCAF vice-chief of staff, recently heard Air Vice-Marshal John L. Plant of the RCAF outline details of the jet fuel pipeline web across France to airfield sites.

Accelerated development of two Allied tactical air forces is another part of the 1953 program.

Canada, which supplies nine per cent of the AAFCE headquarters personnel at present, is primarily interested in the 4th Allied Tactical Air Force. Her NATO commitment will be the 1st RCAF air division, commanded by Air Vice-Marshal Hugh Campbell. France and the United States will provide the remaining men and equipment.

CANUCKS PROMINENT

Canadians occupy key spots throughout the growing organization.

Plant was appointed assistant chief of staff for logistics and later one of Norstad's three deputies. Group Capt. Cavendish Carling-Kelly of Toronto specializes in manpower and organization, Group Capt. George Elms of Toronto in plans and policy matters and Group Capt. E. C. (Ted) Luke of Ottawa in airfield facilities.

Typical of Canadian adjustability is Flt. Lt. Lester E. Steadman of Bridgewater, N.S., special services officer who maintains an athletic and physical fitness program in tune with sports traditions of six countries.

Plant succinctly stated AAFCE's original aim at a 1951 logistics meeting when he declared that the "time has come to consider whether we should have one Allied air force or six little ones."

Canadians are among those hardest at work on the problem of moulding allocated units into a "single integrated force."

ONE VEHICLE SOLVES TWO PROBLEMS — When insufficient track facilities stopped Federal German Railway trains from going to certain sections of the country, the railway engineers came up with this unusual vehicle. It is a railroad car which can be converted to a bus by raising the steel railroad wheels and lowering the rubber tires. The rail-bus is on exhibition at the International Automobile Exhibition at Frankfurt, Germany.

United States Popularity Waning In Western Europe

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

LONDON (AP)—A U. S. traveller in Western Europe who has been here before may be aware these days of a little chill in an atmosphere once altogether friendly.

There are exceptional spots. The American is still welcome in Spain the Republic of Ireland and in Scandinavia. He is tops in The Netherlands, where American assistance in the recent floods was deeply appreciated.

But Associated Press reports indicate that in such lands as Britain, France, Italy, Austria and even Greece, American prestige has fallen a little.

The reasons seem obvious:

There are hundreds of thousands of American soldiers on occupation and defensive duties in some countries. It hurts a country's pride to see foreign soldiers around.

HOUSING SHORTAGE

American troops and civilian administrators have made the chronic European housing shortage more acute.

The Americans have more money, better food and clothing and bigger automobiles, and prosperity arouses envy.

On the political side there is uneasiness about the vigor with which the U. S. is insisting on stepped-up defence programs.

Western Germany with 250,000 U. S. troops sees more Americans than other lands but there is no obvious anti-American trend. The Americans are changing from an occupation force to a defence force and the U. S. was the first of the victor countries to ratify the West German peace contract.

FRENCH MORE VOCAL

The French are perhaps more vocal than others in finding fault with the U. S.

First, the U. S. wants to have Western Germany rearmed promptly. France opposes.

Second, the U. S. voted to place on the United Nations agenda the complaints of Tunis and Morocco against the French colonial administration. France regarded the vote a humiliation.

Third, the U. S. wants France to institute internal reforms to reduce the need for American aid.

About 45,000 U. S. soldiers are stationed in Britain, where they read and hear both abuse and hot defence of Americans. Where circumstances permit, they fit snugly into the British community.

WIN COMMENDATION

They have won much commendation for the swift efficiency with which they show up whenver there is a disaster in Britain.

However, Anglo-American relations involve far more than troops here with Britain's approval. Political, economic and military relationships run hot and cold.

An unofficial Anglo-American committee, on which American embassy officials are represented, has inquired into causes of friction between American soldiers and British civilians, and has concluded that there are not many.

Not so obvious but real, is British resentment against the infiltration of all that is meant by the "American way of life."

Rightly or wrongly, many Europeans, complain of American "canned culture."

Open Special Lab. To Help Fight Strange Disease

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

CHICAGO (AP)—A business man felt that something ought to be done about a mystery disease, so there's a new laboratory now at the University of Chicago medical school.

The mystery ailment is ulcerative colitis, a stubborn, damaging, dangerous disease that strikes mainly at youngsters and young adults. A considerable number of patients die.

Its victims get tiny ulcers or sores lining the intestines. The sores bleed at the slightest irritation. Colitis brings fever, diarrhea, infections, often alarming loss of weight, vitamin deficiencies, sometimes skin diseases, sometimes complications which can blind the eyes.

How widespread it is is not known.

Perhaps thousands of people suffer from it. It may be claiming more and more victims.

NO CAUSE KNOWN

No specific cause is known, no germ has been proved to be responsible. Emotions are strongly involved, but it's not purely emotional or psychosomatic. Doctors have been stymied in finding any sustained cure.

In face of this frustration, Leo Wallach of Chicago, whose son had a long battle with colitis, took up the cudgels against the disease. He is providing funds to maintain an ulcerative colitis laboratory, contributing money himself, obtaining more from friends and anyone he can interest.

Dr. Joseph Kirsner is directing the lab's research. He feels that "emotions plus some biologic 'X' are involved in causing colitis," but the "X" factor is not yet pinned down.

GROW WEAKER

The disease feeds on itself. The patient gets weaker, more worried and the disease gets worse. The condition may improve temporarily, then take a downswing. Emotional stress, colds or other respiratory infections, improper eating all may trigger another severe attack.

Most patients ultimately recover, but usually only after a long battle. Those who do recover, says Kirsner, say that "controlling their tmotions is very important in staying well."

As yet, no one even knows how widespread ulcerative colitis is. One step may be to poll doctors to learn how many victims there are. There's some sentiment also to form an organization to assist severe cases financially.

Massive Jewel Crown To Be Used For Elizabeth

By RONALD MACLURKIN

LONDON (Reuters) —Queen Elizabeth II will be crowned June 2 with a massive gold and jewelled crown which would give her a headache if she wore it for more than a few minutes.

The crown of England, weighing nearly seven pounds, is too heavy for a queen.

With its diamonds flashing on the strong television arc lights, it will be put on her head only for the actual moment of the crowning, then replaced with the lighter, but more valuable, crown of state.

This weighs about 39 ounces and is the one the Queen will wear as she drives through the streets of London in her golden coach after the ceremony in Westminster Abbey and on all future state occasions at which the sovereign wears a crown.

PART OF CROWN JEWELS

These two crowns are part of the crown jewels. Gold and precious stones worth £20,000,000 will be used during the Coronation ceremony.

The jewels are kept in Wakefield Towers, a former prison in the Tower of London where the walls are eight feet thick. They are surrounded by iron bars and modern electric devices to discourage theft.

Only one man, Col. Blood, ever managed to steal the crown jewels and he didn't get away with them.

In 1671, Blood and three companions overpowered 77-year-old Talbot Edwards, assistant keeper of the regalia, and were about to make off with the jewels.

But old Edwards, whose friendship and confidence Blood had patiently acquired over a period of time, managed to bring help with his shouts and the thieves were surrounded as they ran for their horses.

Oddly, King Charles II personally examined Blood and let him off without punishment. In fact, he rewarded him, for some unknown reason, with some Irish estates.

REALLY IMITATION

The crown of England, also known as St. Edward's crown, is really an imitation. Oliver Cromwell, who once abolished the monarchy and became England's dictator, looked on the original crown jewels as "baubles" and allowed them to be destroyed. St. Edward's crown was melted down.

When King Charles II returned to the throne, he ordered a copy made of the original crown. All monarchs of England have been crowned with this copy ever since.

The crown of state, personal crown of the sovereign, was altered from reign to reign according to the taste of its wearer. The last time it was re-modelled was by order of Queen Victoria.

One of its biggest jewels is a ruby given to Edward, the Black Prince of England, by Pedro the Cruel of Castile, a medival Spanish ruler. Pedro gave it to the prince as a reward for helping him to put down a revolt.

The crown of state is also decorated with pearls said to have come from earrings worn by Queen Elizabeth I. It contains part of the Cullinan diamond, largest in the world, found in South Africa in 1905.

Besides these gems it contains four rubies, 11 emeralds, 16 sapphires, 277 pearls and 2,783 diamonds.

Other parts of the regalia to be used are scepters, orbs, state swords, spurs, bracelets and the coronation ring.

The important scepter is the royal scepter with the cross This is made of gold, richly jewelled and about three feet long. Inserted in its head is another large section of the Cullinan diamond.

The orb is a globe of solid gold about six inches in diameter surmounted by a cross symbolizing Christianity's domination of the world.

The golden eagle, or ampulla, escaped Cromwell's vandals. Made in the 14th century it is a vessel of pure gold. The head unscrews to admit the perfumed holy oil which is poured out through the beak.

The silver anointing spoon, into which the oil is run, also eluded Cromwell and dates from the 12th century.

Among all the glittering objects which will surround the young Queen June 2, only one will be new. This is the Coronation ring—or wedding ring of England—which will be placed on her finger to symbolize the marriage between sovereign and people.

This is newly made for each king or queen, and afterwards becomes royal personal property.

Britain - U.S. Conferring On Red China's PoW Offer

Beat Patrolman Brings In Moon-Mad Suspect

LONDON (CP)—John Reginald Christie, Britain's most hunted man, was taken meekly by police today and grilled six hours about the grisly "murder house" strangling of six, and possibly seven, women. Crowds of curious milled outside the police station in suburban Putney were Christie was brought for questioning by Scotland Yard's ace detectives. The 56-year-old clerk, unshaven and shabbily dressed, was recognized by an alert policeman who saw him strolling along the street in Putney suburb, near the Thames.

It was only five miles from the murder house in London's drab Notting Hill gate district where Christie lived before his disappearance a week ago.

SADISTIC ORGIES

The bodies of four women, including Christie's wife, were found sealed beneath the floor and walls of the house. The remains of two and possibly three others were found in the garden where police are still digging for possible other victims. The women had been strangled in sadistic sex orgies.

Christie had been the object of the greatest manhunt in London since the days of Jack the Ripper more than 60 years ago.

Thomas Ledger, the policeman who spotted him, stopped Christie, asked him to remove his hat and quickly recognized him from pictures widely-circulated throughout Britain.

He challenged him and Christie calmly walked to the local police station in Putney, Thames-side suburb not four miles from the neighborhood in Notting Hill where the shabby murder tenement stands.

BEGIN QUESTIONING

Detectives hurried to the Putney station to question Christie on his knowledge of the grisly contents found in the house a week ago.

Police cordoned off the Notting Hill area early today after being told that Christie was seen sleeping in the back of a truck on a parking lot.

Earlier they were following a theory that he might have gone to the north of England. Every available policeman in northwest London was switched to the district as officers closed in on the site.

But by then the suspect was gone, only to be brought in by patrolman Thomas Ledger.

Ledger spotted his man walking along the main shopping street, Upper Richmond road, in the Putney suburb in bright spring sunshine this morning at 9:10 a. m. Christie went along quietly.

LARGE CROWD GATHERS

As the news spread, a large crowd gathered outside the Putney police station. People jumped off buses, flocked out of nearby stores and houses hoping to catch a glimpse of the face which has stared, with a faint smile, from front pages up and down the country.

Detectives continued to rip up the old tenement searching for more hidden remains. Three young

Morley Plunkett Of Dumbells Dies Suddenly

Morley B. Plunkett, member of the famous Dumbells theatrical group who entertained Canadian troops during the First World War, and played to capacity audiences across Canada in the 1920s and appeared briefly on Broadway, died suddenly Monday at his home at 1298 Monaghan Road. He was 58.

MORLEY B. PLUNKETT

His death came six months after that of fellow trouper Red Newman, who is remembered for his characterization of a flea-harried First World War infantryman and his singing of "Oh, It's a Lovely War." Newman died in Toronto last Sept. 26 at 67.

With his brothers, Mert and Al Plunkett, Newman, Ross Hamilton (as Marjorie, the belle of the Dumbells), Pat Rafferty, Jack McLaren and others, Morley Plunkett played in dozens of cities and towns during the Dumbells' golden years.

The show, an outgrowth of a 3rd division concert party, died when vaudeville died. It was revived briefly at the start of the Second World War and staged before 3,000 veterans and soldiers at Lansdowne Park in Ottawa.

Also during the Second World War, Morley Plunkett was officer in charge of entertainment for Military District No. 3.

In recent years he worked as a salesman for Thomas Gibson and Co. Ltd., Toronto cleaning supplies firm. He lived here since moving from Orillia 14 years ago.

He is survived by his wife, the former Nellie McKee, one daughter Mrs. James Kennedy (Margaret Joan), Halifax, two sons Allan George at home and Douglas Merton, Barrie; three brothers, Capt. Merton Plunkett and Albert of Toronto, and Sidney of Alameda, Calif.

The funeral service will be held Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Comstock funeral home. The Rev. G. S. Maxwell of Trinity United Church will officiate. A service and burial will be held at St. Andrew's Cemetery, Orillia, Thursday at 2:30 p.m.

Develop A-Plant For Submarine

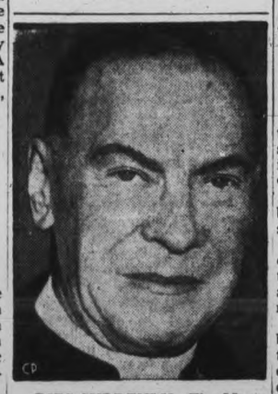
By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's first known version of an atomic power plant to propel a submarine has been placed in operation, the United States atomic energy commission announced today.

The device, a working model of one that eventually will power the navy's atomic sub, the Nautilus, was set in operation on dry land at the AEC's testing station in Arco, Idaho.

The AEC said the "prototype" power plant—that is, the land-locked version of a seagoing type—has "successfully entered its first phase of operation" and will eventually be brought to "full power."

This was the first word that atomic scientists had actually achieved power in a reactor of the type that is expected to allow a submarine to travel many thousands of miles without refuelling and to stay submerged for great lengths of time.



Ontario Legislature Prorogues Thursday

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario legislature will be prorogued Thursday afternoon.

The House almost cleaned up its order paper Monday night, with 84 items dealt with in 6½ hours. At adjournment, Premier Frost said the house will sit at 11 a.m. Wednesday and continue through the day and possibly into a night session.

The house will meet again Thursday at 10 a.m. to clear final items.

The House will not sit today on account of Queen Mary's funeral.

Clark Tests Sincerity Of Proposal

Cautious Optimism Growing About Truce Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)— Gen. Mark Clark's two-point response to apparent Communist moves toward a truce in Korea was designed to test out the sincerity of the Reds, informed officials said today.

There was growing but cautious optimism among the officials that the Communists may really be intent upon making substantial concessions looking to an end to the Korean fighting and perhaps solution of some other problems as well.

President Eisenhower met with the national security council, of which he is chairman, this morning. It afforded an opportunity for the President to join with his top diplomatic and defence advisers in exploring evidence of a shift in the Communist line.

HOLD SESSION

At the state department this afternoon representatives of 16 countries — including Canada — with troops in Korea were to hold one of their regular session. There was no doubt that the Red moves and Allied reaction to them would dominate their discussion. These sessions were begun shortly after the Korean war started more than 2½ years ago to thresh out policy questions.

Gen. Clark, the UN commander, told the Reds he was prepared to have representatives meet with officers from their side to arrange for exchange of sick and wounded prisoners of war.

Chinese and North Korean Red leaders addressed a message to Clark last Saturday accepting a proposal he had made on Feb. 22 for an exchange of sick and wounded PoWs and suggesting that the truce talks be resumed. Monday the Chinese Communist premier, Chou En-lai, broadcast over Peiping radio a proposal for settlement of the problem of exchanging all prisoners of war. His statements suggested to Allied officials here and elsewhere that he might be moving toward agreement with

Atomic Flash Not As Bright

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The third atomic explosion of the spring test series flashed bright in the pre-dawn sky over this desert reosrt today.

The flash, however, was not as brilliant as in the two earlier 1953 shots.

As usual, the atomic energy commission gave no indication of the type of nuclear device detonated at its proving ground 75 miles northwest of here.

In contrast to the first two blasts, on preceding Tuesdays, no troops participated in today's exercise, latest in a series to be climaxed by the firing of the first atomic cannon.

Observers here were puzzled by the fact that five minutes after the explosion, no familiar mushroom cloud was to be seen rising over the Yucca Flat test site.

Police Smash Red Riots Across Italy

By WEBB McKINLEY

ROME (AP)—Club-wielding police smashed Communist riots along the length of the Italian peninsula Monday.

Thousands of demonstrators, including 1,000 in Rome alone, were taken into custody in new riots Monday night. Scores were injured. But there was only one reported fatality—a policeman killed when his riot jeep overturned en route to a demonstration.

Angry Communists resorted to violence after their calls for a 24-hour general strike, in protest against Premier Alcide de Gasperi's new law designed to keep his government in power, had largely failed.

65 PER CENT OF SEATS

The law, passed during a bitter brawl in the Senate Sunday, gives the party or bloc winning 50 per cent of the popular votes at least 65 per cent of the parliamentary seats.

The Communist disorders lacked the steam of similar outbursts just after the war, but nevertheless appeared to be the most serious since 1948.

Four victims of the riots were Associated Press photographer Mario Torrisi and three other news photographers who were clubbed by police and taken into custody temporarily for taking pictures of the violence. All are Italian citizens.

Other riots were reported in Turin, Reggio Emilia, Modena, Udine, Venice, Milan and a dozen other places.

Fiancee Coming, But Driver Killed

TORONTO (CP) — A 44-year-old Czechoslovak truck driver died here Monday night after a traffic accident, the day before his fiancee was due to fly to Canada from Munich, Germany, to marry him.

John Burian, who came to Canada from Germany in January, 1952, died in hospital shortly after his dairy truck was in collision with a coupe in north-central Toronto.

The Canadian Red Cross cabled the German Red Cross today to notify Toni Duchacek at Augsburg that her husband-to-be is dead.

Two nurses riding in the coupe were slightly injured in the crash. Both required hospital treatment, but were allowed to go home.

3 Babies Suffocate Within An Hour

TORONTO (CP)—Three babies suffocated within an hour of each other in Toronto district today. In each case, they had been sleeping in their parent's bed, investigators said.

Firemen made unsuccessful attempts to revive the infants with inhalators.

The babies were Susan MacDonnell, five months; James Baxter, 2½ months; and Alan McDowell, four weeks.

Kings, Queens At Funeral As Queen Mary Buried At Windsor Castle

By ALAN HARVEY

WINDSOR, England (CP)—Queen Mary went to her final rest today in the tomb of 10 British monarchs. In a simple burial service at St. George's, private chapel of the House of Windsor, the coffin of "Grandmother England" was slowly lowered through the chapel floor to rest temporarily in the chancel. Later the coffin of the gentle queen, whose long life spanned the Victorian, Edwardian and Georgian periods, will be taken to the royal tombhouse to lie beside the coffin of her husband, George V.

In the same tombhouse, originally built by George III, lie the bodies of two of the queen's sons—George VI, laid to rest 13 months ago, and the Duke of Kent, killed in a wartime air crash in Scotland in 1942.

At the climax of the service, the present Queen sprinkled earth on the coffin of the grandmother who did so much to school her for her royal duties.

MAKE OBEISANCE

The Queen then led the ladies of the Royal Family past the grave and made a gesture of obeisance to the coffin, which had been lowered beneath the chapel floor.

The funeral service was conducted by the archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, in the choir of the chapel which Edward III set aside in 1348 for knights of the Order of the Garter, Britain's most exalted order of chivalry.

Two of the Queen's favorite hymns were sung at the simple 40-minute service —"Abide With Me" and "Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken."

The Duke of Windsor, eldest of Queen Mary's sons, appeared to show signs of strain.

Among the mourners were half a dozen kings and queens and leading members of foreign royalty, including King Baudouin of the Belgians, Queen Juliana of The Netherlands, Queen Frederika of Greece, ex-king Umberto of Italy, Crown Prince Olaf of Norway, Prince Bertil of Sweden, Prince Nicholas of Yugoslavia, Prince Hussein of Jordan, Prince Georg of Denmark, Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse and the Crown Prince of Luxembourg.

Also in the congregation were great officers of state, leading members of the British cabinet, diplomatic representatives and high military officials.

SIMPLE SERVICE

The simple service, epilogue to a life which encompassed six reigns and saw the evolution of modern Britain, lasted under half an hour. After hymns by the choir and by the congregation the organ then played the Dead March of Saul.

The sun streamed through the large stained glass windows of the chapel, home of six centuries of the oldest order of European chivalry.

The sunlight touched the richly-colored stalls of the Knights and Ladies of the Order of the Garter, to which Queen Mary was admitted in 1910.

With Queen Mary's death there now are only two remaining Ladies of the Garter—Queen Mother Elizabeth and Queen Juliana of The Netherlands. Both were present today.

Queen Mary's coffin, after resting first in the chancel, will be moved in a month or so to the double tomb where the remains of George V are buried. An effigy of the dead king, designed by Sir William Reid Dick, lies on the ledge of the tomb. It shows George V in his uniform as admiral of the fleet. Two angels guard his crown and a lion lies at his feet

When Queen Mary's casket is brought to the tomb, another effigy, in pink marble, will be laid beside that of the king. Queen Mary's effigy also was carved by

Commonwealth Governments Being Consulted

LONDON (AP)—Britain and the United States started an exchange of views today on Red China's offer to break the Korean deadlock. A foreign office spokesman said discussions had been going on all morning between the foreign office, the United States embassy in London, and the state department. Britain is also comparing notes with Commonwealth governments. The foreign office Monday greeted as "very encouraging" Chinese Premier Chou En-lai's proposal that both sides exchange prisoners of war in Korea. Chou suggested that prisoners who refuse to be repatriated should be handed over to "a neutral state."

Canada's chief delegate, Paul Martin, said Monday night the call by Red Chinese Premier Chou En-lai for settlement of the prisoner-of-war issue holding up a Korean armistice was "an important one."

"It overshadows everything now being discussed in the UN. If it is genuine, it could mean an end of the war in Korea and would be the biggest news the world has had in 2½ years."

Chou's offer, broadcast from Peiping Monday, called for returning home after a Korean cease-fire, those prisoners who "insisted" on repatriation and turning the rest over to an unnamed neutral country till their fate was settled.

SIMILAR TO RESOLUTION

To many here, studying the text of the Peiping broadcast, the offer at first glance appeared to accept the principles of the Indian resolution adopted by the assembly last December—and quickly rejected by the Reds after it got a tongue-lashing here by Russia's Andrei Vishinsky.

The British and U.S. delegations left comments to their respective governments in London and Washington.

Indian spokesmen pointed out that they had introduced the resolution last fall only after they had had reason to believe—through their ambassador in Peiping—that the Chinese Reds were ready to accept its compromise principles.

With some amendments demanded by the U.S. and her western Allies, the Indian plan as finally adopted upheld the UN principle that no prisoner would be returned to his homeland by force or retained by force after a Korean truce. In rejecting the plan, the Communists demanded

New England Floods Begin To Recede

BOSTON (AP) — The worst floods in New England since 1936 appeared to be easing in most sections today but the second flood in four days threatened the Ossipee area of New Hampshire.

Emergency crews stood by to evacuate scores of families endangered in both New Hampshire and Maine as fears were expressed that a flood-battered dam on Lake Ossipee at Effingham Falls, N. H., might not hold. The Bearcamp river was rising about an inch an hour before dawn in the New Hampshire area hardest hit by the flood waters during the weekend.

Some 1,200 persons still were not allowed to return to their homes at Mexico, Me., although the Swift and Androscoggin rivers were well below their flood crests. More than 150 families have been evacuated from Biddeford and Saco, Me. The Saco river still was out of bounds but was calming down at its headwaters.

Archbishop Dies Suddenly At Texas Airport

DALLAS, Tex.—The Most Rev. Alexandre Vachon, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Ottawa, died suddenly at the municipal airport here Monday during a 20-minute stopover between planes on a flight from Miami to San Francisco.

The 67-year-old priest, scientist and spiritual leader of some 500,000 Roman Catholics was in the midst of a 3½-month visit to Latin America and Australia as president of his church's permanent committee for international Eucharistic Congresses.

It is expected his body will be returned to Ottawa to be entombed in the cathedral of Notre Dame where, since May 22, 1940, he had guided an ecclesiastical province that stretched from Ottawa and Mont Laurier, Que., to Pembroke Timmins, Hearst and James Bay in Northern Ontario.

In Ottawa, his secretary, Rev. Oscar Archambault said no funeral service will be held before next Tuesday, after the close of Holy Week.

MINGLED SERVICE

Archbishop Vachon, whose life had mingled priesthood, public service and high academic achievement, left Laval University in Quebec City after a brief term as its rector to become archbishop coadjutor of Ottawa on Dec. 11, 1939.

He was soon to become archbishop, for at his consecration Feb. 2, 1940, the Most Rev. J. G. Forbes, 75-year-old archbishop of Ottawa, collapsed and died a few months later. The succession of Archbishop Vachon was automatic.

The present auxiliary bishop of Ottawa, Most Rev. Maxime Tessier, becomes administrator of the Ottawa archdiocese until the Pope appoints a new archbishop.

The high point in the life of the archdiocese was the Marian Congress, organized by Archbishop Vachon in 1947 as a week of devotions and prayers for peace attended by more than 200,000 Roman Catholics from many parts of the world.

APPOINTED TO COLLEGE

In recognition of this, he was appointed by the Pope to the College of Assistants to the Papal Throne—a group whose members assist the Pope in solemn ceremonies and take second place only to members of the Sacred College of Cardinals.

There was speculation also that Archbishop Vachon might be made a cardinal of the church.

In 1950 he was made president of the permanent committee of the international Eucharistic Congres-

Mine Explosion Kills Five Men

LOVILIA, Ia. (CP)—Five men died Monday as a result of an explosion in the O'Brian Coal Company's shaft mine near this southern Iowa village.

Two men who remained in the mine after other workers had gone home died of asphyxiation after the blast.

A party of five later went into the mine to investigate. Three were overcome and died. The other two managed to reach the mine entrance.

Call Out Citizens To Reinforce Dikes

NOORDGOUWE, The Netherlands (Reuters)—Every available man was called out early today to reinforce dikes on the Island of Schouwen Duiveland, southwest Holland, threatened by high tides and strong winds.

Though the situation was described as "highly precarious," the dike held and the worst danger appeared to be past.

Floods two months ago killed about 1,500 persons and left one-sixth of Holland under water.

Fantastic Weapons

Faster-Than-Sound Missile Now Installed On US Sub

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Navy disclosed Monday it now has in operation a submarine carrying a faster-than-sound guided missile capable of blasting inland targets—presumably with the fury of the A-bomb.

This means that all three military services—air, army and navy—have in production for combat and defence purposes a family of guided weapons approaching the fantastic.

With movie and still picture, and carefully-worded description, the navy stripped some of the secrecy from its newest member of the supersonic family and its use from a submarine.

SNEAK RAIDS

This new development means the navy now can sneak a submarine up to an enemy coast, launch its missile and guide it to a distant target.

The guided missile—called "Regulus"—looks and apparently operates like a small, pilotless, sweptwing jet fighter plane. Its fat, stubby, cigar-shaped body is 30 feet long, but the pattern will vary according to the type of job the missile is designed to do.

The navy said the Regulus carries a "powerful warhead." Apparently this warhead could be a compact atomic bomb.

SUBMARINE STREAMLINED

The submarine Tunny, recently put back in service on the west coast, has been equipped with a stowing tank and launching rack for the Regulus and has been streamlined, fitted for lengthy underwater operations. Aboard the sub are officers and men who were trained for a year in using the guided weapon.

The missile can be controlled by an accompanying plane, from ship or from land, apparently in any kind of weather.

Garson Has Proposal:

Would Continue Tax Pacts Indefinitely

HAMIOTA, Man. (CP)—A high-ranking cabinet minister has indicated that the federal government favors an indefinite continuation of its tax agreements with the provinces.

Justice Minister Garson, back in his home province for a speech in this rich farming centre 180 miles west of Winnipeg, said Monday night that "nothing is more important" than that the federal-provincial taxation agreements be "perpetuated." It was assumed that he meant indefinite continuation.

Under the agreements the provinces turn over certain fields of taxation to Ottawa in return for certain fixed grants. All provinces except Quebec have signed such agreements for a five-year period expiring four years from today.

Few premiers were available Monday night for comment on Mr. Garson's suggestion.

Premier E. C. Manning said Alberta regards the agreement as "only interim" and takes the stand that a permanent agreement would not be satisfactory.

Manitoba's Premier D. L. Campbell would not comment on the question of perpetuating the agreement but said he thinks the agreement is a "good thing" for his province. He added his government will want to discuss the terms of the agreement at the end of its term.

Premier Leslie Frost of Ontario who signed a tax agreement with the federal government this year for the first time, had no direct comment. He pointed to a part of his recent budget address which said:

"We should like to see the federal government's action in repealing the security transfer tax broadened to include the entire fields of succession duties, liquor and cigaret taxes. Admittedly the provinces and municipalities require additional revenues and there is no other field in which more good would come from having a single tax authority than in the liquor tax field. . . We sincerely hope that the federal government will withdraw progressively from these three fields, leaving them exclusively to the provinces."

Mr. Garson said:

"No one should think that the purpose of these agreements is to enable the federal government to invade the constitutional jurisdiction of the provinces. In fact, the purpose of the very opposite, namely, to make sure that every province has sufficient financial resources to carry out fully the functions allotted to it by the constitution. . . .

"Nothing is more important, therefore, than that these tax agreements between the federal government and nine of the 10 provincial governments should be perpetuated."

Plan To Spend $1,500,000 On Reforestation

TORONTO — The Legislature played its annual game of Hunt the Trees, when the House considered the Lands and Forests Department estimates Monday. Minister without portfolio Harold R. Scott steered the estimates in the absence of Lands and Forests Minister Gemmell.

The Hunt the Trees game is played by the members of the Opposition trying to find the appropriation for reforestation in the department's estimates. Last year, about one-third of the Cabinet joined in the game. This year, only Mr. Scott took part.

Mr. Scott explained that reforestation is covered in the main office vote. Opposition Leader Oliver read out the sections of the main office appropriation which cover salaries, cost of living bonus, travelling expenses, and many other routine items — but do not mention reforestation.

NO DETAILS

More than $1,500,000 will be spent on reforestation during the coming year, Mr. Scott said, but a listing of the divisions and the amounts to be spent in each would require an extra book. The Opposition contented themselves with claiming that at least some mention of reforestation should be made.

Lands and forests revenue is estimated at $4,500,000 less than year than last. Questioned by Albert Wren (L.-Lab., Kenora) Mr. Scott explained this was due to a reduced cut of 37,500,000 feet of sawlogs and 1,375,000 cords of pulpwood.

Official forecasts issued by the Dominion public weather office in Toronto at 9:30 a.m.:

Synopsis:

The normal eastward march of weather systems across the map has been retarded several times this spring. The last "slow-down" in the series caused cool showery weather to persist over Ontario for several days. The current blocking action, induced by an almost stationary storm centre located south of Nova Scotia, is holding a ridge of high pressure over the Great Lakes area. However, this pleasant interlude is being threatened by a disturbance in the south central states. Hence increasing cloudiness and occasional showers are forecast for western sections tonight and Wednesday.

Regional forecasts valid until midnight Wednesday:

Eastern Lake Ontario, Haliburton, Kirkland Lake regions; North Bay, Sudbury cities: Cloudy with a few sunny intervals today. Sunny Wednesday. Little change in temperature. Winds northwest 15 today, light tonight and Wednesday. Low tonight and high Wednesday at Trenton 35 and 50, Killaloe 30 and 50 Earlton, North Bay and Sudbury 25 and 45. Summary for Wednesday: Mostly sunny.

Missionary Says He Wasn't Lost

WINNIPEG (CP) — A flying American missionary, believed missing last week on a flight near the Arctic circle, landed his plane late Monday at an outpost on Hudson Bay—and an RCAF officer said the missionary was neither lost nor in trouble.

He had been hopping from igloo to igloo around Wager Bay, 1,100 miles north of Winnipeg, and had been unable to report his whereabouts due to poor radio conditions.

The missionary, Rev. Gleason Ledyard of Ashland, Ohio, was accompanied by his wife and small adopted son, an Eskimo.

When he failed to report three days after leaving Coral Harbor on Southampton Island for a 250-mile flight to Wager bay, the RCAF was called in to look for him. A search plane spotted Mr. Ledyard's plane late Sunday. He flew to Wager Bay Monday.

Few Red Patrols Active At Front

SEOUL (AP) — A mere handful of Communist patrols probed Allied lines along the 155-mile Korean battle front today in the wake of bloody fighting on the western end of the line.

The day's biggest explosion was provided by a 15-car Communist ammunition train caught in the open by an Allied bomber.

Stormy skies curtailed aerial warfare.

The 8th army reported Allied ground forces killed or wounded 3,694 Communists last week. The figure is the highest in about five months.

Base Metals Lead General Decline

TORONTO (CP) — Base metals led a general decline in early afternoon stock market trading today.

Only golds held firm while metals, western oils and industrials slipped. Volume for the first three hours totalled 1,790,000 shares.

Uraniums weakened and New Brunswick base metals followed.

Manufacturing companies led industrials lower. Papers, refining oils and miscellaneous issues also slipped.

Higher-priced base metals weakened, led by Quemont and a number of others also slipped. Cassiar, United Asbestos and Tungsten dropped pennies.

Senior golds gained while juniors were mixed.

A wide list of small losses weakened western oils.

Urge Section On Insanity Be Deleted

OTTAWA (CP) — A division of the Canadian Mental Health Association today urged in a Commons committee that a section of the Criminal Code dealing with insanity be deleted because it "describes a mental state that does not really exist."

The suggestion was made in a brief presented to a special Commons committee studying a revision of the Criminal Code. Appearing in support of the brief were Drs. J. D. M. Griffin of Toronto and K. G. Gray, professor of forensic psychiatry at the University of Toronto.

The brief, prepared by a committee of the scientific planning council of the CMHA, noted that the code referred to a person "who has specific delusions but is in other respects sane. . ."

Dr. Gray said delusions are a symptom of mental illness. All mentally ill persons do not suffer from delusions but those who do cannot be sane "in other respects."

He said the plea of insanity would be adequately dealt with in other sections of the code if the section mentioning delusions is omitted.

The brief also urged that terms such as insanity, natural imbecility and disease of the mind be abolished. They should be replaced by more modern and accurate phrases such as mental illness or mentally defective.

Dr. Gray said similar changes were made in some provincial statutes, including Ontario. That was in recognition of the fact that the sufferers actually were sick people. The old phrases carried a certain stigma associated with outdated thinking that mentally ill persons should be jailed or locked up.

The brief urged the government to make a special study of question of criminal sexual psychopaths. Legislation should be considered by the justice department aided by "an advisory committee of persons having special knowledge and experience with these matters."

Dr. Griffin said the council does not think a royal commission should deal with the question as suggested earlier to the committee by the Canadian Welfare Council.

Envoy To Soviet Hurries To UK

MOSCOW (AP) — Western diplomats speculated here today that both Britain and the United States may soon offer diplomatic assurances of interest in recent conciliatory Soviet moves.

The feeling was sparked by British ambassador Sir Alvary Gascoigne's hurried trip to London and the imminent arrival of the new American envoy, Charles E. Bohlen.

Observers here believe that Bohlen, expected in Moscow within 10 days, may be bringing a message from either State Secretary Dulles or President Eisenhower.

(The U. S. President told a press conference March 19 that any Russian peace move would never be met less than half way by his administration. Other U. S. officials have said the Russians should back up their recent peace talk with concrete action.)

Moscow observers also believe that Gascoigne may bring back some indication of interest from the British government when he returns to his post here. The British envoy left Moscow early today for urgent consultations with the foreign office in London but was expected back in a few days.

RUSSIAN-DICTATED

Observers here felt that the subsequent Chinese refusal was dictated by Moscow and was signalled by Vishinsky, who roughly accused the Indians of pushing an American-designed proposal in disguise.

Several diplomats speculated warily that this block had been removed now, in the light of Chou's latest pronouncement.

India's V. K. Krishna Menon, who drew up the original UN proposals after busy negotiations among Canadian, American and other delegations, was most optimistic in his comments on Chou's offer. Terming it the "biggest news of the day," he said in a UN radio broadcast Monday night:

"It brings hope and cheer to thousands of millions of people. Let us hope this is the beginning of peace."

RESPONSIVE ATTITUDE

He called Chou's attitude "responsive" and said the UN must seize the opportunity without delay to "try to make some progress on the Korean question."

There was no word from Vishinsky, who has returned to New York after conferences in Moscow with Joseph Stalin's successor, Prime Minister Georgi Malenkov. Nor has he yet appeared at the UN as Russia's chief permanent delegate. Soviet delegate Georgis Zarubin said Monday, however, that the Chinese offer was "very good news" and he thought it was a genuine move toward peace.

Would Welcome Parley

DUSSELDORF (Reuters) — Russia would welcome a four-power conference on a German peace treaty, the Soviet control commission chief, Gen. Vassily Chuikkov, said in a letter published today by a West German Communist party newspaper.

Kings, Queens

Sir William Reid Dick, and has been kept in Windsor Castle since 1938.

FIRST TO PAY RESPECT

The Queen was the first to do personal obeisance in the final solemn moments of the service.

A moment later came the Duke of Windsor, who stood for silent seconds reflecting beside the opening in the floor of the chapel into which the body of his mother had been lowered.

Then he bowed deeply and walked out into the sunshine with shoulders stooped.

Through the service, the Duke stood at the foot of his mother's coffin while the catafalque rested in the choir of the chapel. Beside him were the other royal dukes, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent.

TAKES ACTIVE PART

The Queen took an active part in the service. She stood nearest the coffin, in a place ordinarily reserved for a Knight of the Garter. At a nod from the archbishop of Canterbury she stepped forward as the casket was slowly lowering.

From an attendant holding a silver bowl, she took a bit of earth from the garden of Frogmore House where Queen Mary spent some of the happiest years of her long life.

Three times she reached out over the coffin to sprinkle some of it on the coffin as the archbishop committed Queen Mary's body to the ground — "Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, and dust to dust."

Then the Queen returned to her place beside Queen Mother Elizabeth, Princess Margaret and Mary, the Princess Royal—Queen Mary's daughter.

It was a service of strict formality and rigid dignity such as Queen Mary doubtless would have desired. But it followed in general the funeral service of the Anglican church as laid down in the Book of Common Prayer.

There was no sermon, and the archbishop had only one assistant taking active part, the dean of Windsor.

The catafalque was at the identical spot at which the coffin of Queen Mary's son lay 13 months ago.

MANY FLOWERS

On the coffin were only the flowers and wreaths of Queen Mary's children and immediate members of her family.

Queen Mary had many thousands of other flowers—too many to be crowded into any church. They were laid out in a great and colorful expanse of the green lawns which slope upward to the chapel.

A moving touch was the fact that the simplest of the bouquets were given the most prominent place.

At the main entrance of the chapel they were heaped together in mounds, little handsful of violets, lilies of the valley and forget-me-nots. They were such bouquets as children might have bought—and many were from obscure friends of the old queen.

Kings and queens, and representatives of continental royal families, sat in the stalls of the knights of the garter, many following carefully the printed order of the service.

Several of the royal visitors occasionally crossed themselves in Roman Catholic style. At the conclusion of the service, after the British Royal Family had done its obeisance, they came up slowly in curtly fashion and the women curtseying—at the spot where the coffin was lowered to the vaults below.

SAY FAREWELL

After the royal families came the other distinguished persons who had come to say farewell to Queen Mary.

At the head of this line was Prime Minister Churchill with Mrs. Churchill.

The service was of a private character, but an effort was made to have many of Queen Mary's older friends represented among the mourners.

There were bent old men and feeble women, and many proudly wore decorations—some of which they had received from Queen Mary's husband, George V.

Among the mourners was Oscar Humfrey, 78, chauffeur for 35 years to Queen Mary and her husband.

Two former governors-general of Canada had prominent places among the mourners. They were Field Marshal Earl Alexander, Britain's defence minister, and the Earl of Athlone, Queen Mary's only surviving brother.

Lord Athlone, who will be 79 in April, flew back from a South African holiday, accompanied by Princess Alice, when he heard of the Queen's death.

The body of the Queen made its last lonely journey 25 miles along the Thames from London to Windsor in a black hearse early today, unaccompanied through the silent, deserted streets of London from Westminster Hall. The body had lain in state there while 120,000 mourners filed past in final homage since Sunday.

During the final hours Monday night, the mourners in the hall were joined by the old Queen's three surviving children—the Duke of Windsor, the Duke of Gloucester and the Princess Royal.

Dies At 100 After Spending 53 Years In Jail

LEEDS, England (CP) — Robert Woolridge, 100, who spent more than half his life in jail and finally decided several years ago that crime doesn't pay, died today in a home for the aged here.

He said on his 100th birthday last month he spent 53 years in all the major jails in Britain and the United States.

He last appeared before a court in 1948, when he was 94, on a charge of attempted burglary. He was let off, because of his age, and finally decided that crime does not pay.

ENDED CAREER

That ended a career which began when he was birched for stealing coal as a boy.

He said on his birthday he had stuck to a strict honor code of his own. He never stole from a child, never took objects of sentimental value, and never used violence against anyone.

His wife and two sons were killed in the San Francisco earthquake in 1906.

Clark Tests

the principle of strictly voluntary repatriation—a reversal of Communist policy which would clear the way for final agreements on an armistice.

Chou said all prisoners who insisted upon repatriation when the armistice became effective should be sent home and that the others should be turned over to a neutral state "so as to insure a just solution to the question of their repatriation."

AUTHORITIES WARY

While this seems to be a great departure from previous Red demands for forcible repatriation of all prisoners of war it left many unanswered questions which made authorities here wary. Chou did not suggest what country he would consider "neutral."

Another undefined term is a "just solution." Chou might later on take the position, if he thought he had manoeuvred the UN command into a spot where it had to make a truce on almost any terms, that such a solution would require the neutral state to send all prisoners back to their homes after a period of time and with promises they would be well treated.

Still another question is whether the neutral state would take charge of the prisoners where they now are or would be expected to transport them to its own territory.

Gen. Clark said he would agree to reopen the suspended armistice talks if the Reds agree to details of exchanging sick and wounded war prisoners.

The UN in effect told the Reds to come up with an official, detailed version of Monday night's radio proposal by Red China's premier.

The unyielding UN demand that PoWs have the choice of returning to their native lands was the only issue blocking an armistice and it broke up the talks last Oct. 8.

Clark's proposal was contained in a letter handed to the Reds at Panmunjom in Korea.

In his letter today, Clark proposed that a liaison group from both sides—each headed by a general or an admiral—make the exchange arrangements.

SECOND ORDER

After that is done, he said, negotiations for resuming truce talks could follow "as a second order of business."

Red liaison officers received the letter in a two-minute meeting and gave no hint when there would be an answer or when Chou's new proposal might be delivered.

Clark arrived in Korea for a brief visit two hours before his letter was delivered.

He told reporters he was ready to give careful and sympathetic consideration to Chou's proposal once it is made official. Until then, Clark said, he could not comment.

The world waited to see if the latest Red moves are truly the beginnings of peace—or another blind alley.

Canada Disapproves Of Some UN Firings

Refusing To Answer Questions Not Ground For Losing Job—Martin

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (CP) —Canada told the United Nations Monday it does not believe it is just or reasonable that a UN employee should be dismissed on the sole grounds of having refused to give answers to questions which might incriminate him.

Health Minister Paul Martin, head of Canada's delegation to the UN assembly, thus took issue with one phase of Secretary-General Trygve Lie's handling of the question of loyalty of U.S. employees at UN.

Martin said, however, in a debate on personnel policy, that Lie deserves commendation for the "way in which he has set out" his latest report on the personnel problem.

LIE UNDER FIRE

Lie has been under fire from some delegations for agreeing too hastily to U.S. demands that U.S. employees of the UN, deemed subversive by the U.S., should be fired. More than 30 U.S. employees have been dismissed on loyalty grounds in recent months.

Martin noted that Lie was in a position of "difficulty and delicacy."

The Canadian said his government agrees thoroughly with Lie's statement that a member of the secretariat who engages in subversive activity against a member state should be dismissed.

He added, however, that this raises questions of definition, procedure and law.

TENTATIVE AGREEMENT

Canada was in agreement tentatively at least, with most of the disciplinary actions recommended by Lie.

"In regard to one we have serious misgivings," he added.

"Our present view is that it is not just or reasonable that an employee should be dismissed on the sole ground of having refused to answer questions, the answers to which might serve to incriminate him."

Experts To Try To Reach Trade Balance

OTTAWA (CP)—France and Canada have agreed to establish a committee of experts to try to reach a "satisfactory balance of trade" between the two countries.

Formation of a Franco-Canadian joint committee to meet "in the near future" was announced Monday night in a 400-word communique issued by the two governments after one-day trade talks.

Prime Minister Rene Mayer of France, Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and Finance Minister Maurice Bourges-Maunoury, ending a tour that included conferences with President Eisenhower in Washington, were scheduled to fly to New York today in an RCAF plane on the first lap of their journey home.

EXPERTS PARTICIPATE

Composition of the committee was not disclosed, but trade experts of each country likely will participate.

The announcement followed discussions involving the French officials and Prime Minister St. Laurent, Trade Minister Howe, Defence Minister Claxton and Finance Minister Abbott.

France's unfavorable balance of trade with Canada emerged as the main point of the visit, conducted in an atmosphere of friendship and informality.

The French delegation placed before the government details of its proposed effort in the European Defence Community and of its obligations in Africa and Asia.

The joint statement said economic and financial problems were examined and it was agreed that "suppression of the obstacles to trade and payments was essential to the development of production, the strengthening of the defence of the free world and the improvement of the standard of living."

Will Permit Higher Loans

OTTAWA (CP)—The government Monday increased to $4,000 from $3,000 the maximum government-backed loans which farmers can get for improvements under the Farm Improvements Loan Act.

Jean Lesage, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott, offered the amendment as the Commons considered extension of the act for a new three-year period during which loans can be made up to a total of $300,000,000. The bill was given final approval with the amendment.

Earl Catherwood (PC—Haldimand) said in view of the good repayment record—only $38,000 in loans were defaulted in the last eight years — the government should increase its guarantee to the banks so the banks could reduce the interest rate below the present five per cent.

Christie's wife, Ethel, was found under the floorboards, also strangled.

The decomposed remains of two —or possibly three—more bodies were found buried in the back yard.

Pathologists, meanwhile, were examining a find of bones dug up from the garden of Christie's former home to determine whether they had unearthed a seventh victim.

As Christie was picked up, pretty girl policewomen in off-duty clothes stalked London's back streets as live bait for the fugitive strangler, believed by police to be a sex maniac.

The little clerk had been last seen in the Notting Hill neighborhood about March 20, several days before the first gruesome find was made in the flat he had occupied for 15 years.

Local Groups To Entertain World Plowmen

COBOURG (ENS)—The Northumberland Federation of Agriculture, in conjunction with the Durham federation, will entertain the European plowmen when they come here next fall for the World Plowing Match. It is planned to hold a social evening at which district farmers will have a chance to meet the visiting plowmen from overseas. A. J. Carroll, deputy-minister of agriculture for Ontario, who is also president of the World Plowing Association, will set a date for the social evening.

When Alfred Hall, England, secretary of the World Plowing Association, met with plowing match committee chairmen last week, he inspected the site just north of here and the farm of W. F. Staples and Sons, was chosen as most suitable for sod plowing in the world competition, with stubble plowing on adjoining similar soil.

The Ontario Plowmen's Association will prepare soon a plan of the tented city which will be located around the plowing site for the world and international matches. The catering tents will be on the south line because it is more conveniently located for water. In order to facilitate movement of traffic, Hamilton Township Council will be asked to widen the roads in that section.

Artificial Ice Plant At Rink

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS) — A public meeting has been called for Wednesday evening, April 8, to discuss the matter of installing artificial ice in the Campbellford Community Arena.

At a preliminary meeting held on the week-end, a committee of officers were chosen to head the organization. Wallace Rutherford was chosen chairman; R. H. Wilson, secretary; Austin Putman, treasurer, and a committee representing the town and township was appointed.

F. M. Rutherford, manager of Campbellford's TVL hockey team and member of the Town Council, and Mrs. W. C. Tatham, also a member of the Council, were called on by Chairman Rutherford to express their views on the proposal.

Chief topic of discussion at this meeting was the problem of raising funds. Figures have been received from manufacturers, and the cost of the artificial ice plant is estimated at between $25,000 and $35,000.

A. E. Prest Wins Woodworking Contest

A. E. Prest, 242 Lansdowne St., was winner of the open class in a competition for amateur woodworkers which has recently been sponsored by Peterborough Lumber Co. His entry was a set of trays made of walnut with birch inlay.

The other winners were: 2nd James Dauncey, St. Mary's St., an occasional chair of white oak; 3rd Gordon Head, Lillian St., a coffee table of basswood finished with walnut stain.

There was also an open class mainly for students of the high schools of the city and district. First prize was awarded to Murray Edwards of Lakefield, who is in Grade X, PCVS, who turned in a coffee table of basswood and oak finish; 2nd Roy Dauncey, a child's crib in the form of a cart; 3rd Carl Jensen, Swanson Ave., an end table of basswood with mahogany stain.

The judges were: Septimus Booth, Carl Liebers and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Saunders.

The large number of entries was evidence of the wide appeal of woodworking to men to take it up chiefly as a hobby, and because of some natural attraction to that handcraft. Many excellent pieces were made for this competition. They are on exhibit all this week in the office of Peterborough Lumber Co.

Pave The Buckhorn Road

Last summer when the state of the Buckhorn road was causing a hullabaloo, Warden R. R. Stewart wrote to the Examiner his certainty that with the volume of traffic on this road, it would never be satisfactory until it is paved. The question was how to get the money to pave it. The road is in the Suburban Area roads system, for which the City and County are jointly responsible, yet taxes and appropriations for roads in both City and County are so high that aldermen and councillors are loath to ask extra money from the ratepayers for the job. Nearly everybody concerned about the Buckhorn road admits that paving is the solution to the surface problem. A case can be made out that paving is a solution to the financial problem, too.

* * *

The 12½ mile stretch of road was widened and—people hoped—improved in 1948-49 when the Department of Highways took it under the development system. The Province paid for the development, then handed the road back to the Suburban Area Roads Commission. By the time all the work was done, the developed road cost $243,000. This is the road that has been going to pieces ever since. The city and county have on their hands a $243,000 investment, yet are not getting their money's worth from it because it is not paved. It is costing about $1,300 a mile to maintain every year—to maintain even in its present condition. This does not seem to be good business.

* * *

After much racking of brains and tussling with ways and means, the County Council has advanced a method of financing the paving. This is as chock full of probabilities as the road is of holes, but, if these can be got round, the plan looks to be a good one, the best way out of the difficulties. It will require co-operation of city and county ratepayers (through their councils), and of the Department of Highways. It will mean an additional expense to all of them, yet is in the long run, a money-saver. The county would contribute $14,000 as its share, the city $14,000, and these sums would have to be matched by the Province, with $28,000. The Suburban Roads Commission has already ear-marked $15,000 for paving three miles of the Buckhorn Road. This would go into the new kitty, providing all told $71,000—the estimated cost of paving the 12½ miles.

* * *

There are several practical reasons why all the road should be paved now. Present maintenance for one year amounts to $1,300 a mile. The paving would cost something like $5,500 a mile. Why continue putting $1,300 a mile down pot-holes year after year, when most of the maintenance costs can be wiped out by the paving? The alternative of paving a bit at a time, a couple of miles a year (this was the old plan), is hodge-podge, practically and financially hard to defend.

* * *

City ratepayers will ask why their council should now throw $14,000 into the road? The arguments we have advanced above in favour of paving the whole road now are as cogent to city people as to county people. There is this further consideration. Under the present scheme to do two or three miles a year, the city will have to pay its share anyway, without being specially consulted. In the end the cost to the city will be greater than the cost to it of paving now—because the whole road would cost more, with piecemeal paving while maintenance costs on the gravelled parts continue at a high rate.

* * *

We should like to emphasize that the Buckhorn Road is not a county road. It is a Suburban Area Commission Road. The County Council has one member on the Commission, the City has one, and there is a third appointed by the other two. The County Council and the City Council pay equal shares of Suburban Area road maintenance and building. The Province pays the other fifty per-cent. The $14,000 would not be a hand-out, a gift to the county.

* * *

The city has been unusually generous in its acceptance of suburban area road costs. Peterborough County has the second-greatest mileage of Suburban Area Roads in the Province. The city is paying proportionately more than most other Ontario cities towards suburban roads. Would the City Council be altogether too open-handed to put out an extra $14,000 now for the Buckhorn road? We think, on the contrary, that this would be enlightened self-interest. It is only a question of paving now and getting a good road now, or paying later by dribbles and having a poor road meanwhile, with continuing high maintenance costs.

The Careful Queen

Many years ago we met a Canadian lady who had been presented to Queen Mary because of some public service in which she had been engaged. They had talked together for about ten minutes, and we enquired what the conversation had been about. "Oh, she talked about housekeeping", said our friend.

Some years later we made the acquaintance of an Englishman who had some remote connection with Court circles, and we told him this story. He was scornful. "The Queen must have been patronizing your friend", said he.

We did not believe it, because we do not think that ladies of great breeding, like Queen Mary, ever patronize anybody. Nor could we see any strong reason why the Queen should not be interested in housekeeping. Consequently we were struck by the many references in the obituary notices of the Queen to her keen interest in the details of household management, and her own exceptional skill in it.

There are people who think that anyone of exalted rank must be far above the details of commonplace life. We cannot claim to have had wide experience of people of exalted rank, but we have met a few, and our experience has been that their interests are unpredictable. But they do not live in a world of dreams, nor do they exist solely on flattery and angel-cake; some of them are exceedingly practical and shrewd. It is more often people who have not been born to high estate, but who have achieved great fortunes, who pretend to be uninterested in the details of daily living. Queen Mary, who was intensely curious about everything that came into her sphere, was not one to neglect the craft of keeping house, for she was the head of five large households herself, and ruled them strictly. And it was part of her task, as Queen of England, to be able to talk, within reason, to anybody about anything.

Healthy Peterborough Children

One of the pleasures of attending the admirable Skating Carnival which the local figure skating club presented last weekend was that one saw a large group of fine-looking children and young people. They were living proof that Canada is developing a race of its own, and a physical type in which we may take pride. They did not look like children in the British Isles; they were too pale and too tall for that. Neither did they appear to our eyes to resemble a corresponding group of children in the U.S.A.; they were bigger and, we thought, fairer, than their American contemporaries. They were tall, well-formed, long-legged, fair but not blonde, and very healthy without being ruddy in complexion.

We do not think that this was the accidental result of a single racial strain represented among them. Anyone who knew several of the children on the ice knew that they came of many racial strains, and that physical resemblances among their parents were uncommon. These children are the outcome of the Canadian climate, Canadian good food, and Canadian ideas about public and private hygiene. Their grandchildren will belong to a race of whom it will be possible to say, "He couldn't be anything but a Canadian," just as we now can say, in many instances, "He is unmistakeably an Englishman (or a Dane, or a Spaniard)".

Scientists are not in agreement about the influence of climate on racial and physical types. But they are in agreement that good food and healthy living produce unmistakeable results, and these are constant elements in the lives of thousands of Canadian children. The results are beginning to show in their physique and their appearance of well-being, and they are results in which we may, as a nation, take pride.

Old Masters For The National Gallery

We are glad to know that the Canadian National Gallery has bought three fine pictures for its permanent collection. One is an early work of Rembrandt; the other two are by Fillipino Lippi—not the "Fra Lippo Lippi" of Browning's poem, but his natural son. Our national collection is not rich in first-rate works by old masters, and these acquisitions will strengthen it.

One question rises from the subject of the Rembrandt picture, which is "Bathsheba At Her Toilet." Has the Senate committee on obscenity passed it as fitting for exhibition to teen-agers? Rembrandt did not paint many nudes, but it is possible that this may be one of them, in which case the committee could doubtless arrange to have any offending portions of the picture painted over by a Canadian artist of their choice. They will no doubt be successful in concealing the fact that Lippi, though a great artist, was not of legitimate birth, and thus a possible bad example to the young.

It is necessary for Canada to possess a fine national collection of paintings, both as a source of pleasure to all our people, and as examples which Canadian artists may study. The $276,000 paid for these pictures is money well spent.

"When you're in love you're nine feet tall" says a popular song. Love is losing its power; when we were young it immediately put your head in the clouds.

Women In Red China

By O. M. GREEN

IT WAS INEVITABLE that the Chinese Communists, in their search for "equal rights for all" and fulfilment of "the people's will" would not overlook the women.

✧ ✧ ✧

THOSE PATIENT CREATURES equally attracted the Nationalists' notice. The Revolution of 1911 was immediately followed in Canton by the formation of a militant Amazon Corps. One cannot recall that the girls ever did any fighting. But they scandalized their elders by demanding freedom to choose their own husbands, and even advocated companionate marriages — in other words a trial trip of a few months after which the young couple would be free to separate if they did not get on well together.

✧ ✧ ✧

MUCH LATER came the law of 1929, which gave girls equal rights with their brothers in their parents' property, and the right to break off a distasteful engagement made for them by their parents, perhaps when they were babies.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN THE LATTER years of Nationalism the freedom of girls to choose their own husbands increased considerably and the practice of state marriages was introduced when twenty or thirty couples would be married off simultaneously, in one vast ceremony, and afterwards entertained together in a banquet, the object being to save them (or rather their parents) the enormous expense of an old-fashioned marriage feast, which might go on for several days.

✧ ✧ ✧

BUT THESE CHANGES operated only in a comparatively small section of society, even among the upper classes. In the vast majority of Chinese families a girl probably never saw the husband chosen for her by her parents until the marriage; as a young wife she was little better than a servant to her mother-in-law, though if she bore a son her position much improved; her husband could take as many wives or concubines as he wished for; he could divorce her as he pleased, but she could not divorce him; and, as a widow, it was practically impossible for her to marry again.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN SPITE OF these harsh customs, Chinese marriages were in general happy. The Chinese woman's position was never so bad as, for example, that of Hindu women. Four or five thousand years ago the Chinese tribes were matriarchates, directed by the senior woman. The famous Empress Dowager who ruled all China for forty years till her death in 1908 is by no means the only example in Chinese history of a woman attaining the supreme power. And in most families the wife had a good deal more real authority than appeared outwardly.

✧ ✧ ✧

STILL it must be said that daughters were regarded as altogether of secondary importance to sons who would carry on the family name, and were always subject to the orders of parents and husbands.

✧ ✧ ✧

HENCE the Communists' Marriage Law of 1950, abolishing polygamy, concubinage, child betrothal, interference with the marriage of widows, and the payment of costly dowries. Equal rights for both sexes, equal freedom in obtaining divorce, and protection for the lawful interests of women and children were also enacted.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN A RECENT ARTICLE in "People's China" (the magazine published in English once a fortnight in Peking) Miss Teng Ying-chao, vice-chairman of the All-China Democratic Women's Federation, enlarges on the fruitful achievements of the new marriage law in "elimnating the influence of reactionary social customs", uprooting "the feudal marriage law" and enabling young people to marry on the basis of love and mutual respect.

✧ ✧ ✧

STRANGELY enough, the law has not been popular. Miss Teng Ying-chao is obliged to confess that "the legacy of 2,000 years of feudalism, the vast size of China, the wide differences of the effectiveness of educational work, all have contributed to uneven carrying out of the marriage law." China, in fact, does not seem to want it.

✧ ✧ ✧

THIS, of course, cannot be allowed. So from the Premier Chou En-lai, himself comes an order that the Marriage Law must be intensively publicized, its implementation be investigated, and "the old-fashioned feudal ways of thinking" be eradicated.

✧ ✧ ✧

ACCORDINGLY, commissions have been set up in all administrative areas, teams are being sent throughout the villages to analyse the difficulties which the marriage law encounters; tens of thousands of booklets are being distributed to educate the public in the aims of the law; dramatists are called in to write plays on the miseries of the old, the blessing of the new, sort of marriage; and thousands of trained cadres tour giving "mobile exhibitions on the marriage law."

✧ ✧ ✧

THERE IS ANOTHER aspect of the Communists' interest in women, namely to recruit them as workers in factories. The connection between this and the popularising of the marriage law is plainly indicated by Miss Teng Ying-chao in the article quoted above.

"In freeing themselves from the fetters af the feudal system of marriage," she wrote, "tens of millions of Chinese men and women will demonstrate still greater initiative in the construction work of their motherland."

✧ ✧ ✧

EVEN WITHOUT the benefits of the marriage law more and more women are being put to work outside their homes.

In a recent speech Miss Shih Liang, Minister of Justice, dwelt on the increasing numbers of women employed in both "heavy and light industries, national defence, transport, communications and construction."

✧ ✧ ✧

THE NUMBER of women employed, she said, increased by nearly one million last year. "In some villages as much as ninety per cent of the peasant women work in the fields." In the northern province of Shansi, 95 out of 118 peasant cooperative groups are led by women.

Miss Shih Liang wound up with a reference to the marriage law. Only when Chinese women are free from the remnants of feudal thinking, she said, will they "really enjoy equal rights with men."

Including, apparently, equal right with men to be sent into the State factories and farms.

AN AMERICAN OPINION: Deeds Not Words, Sir!

Did You Catch That Whisper?

(MONTREAL GAZETTE)

IN THE last 20 years, one of the traditional requirements for public life has almost disappeared. For centuries, the person who desired to create a following, in politics or the theatre, needed, first of all, a voice. Everyone has some kind of a voice; in the theatrical sense, a voice is a speaking organ that can make a "stage whisper" be heard in the top balcony.

With singers, for instance, strength of lung was quite as necessary as quality of tone. Only in opera does this need remain. The most popular—and therefore the most successful—balladeers today have voices that ordinarily could hardly be heard across the room.

The microphone, with its amplifier, has done the trick. Crooning, the soft sounds a mother uses to quiet her child, can now be heard around the world.

The entertainment field is not the only one which has been so deeply affected. Until 20 years ago, a powerful voice was an absolute must for politicians. It was common, here in the Province of Quebec years ago, for politicians to address crowds of thousands in the open air, even in the dead of winter. That took a voice; that required lung-power. Those days are gone.

The long, hard traditions of the sea have been similarly softened. Before long the famous voice from the bridge will be only a memory. Loudspeakers do the job, now; the captain need only whisper into the microphone and his message will be heard in all parts of his ship.

The results are not particularly dire, as yet. But one thing must be remembered. In nature's constant process of evolution, a faculty which is not used decays and dies.

Will men, one day, be a race of whisperers?

The Tourist Dollar Gets Around

(SARNIA CANADIAN OBSERVER)

UNDER the caption. "How the Tourist Dollar Gets Around," the Goderich Signal-Star tells editorially, the interesting story of what happened to a $10 bill which an American tourist handed to a Goderich merchant.

Says the Signal-Star:

"How and where and for what does an average tourist $10 bill pass around Goderich in the normal course of business dealings?

"The Board of Trade wanted to know the answer to this query, and when a United States tourist handed a $10 bill to a local jewellery store in payment for chinaware, it was decided to pin a piece of linen to the bill with the request that everyone in Goderich who received it in payment for anything write on the linen for what it was received.

"John Thorpe of the Board of Trade traced the journey of the bill around Goderich in the course of normal business dealings. It started off on Friday, June 22nd, and four days later, on Tuesday, June 26th, it was located and a record made of its journey.

"Let's take a look and see what happened to that $10 United States bill.

"It left the jewellery store and went to a gas station, and from there into the wage envelope of an employee.

"The gas station employee spent it at a dairy for milk tickets, and the milk company bought oats at a feed store.

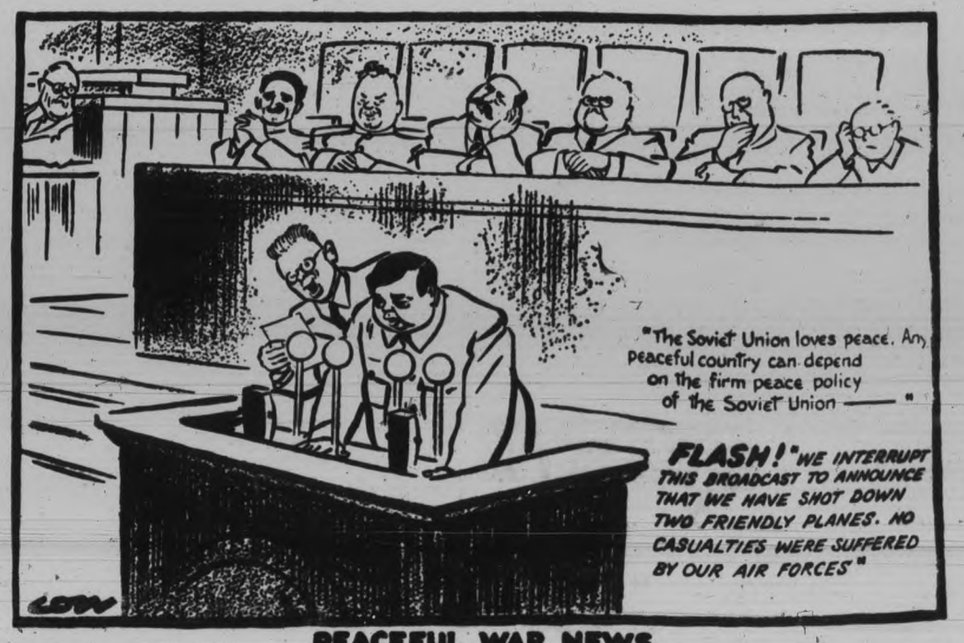
"The feed store used it to help pay the wages of an employee who in turn used it to purchase grain.

"The grain dealer spent the money at a hardware store which in turn used it to purchase building supplies.

"From the building supply company it went to a drug store—to a wallpaper store—still onward to a meat market.

The butcher used the money to purchase hogs from a farmer, and the farmer spent it for dress material in a Goderich dry goods store.

"That, if brief, is the story of a four-day journey of this $10. There is a lot of food for thought in these findings."



The Pensioner's Right To His Cheque

(OTTAWA CITIZEN)

AT THE end of December last year, nearly 700,000 Canadians who had passed the age of 70 were receiving the federal pension without regard to their means. To the public, gratified by the enactment of this piece of social legislation, it may never have occurred that the right of recipients to their pension cheques would ever be questioned. Yet Mr. R. B. Curry, federal director of old age security, maintains that a great many well-meaning relatives and eager creditors have been reaching for the cash that belongs as of right to the recipients.

Writing in Canadian Welfare magazine, Mr. Curry notes that among creditors who have been pressing for access to pension cheques are many hospitals and municipalities. When they are put to expense on account of a pensioner, they feel they should have first claim on this income. Thousands of such manoeuvres have had to be frustrated by the Department of National Health and Welfare for Parliament intended elderly persons to have full control of their pension money. Incapacity does in some cases make a trusteeship necessary. Such cases, however, have decreased markedly in number as the department's policy has been given effect. The test is simple: can the pensioner manage his own affairs? "Indigency, by itself," says Mr. Curry, "is certainly not accepted as incapacity."

A pensioner who is being given care by relatives, organizations, or institutions, should of course pay his way as best he can. But decisions on expenditure are up to him, and "nobody should be permitted to come between the pensioner and his cheque." Apparently it has not been easy to win general understanding of this principle.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity . . . All things are full of labour; man cannot utter it: the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing. (Eccl. 1:2,8.)

✧ ✧ ✧

I made me great works; I builded me houses; I planted me vineyards . . . And from them, I withheld not my heart from any joy; for my heart rejoiced in all my labour: and this was my portion of all my labour.

✧ ✧ ✧

Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do: and, behold, all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun. (Eccl. 2:4,10,11.)

✧ ✧ ✧

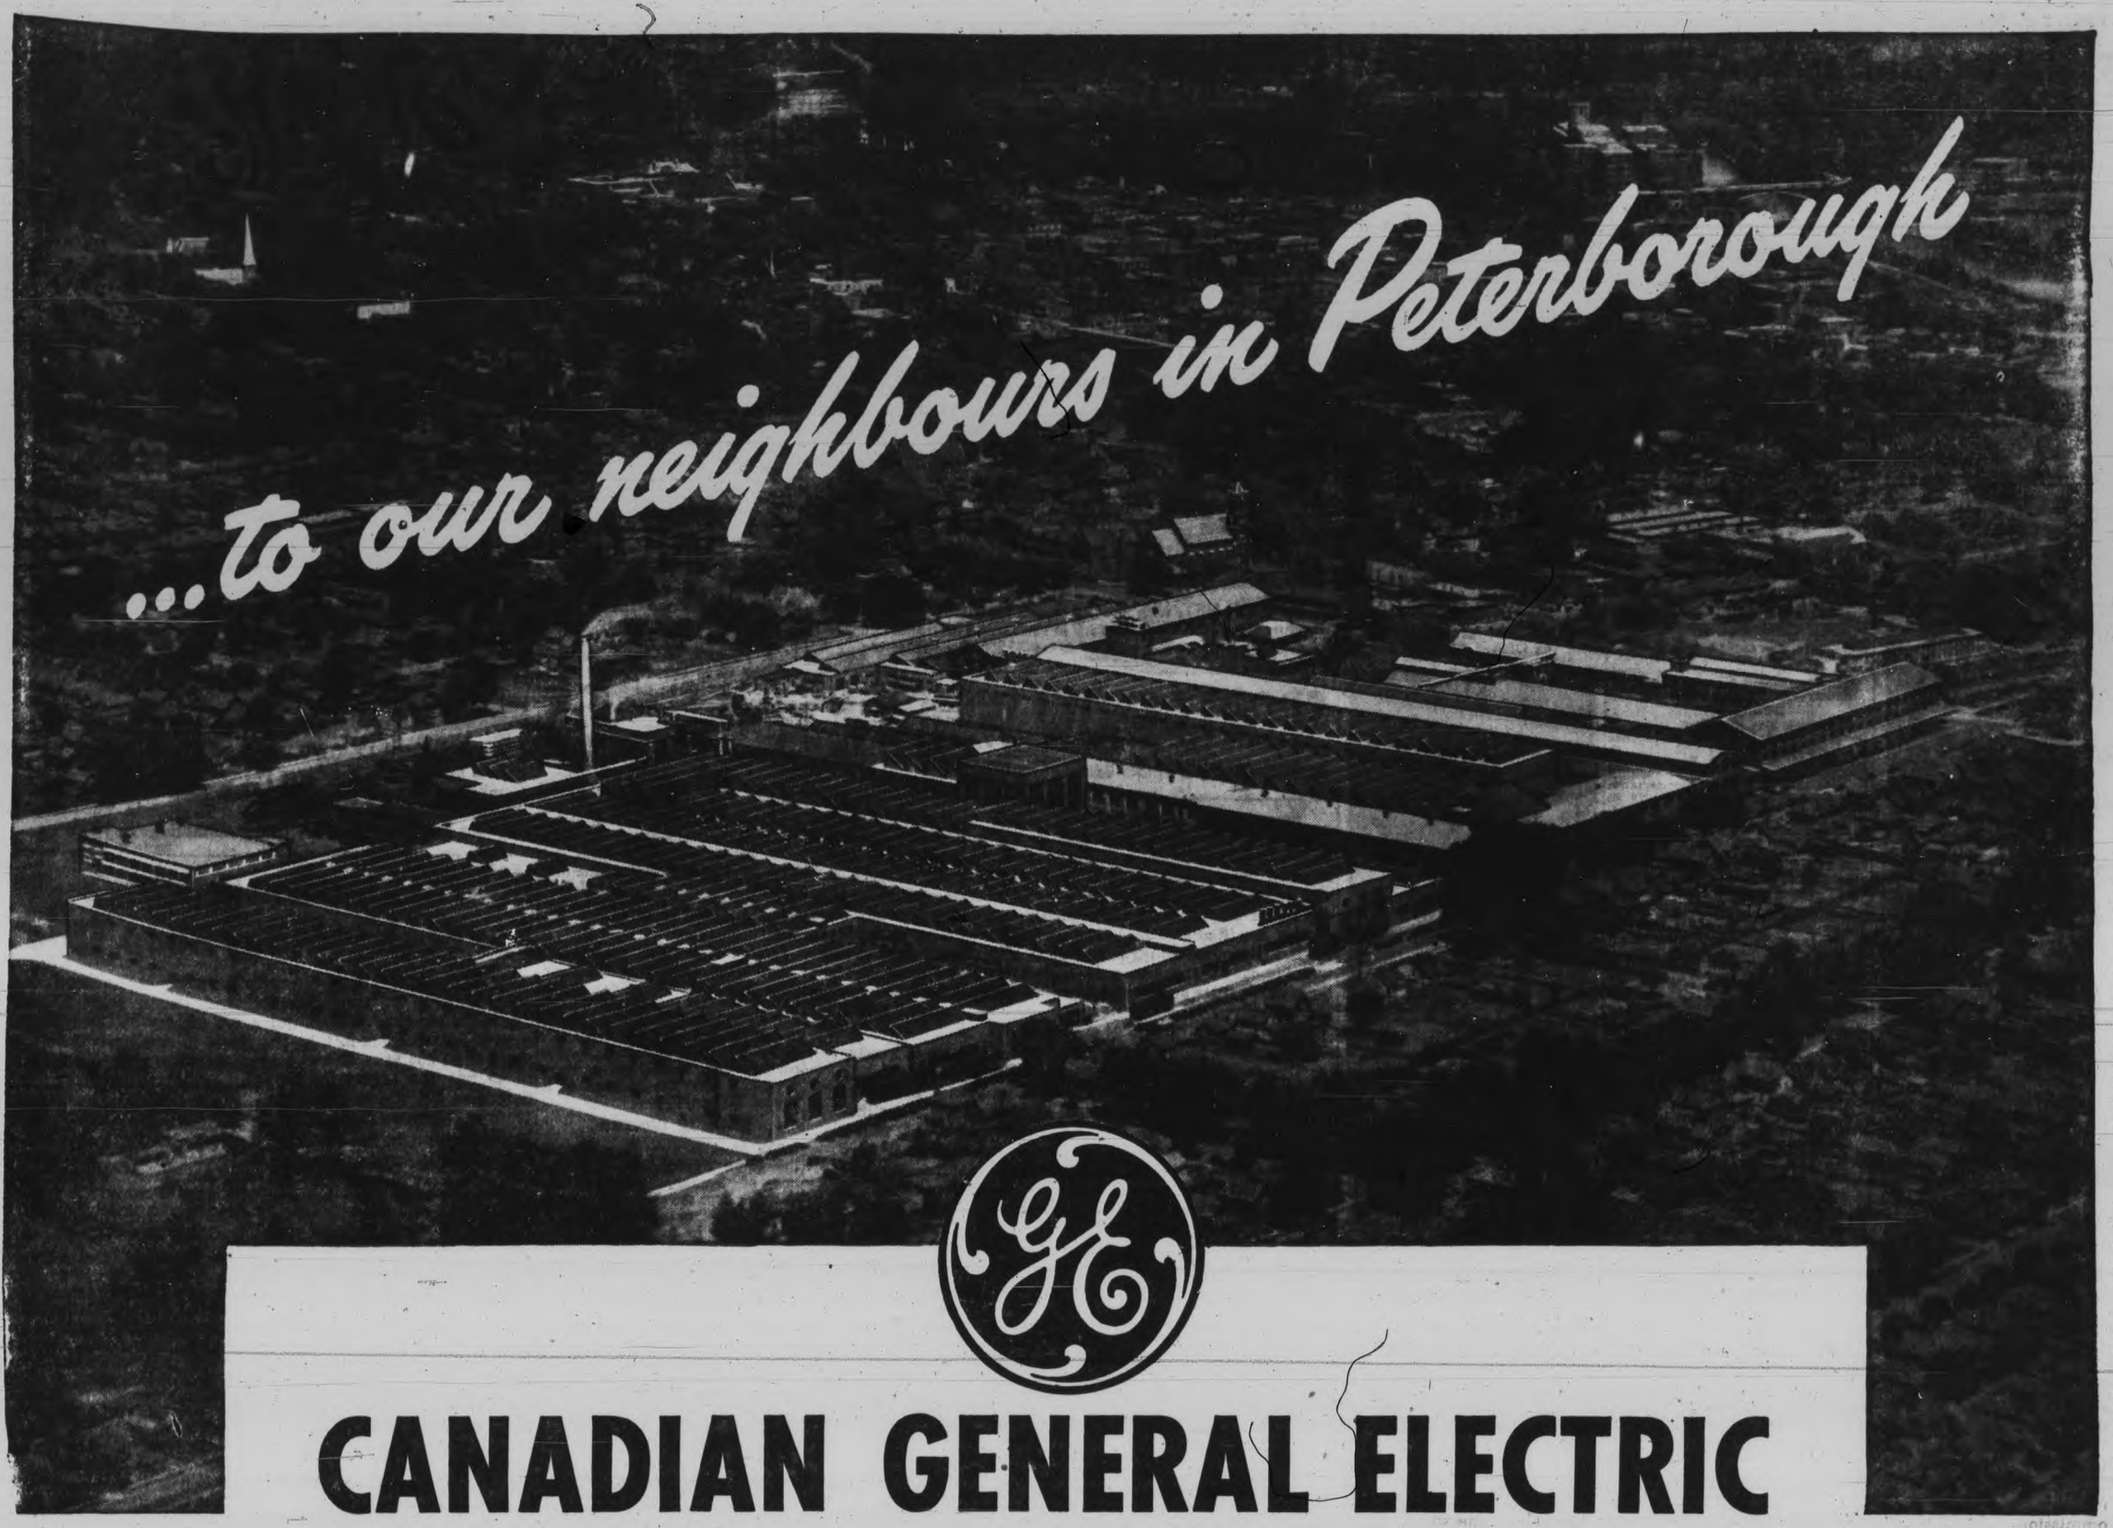
I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be for ever: nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it: and God doeth it, that men should fear before him. That which hath been is now; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past. (Eccl. 3:14,15.)

✧ ✧ ✧

For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited; I am the Lord; and there is none else. I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth: I said not unto the seed of Jacob, Seek ye me in vain: I the Lord speak righteousness, I declare things that are right. (Isa. 45: 18,19.)

Letters To The Editor

GOOD WORD FOR SKATING CARNIVAL



Sir: Just a few lines of congratulations to the Peterborough Figure Skating Club on a grand show. One can see many hours of hard practise to make such a splendid show. I would also like to congratulate Ede Kiraly, their teacher, also the stars and guest stars and anyone connected with the club. There was just one fault, however, and that was the rink itself. Those poor girls were near frozen. it was so cold. If the city would just get busy with our Memorial Centre and have it for next year the club would be able to perform better and maybe get a bigger crowd. With a bigger audience there would be that much more profit for them and would give them something to work with. Thank you for space and once again "thanks" for a real good show.

(MRS.) J. SMITH.

SUNDAY HOCKEY AT ARENA

Sir: I noted in your columns the other day that the Civic Arena was being used on Sunday for hockey games. I believe it was a C.G.E. league finals. I take it for granted that using the rink on Sunday for such events has the approval of the city council, who are responsible to the citizens for its operation. Making no charge is the thin edge of the wedge as far as Sunday sports are concerned and I would think employees of the C.G.E. would seek to give better and more law-abiding leadership in Peterborough.

CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC

presents a progress report of the Company's activities

As a supplement to the release of the Company's 1952 Annual Report, we present to the people of Peterborough our "human balance sheet"—an informal report which should be of interest to all who live and work in this city.

The year 1952 was one of continued progress at Peterborough Works. The year which lies ahead promises to be a year of sharpened competition which faces us with an unmistakable challenge to produce with maximum efficiency.

We are ready to meet that challenge. We are confident that we have here in Peterborough one of the top engineering groups in Canada whose versatility, allied to production knowledge, will enable us to more than hold our own in the new era of phenomenal development which our country is entering. In the past sixty years, Peterborough Works has steadily increased in stature and reputation; it has become a plant of world importance—in competition with the best the world can produce.

We are confident that, backed by the wholehearted co-operation of our employees, we shall do justice to whatever demands are made upon us.

R. J. Dale

MANAGER, PETERBOROUGH WORKS

Job Dividends

At Canadian General Electric, retirement pensions toward which the Company has already contributed $12,430,000, have been in effect for many years. Early this month the Company announced a revised pension plan, aimed at modernizing the present programme and broadening the protection offered to eligible employees and their dependents. At the same time, the Company announced details of a revised and liberalized life and health insurance programme for its employees, including benefits not now offered anywhere in Canadian industry.

In addition to these benefits programmes, job dividends at Canadian General Electric include paid statutory holidays and vacations.

The Peterborough chapter of the Quarter Century Club continues to grow and at the moment has 295 members—incidentally, the average service of all Quarter Century Club members is over 31½ years.

Another item from which Peterborough employees benefit is the Suggestion Plan which has now been running for a number of years and gives each employee an opportunity to earn extra dollars by submitting ideas which will increase safety, improve methods or lower costs. During 1952, over 2,100 suggestions were received from employees. The highest amount earned by a single worker went to an award winner of the previous year who received an additional $1,643 for his suggestion, making a total award of $6,243 for one idea.

Apprentices

During the year many young men took advantage of the Peterborough Works Apprenticeship System to set them off on the first steps of a successful career. In 1952, 162 apprentices were in training and 37 completed their training during that time.

Since the Apprenticeship System was started, 1,204 young men have been "signed up" as indentured apprentices—47 of them in 1952. Many of them have risen to hold top positions in Canada's electrical industry.

Payrolls

The payroll continued to rise at Peterborough Works during 1952 and $15,706,000 was paid out by the Company in wages and salaries. This huge payroll is a record in the history of our plant and, naturally, contributes to the prosperity of this city.

At year end, according to latest available statistics, the average weekly earnings at Peterborough Works were $5.57 above the Ontario average for the electrical apparatus industry and $10.58 above the average for all industry in Ontario.

In the 1952 Canada Savings Bond drive, approximately 2,500 employees subscribed to over $1,200,000 worth of bonds, through payroll deductions alone. This was in addition to the cash purchases made at their own banks. In the past five years, employees at Peterborough Works through the payroll deduction system subscribed to $5,360,000 in Canada Savings Bonds.

C.G.E. . . a Safe Place

We are constantly striving to make our plant the safest place in the community in which to work. Modern safety devices and emergency medical service provided by a staff of competent nurses, operating in well-equipped dispensaries, serve to protect the health and safety of employees. We continually strive to reduce our already very low accident rate and on two separate occasions during the year we established a new outstanding record of 1,000,000 man hours without a lost time accident.

In addition we had two runs of half a million hours and one of three-quarters of a million hours, while two departments—the Tool Room and Induction Motors—have each established an unbroken run of 1,500,000 hours and are still continuing.

Plant

1952 was a year which witnessed the virtual completion of another phase in our expansion programme that has been continuing since the end of the war and has cost many millions of dollars. During the year over $2½ millions of the Company's earnings were invested in plant developments to increase our production facilities and improve working conditions. One machine alone cost $300,000.

This modern equipment and production facilities enable C.G.E. employees to produce first quality products and help maintain steady employment at the plant.

Community

We are proud of the participation of C.G.E. men and women in all activities of the community. Their contributions to the civic life, to church groups, and to all community programmes cannot be measured in dollars and cents alone—they have a definite influence on the progress and stability of Peterborough.

The Company, also, played its part in civic affairs; as Peterborough's largest single taxpayer and largest employer, it contributed greatly to the economic life and progress of our city and our community.

Langlois came back strong after taking all Beau had to offer in the first three rounds and outhustled the American through the rest of the fight.

There were no knockdowns, although Beau slipped to the canvas in the 10th.

Judge Charlie Shortell scored the bout 7-3 for Langlois. Judge Artie Aidala saw it 5-5 but gave the Frenchman an 8-7 edge in points while referee George Walsh scored it 5-4-1 for Langlois.

Conveners are: Juvenile—John Parry; midget—Mac VanAllen; bantam—Walter Firth. Bert Chapman is juvenile manager, Bill Post and Wilf Heffernan co-manage the midgets, while Ed Woodcock and Henry Jay handle the bantams.

The annual life-saver day will be under Mac VanAllen this year. The association will operate again in four groups, affiliated with the OLA.

City Carpetball

Results of last week's play: At the Legion Hall. Glens No. 1 met and went down to defeat in the first game 14-8 against Legion No. 10, after making it an 8-all tie in the 9th frame. No. 10 tied the second game in the 3rd end but Glens captured six of the next seven ends and, while No. 10 finished strong, they lost 9-12.

The Sons playing against Legion No. 3 at the Legion Hall only found the kat eight times in both games and went down to defeat. The scores were 15-6 and 20-4.

Fire Hall No. 4 were the opponents of Legion No. 5 at the Legion. No. 4 captured the first game 18-11 even though No. 5 finished very strong. No. 5 also went down in defeat in the second game by 8-15 score.

Legion No. 7 won the first game from Red Patch No. 11 by a 13-9 score. The second game was also closely fought; in fact, it was tied twice before No. 7 emerged the winner, 10-7.

At the Fire Hall, Legion No. 12 lost the first game 4-17 to No. 9. The second game saw No. 12 trailing when they scored a big five in the 11th end, a single in the final frame to make it a 10-all game. The postponed game between Legion No. 3 and Orphans No. 2 was played at the Legion. The first game saw No. 2 come from behind and make it 6-all in the eighth frame but in the next four ends No. 3 captured two of them with a three and a four end to win 13-9. The second game was a case of No. 3 coming from behind to tie the score at 3-all in the 6th end and going on to win 10-5. That completes the schedule, except for two postponed games. L.O.L. No. 6 vs. Fire Hall No. 9 and Orphans No. 2 vs. L.O.L. No 6. These games are holding up the final standing and must be played this week. The final standing will not be printed this week.

The President's Cup Final will be played March 30 at S.O.E. Hall between L.O.L. No. 6 vs. Orphans No. 2.

DOUBLES RESULTS

The third round of the Gracie's Memorial Doubles results are: At the S.O.E., Vinette and Sorrie defeated Reid and Stedman in two straight. The score of the first game was 7-3 and the second game saw No. 21 score a three in the final frame to lose 5-6.

Roscoe and Herr won first and third games by scores of 8-6 and 5-4 while Fenton and Weaver captured the second game 10-7. The deciding game was won by No. 19 by scoring a single in the final end to win 5-4.

Some scribes in Oslo, Norway, recently advanced the opinion that Russian hockeyists were tops in the world, with Canadians next. This silly statement is in line with Communist claims of having invented telephones, movies, motors, wonder drugs, etc. and etc., with a bland disregard for factual proof of other countries. Why even our second-rate hockey teams regularly trounce the best any other country has to offer. Canada had no trouble winning at hockey in the last Olympiad, though having many much better clubs at home than the one they sent abroad. Amateur teams, we mean. Too bad these Oslo writers and the Soviet scribes couldn't see a Stanley Cup playoff, eh?

Having picked the Wings to breeze through to Stanley Cup finals, we are pretty perturbed at their showing to date 'gainst the battling Boston Bruins. The Patrick pack leads the best-of-seven semi-final set by two games to one. Canadiens are up 2-1 on Hawks in the other bracket. Bruins are playing inspired hockey now and using a sound strategy of a defence barricade. The long odds have shortened rapidly now, but the wise money still rides on the Wings. After all, a team that took the NHL title five times in a row and last spring ousted Leafs and Canadiens in eight straight for the cup can't be written off just yet. But it could be a mighty tight fit.

That Cup Has Travelled

Lord Stanley's cup is quite historical in hockey. 'Twas put up in 1893 and was played for every year since with the exception of 1919 when severe influenza struck the finalists, Canadiens and Seattle, forcing the series to be cancelled. From '93 to '99 the cup competition was in just one game, sudden-death duels. For amateur winners at first, it was a challenge trophy after loop winners were declared, but finally was taken over completely by the pros. Some of the early winners were: Montreal A.A.A., Montreal Victorias, Montreal Shamrocks, Ottawa Silver Seven, Winnipeg Victorias, Ottawa Senators, Quebec Bulldogs, Montreal Wanderers, Vancouver Millionaires, Toronto Arenas, Victoria Cougars, Seattle, and so on.

An item from the Guelph Mercury: "Hockey here expired Thursday when Guelph bantams dropped the deciding OMHA final to Peterborough by 15-5. The fact that Guelph didn't succeed doesn't detract from their earlier successes. Several of the boys were quite blue after losing by such a one-sided score but they shouldn't permit that to worry them. Those reverses happen to the best of teams. The victorious Peterborough Shamrocks are worthy champions. They boast outstanding players in Larry Lonsberry, Gary Darling, Pat Baker and Bill Mahoney. But you'll be hearing plenty about some of the local bantams in future seasons. They could be tomorrow's junior 'A' stars." Quite right, and that also applies to the Peterborough victors.

A Trophy Worth $7,500

Several Ontario centres (Gananoque, Belleville and Madoc) had a look lately at a solid gold trophy valued at $7,500. It was won by Art Hatch, Hamilton speedboat driver, in England last year, the famous Duke of York Trophy. Hatch won it in three 30-mile heats, the first time it was taken by a Canadian. Because of the cup's value, the authorities weren't going to let the man take it out of the country, but he finally persuaded them to grant permission, placing the trophy in custody of the Canadian Boating Federation. After being shown around some, this valuable piece of property will rest in a Toronto bank vault. Mayhap it'll sit beside the Mann Cup which the Petes' Timbermen left in Toronto bank after winning it last fall.

Lindsay Takes OHA Series Over The Gans

LINDSAY (ENS) — A five-goal third period provided the Lindsay Muskies with their margin of victory last night as they rolled up a 9-4 score over the Gananoque Gans at the Lindsay Arena, to take their OHA intermediate "A" quarter-final set from the eastern team 4-2. Left-winger Bob Lewis was almost the whole show in the third period, as he scored three of the five goals, with centreman Stew Hicks assisting on all three.

The Muskies started strong in the game and, except for a lapse in the second period, showed complete mastery of the situation during the game. Before the first period was a minute old, Al Burns had tallied an unassisted goal, and two minutes later Ken Kelly made it 2-0, also solo. Before the period ended, Orlie Crawford scored the first of his two goals, netting a pass from Parkers and Coombs.

LENGTHEN LEAD

Early in the second period, Wimp Parker stretched the Muskies' lead to 4-0 with Crawford and Coombs assisting.

The Muskies, relaxed for a time and the Gans came back with a rush scoring three during the remainder of the middle frame. Atkins, first from Fair, then Tindall, scored the first pair of counters and Wood from Fair and Switzer finished it off.

The Muskies began to fly again with the opening whistle of the final period. Lewis scored three in a row, one with Hicks, the next when he trapped Hicks' pass out from the corner in front of the net, and the next when he banged Corley's rebound past Parrish in the Gans' net after Hicks started the play.

Coombs netted the next goal, with Parker assisting, when their passing bewildered the Gans. Crawford scored his second goal of the game, tipping in Coombs' shot from in front of the net. The Gans tallied their final goal late in the period when Woods got a loose puck in a scramble and pushed it behind O'Connell.

WELL IN CONTROL

The Muskies were in control of the game throughout. The first line of Parker, Crawford and Coombs, kept the Gans off balance every time they were on the ice, and shared in four goals. Stew Hicks sent his wingers, Corley and Lewis, in for dangerous rushes, that paid off in the final period with Lewis' goals. Sinclair, Kelly and O'Donoghue, on the third line, worked well as a checking line, and Kelly scored one goal. At the blue line, Al Burns and Grant Green stood out, but Davis and Hennessy played solid games as well. O'Connell, in the nets, overshadowed Parrish, who wasn't up to his earlier standard.

Switzer, Tindall, Atkins, Jackson and Woods were best for the losing Gans while Keys and Fair stood out at the defence. Parrish, especially in the third, let rebounds get away from him, leading to three of the five goals, the Muskies poured past him.

Marg Selkirk Leads

Marg Selkirk rolled high three of 783 this week in the Girls' City Bowling League, as L. Vincent and M. Sanderson tied for top single with 301 each. B. Castle's 610 came closest to the blind score of 611. Black's topped teams with 3360 pinnage, and Curtin's 1229 was the best club single. Whitewash coats were applied by Black's to Arcos, Curtin's over Sevenaires, and Collis against Austin's. The 2-1 wins went to Aces over Marines, and to Cardinals against Bassell's.

Good singles were: L. Vincent 301 and 271, M. Sanderson 301, D. Beatty 298, L. Pearson 292, M. Selkirk 291 and 278, M. Timm 283, T. Grierson 276, D. Mason 275 and 263, J. Moore 268, J. Brockley 267, M. Batley 265, G. Long 257, B. Morrow 250 and P. Richardson 250. Neat triples included: M. Selkirk 783, L. Vincent 764, D. Mason 736, D. Beatty 723, B. Morrow 705, M. Sanderson 683, A. Barnes 660 and L. Pearson 653.

Fourth Line Beats Scott's For Bush Hockey Loop Title

MILLBROOK (ENS)—Fourth Line again annexed the championship of the Millbrook and Cavan Bush Hockey League when they yanked out a 6-5 victory at Civic Arena over Scott's Corners to take the finals in two straight before more than 600 fans. It was a great game with Scott's boring in to put the Liners on the defensive till the big line of Walling, McDowell and Allan Hutchison fought back to take control. For three minutes they had more chances than an Irish lottery but couldn't connect. Dawson took a long shot through a forest of sticks and the puck was deflected to Harris who put it behind Hubbeard. Later, Dunn blazed one from the blue line to catch the upper corner. Walling got through neatly to pass to Allan Hutchison for Liners' first goal. Seconds later, they did it again, with Walling scoring from Hutchison. Dawson and Crichton sat out penalties but Alberico, Stevens and Harris killed off time. Earl Hutchison then flipped a long pass to McDowell, who blasted it home to give the Liners a lead.

A HOT PACE

The pace got hotter in the second and the teams threw their weights around. At four minutes, Alberico and Stevens combined, and he fired in the tying marker. Conroy and Thompson tossed punches and got the gate from an alert Referee Herb Payne.

In the third, Alberico picked up an aimless Line pass and whipped it to Stevens to score. Greenly and Friar crashed into the scoring act to again knot the count. Friar, a 15-year-old lightweight, wasn't a bit out of his depth in this company. Walling and McDowell did a joint dipsy-doodle in front of the Corners' cage till Mr. Hustle found an opening to slip the disc past Hehn. But Seabrooke got it right back when Crichton harpooned a clearing pass to set him up.

GETS THE WINNER

With less than three minutes to go, McDowell, about as easy to stop as a runaway locomotive, banged in the million-dollar marker. Scott's Corners went down with guns blazing and, with 14 seconds to go, Crichton had Hubbeard at his mercy with a close-in shot and rebound, but the Liners' netter won himself a niche in the hall of fame by smothering both—the Fourth Line fans starting to breathe again.

For Scott's, Hehn turned in a standout performance, and Harris and Alberico went well. Allan Hutchinson starred for the champions. Teams:

Fourth Line: Goal, Hubbeard; defence, E. Hutchinson and Olan; centre, Walling; wings, McDowell and A. Hutchinson; alternates, Fallis, Lowery, Thompson, Agnew, Greenly.

Scott's: Goal, Hehn; defence, Dawson and Crichton; centre, Alberico; wings, Stevens and Harris; alternates, Conroy, Seabrooke, Dunn, Blodgett, Minnie, Laroque, Little, Galley.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

This column wouldn't think of becoming involved in any arguments concerning the birthplace of hockey. That's a topic too controversial for our placid existence.

But one "first," and an important one, in the history of hockey in this Dominion, we must hand to Sault Ste. Marie. It was the first Canadian city to boast a professional hockey team. For long before the old National Association was organized, preceding the present National League, the Soo was a member of the Professional International League, formed in 1904. The two Soos, Portage Lake and Calumet in Michigan, along with Pittsburgh, constituted the first line-up of this league, later joined by the Houghton, Michigan, club.

Those were the days of real sport in hockey. The Canadian Soo club was formed by four sportsmen of the city, of whom John P. Mooney and George S. Cowie are still living. These four sportsmen put up $250 each, ran the club for two years. Players' salaries were then from $20 to $35 per week, with the added inducement that sweaters, sticks and skates were free. And some names that are legendary in Canada's hockey annals today dotted the rosters of those clubs—names such as "Cyclone" Taylor, Newsy Lalonde, Jack Laviolette, Didier Pitre, Hod Stuart, hockey immortal who was manager and player for Pittsburgh, Jimmy Gardner, Con Corbeau, and a dozen more.

The Canadian Soo team on one occasion was forced to break through the salary limit of $35. The club had suffered a great many injuries, and as a daring replacement, it was decided to secure Newsy Lalonde. Newsy came high. He asked for $50 per week for four weeks, and, sportingly, the club agreed to pay. The train bearing the great Lalonde arrived at 8 o'clock the night of the big game, three hours late. LaLonde stepped off, dressed to play and even wearing his skates. He played incognito, scored three goals, and not until the next day did the identity of this wizard of the ice become known.

Sault Ste. Marie was just a small town in those days. It had not yet amalgamated with Steelton and the combined population did not exceed 9,000. But interest in hockey ran high, as it still does in this sporting centre, which regularly sends players to the National League. In later days it developed the great Sault Greyhounds that have won their share of amateur championships. The spirit that sponsored a professional team, whose roster included many of the greats of hockey in a league of ambitions far beyond normal expectations, still carries on around the Sault, producing great hockey, fine players and enthusiastic crowds. These crowds are more orderly, no doubt, than those who staged the famous post-game mob battles of the turn of the century, but just as keen.

Bruins Seek Three Straight Against Detroit Red Wings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Twice in a row Boston Bruins have fouled up the greatest scoring machine in present-day hockey. Tonight they'll try to do it again. The wily veteran trio of Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart and Joe Klukay again will be out to haunt Detroit Red Wings' sharpshooting threesome of Marty Pavelich, Gordie Howe and Ted Lindsay, with whom they have practically lived in the last two games of the Stanley Cup series.

Thanks to their assiduous attentions, the Wings' biggest guns have been silent and the Bruins lead the National Hockey League champions by two games to one in their best-of-seven semi-final.

TRY TO DRAW EVEN

At Chicago, the fourth-place Black Hawks will try to draw level with Montreal Canadiens, who whipped them twice in a row before taking their first setback on Chicago ice Sunday night.

The Hawk victory was their first in 11 playoff meetings with the Montrealers and coach Sid Abel hopes the morale boost will produce another win tonight.

The busiest man in Boston undoubtedly will be Bruin goalie Sugar Jim Henry, who stopped a total of 85-odd Detroit shots in marking up his two victories. The Bruins' opportunist style is less wearing on Terry Sawchuk, who customarily handles about half as many Boston drives at the Detroit end.

Hornets Win First Round, Edge Out Bears

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pittsburgh Hornets nosed out Hershey Bears 7-5 in an extra period Monday night to win the first round of the playoffs for the Calder Cup and the American Hockey League championship.

The Hornets made it three straight in the best-of-five series to eliminate the Bears.

Early in the extra period Johnny McLellan passed from behind the Bears net. The puck struck the back of Gordie Henry's skates and rebounded into the Bears net for the winning goal.

The Bears hit hard in the opening period of the game at Hershey, and took a commanding lead on goals by Leo Labine, Corcoran and Gordie Wilson. Sabourin tallied for the Hornets.

GETS SECOND POINT

In the second period Wilson annexed his second point to give the Bears a three-goal lead. Then the Hornets rallied and narrowed the scoring gap when Ray Timgren and Bobby Solinger scored.

The final period had all the thrills in the book. Early in the period a hard scrimmage play sent both Hershey defencemen sprawling on the ice and Hugh Bolton walked in with the tying point. Then at 7:34 a hard shot from Danny Lewicki's stick bounced off Frank Martin's skates and into the Bears' net. But with less than two minutes to play, Sam Bettio scored from scrimmage for the Bears to tie the score.

Early in the extra period McLellan's shot put the Hornets in front. With less than a minute to play Henry was withdrawn from the Bears' net. The strategy backfired because on the faceoff Solinger scored on the unguarded net.

NHL Hockey Tour Now Cancelled

CHICAGO (AP) — —A proposed European exhibition hockey tour by Chicago Black Hawks and Montreal Canadiens was called off Monday.

Bill Tobin, Hawks general manager, said playing dates on the continent could not be scheduled.

"Originally, the tour was set up for Paris, Germany and Switzerland," he said. "But now all we can get are 10 dates in England, and after we had finished there we would have to wait two weeks to get passage back home.

"The return home delay would be necessary because the tour was planned on a round-trip arrangement."

Frank Selke, general manager of the Canadiens, said he would not seek another team for the trip, scheduled to start April 24 from Montreal.

"I guess it's all off," he said.

Two Jockeys Hurt At Gulfstream Park

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP)—Two jockeys are in hospital with injuries suffered during Monday's racing program at nearby Gulfstream

Gerald Porch, 30, received three broken ribs and possible internal injuries when his mount, Doctor Dick, crashed against the outside rail and fell over onto the grass.

Steve Brooks, 32, was thrown from Ten Stone. He suffered a fractured collar bone.

Name Manager For BE Games

VANCOUVER (CP)—A manager has finally been chosen to lead preparations for the 1954 British Empire Games here, it was announced Monday.

He's Blair M. Clerk, 62-year-old director of B.C. DVA veterans welfare services, and a veteran of financial and publicity campaigns throughout North America.

He won unanimous approval of the manager screening committee, which debated more than 36 applications. Official approval of games committee proper and Mayor Fred Hume is considered a formality.

Clerk expects to take over the post next week.

The first step he will take, he said, will be "to pull all the loose ends together" and begin carrying out plans laid down by the BEG directors.

Oxygen Tank And New Goaltender Stop Kitchener - Waterloo's Winning Streak

SUDBURY (CP)—It took an oxygen tank and a new goaltender to stop Kitchener-Waterloo's winning streak. But Sudbury didn't win either.

The game Monday night, third in a best-of-seven Eastern Canada senior hockey semi-final, ended in a 3-3 overtime tie. The Dutchmen, Southern Ontario champions, lead the series 2-0 with one game tied. The next two games will be played here tonight and Thursday.

The jinx on the team scoring the first goal of the game continued. In the first two games the Wolves scored the first goals and were unable to win. Monday night Kitchener counted first.

The Wolves, using an oxygen tank as a recuperative measure for the first time, outshot and outplayed the Dutchmen most of the game. They showed improvement over the first two games of the series in Kitchener last week when the Dutchmen scored 4-2 and 8-3 victories.

BORROW GOALTENDER

Sudbury also borrowed goaltender Bobby Gillson, an opponent of the Dutchmen all season while playing with Owen Sound Mercurys in the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A series.

Dutchmen started the scoring when Bobby Schnurr tallied at 4:22 of the opening period. Four minutes later the Wolves tied it up. Yacker Flynn picked up a relay from Roly McLenahan in front of the net and drilled in a short shot. Kitchener was two men short.

It appeared that the Dutchmen were heading for their third victory when Howie Lee and Doug Verity sent them ahead 3-1 in the second period. Two Sudbury forwards, Marty Burton and Mauno Kauppi, went off for repairs in the second but returned later in the game. Burton was hit on the knee by team-mate Lennie Speck's blue-line shot and Kauppi was clipped on the head by a high stick.

NOT OUT OF RUNNING

A little more than half of the third period was finished when Flynn roared back with his second tally of the night to bring the Wolves to within one goal of Kitchener's lead. One minute and eight seconds before the final whistle Roly McLenahan tied the score while Kitchener's Jack McKenzie was sitting out a hooking penalty.

Both sides, especially the Wolves, had great chances to break the deadlock in the overtime session but the score was unchanged.

Referees Andy Bellemer and Gus Plager had a busy night, handing out 20 penalties, including two 10-minute misconducts to the Wolves in the overtime period. The minor penalties were split evenly, each team drawing nine.

Detroit Leads League In Early Round

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Detroit first and New York Yankees in the second division in the American League!

Pittsburgh Pirates second and St. Louis Cardinals last in the National League!

Impossible?

Probably during the regular season, but this is Grapefruit League play where the impossible is possible. Andt that's just how things stand today.

IN NORMAL PLACE

The only team that looks as if it might be in its normal place is Brooklyn, which is leading the National league with 15 victories and seven defeats. The Pirates are 4½ games behind followed by Chicago Cubs, Milwaukee Braves, Cincinanti Reds, Philadelphia Phillies, New York Giants and the Cards.

Following Detroit in the American are St. Louis Browns, Washington Senators, Cleveland Indians, Yankees, Chicago White Sox, Philadelphia A's and Boston Red Sox.

The Tigers, with a 12-5 record for the spring—and with the opening of the regular season less than two weeks away—show a percentage of .706.

New Rector Of Cavan Gives First Sermon

MILLBROOK —(ENS) —The Rev. L. R. Pocock, new rector of the parish of Cavan, preached his first sermon in St. Thomas' Anglican Church Sunday evening.

Taking as his text, "What shall I do then with Jesus which is called the Christ?" he said the question was just as vital today as when it was asked nearly 2,000 years ago. People today were asking, "What shall I do with Christ? Which little niche of my life shall I put Him in? What part of my life shall I devote to Christianity?" Rather they should ask, "What will Jesus do with me? How best can I serve Him?"

"For us the choice should be not greed as with Judas but sacrifice; not popularity as with Pilate but faithfulness; not power as with the Pharisees but obedience, not cruelty as with the Roman soldiers but gentleness; not Barabbas as with the people but Christ. We should choose to be one with Christ and to lead others to Him."

It was announced that the Rev. P. G. Powell of Port Hope will administer Holy Communion in St. Thomas' Church at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Mr. Pocock said he himself would be ordained priest the first Sunday in May and that he would take up his regular duties in the parish of Cavan immediately after that.

Les Binkley Wins Bellmore Trophy

RULE CHANGE TOO LATE

TORONTO (CP)—Canadian football's new forward pass rule comes a year too late for Edmonton Eskimos, says Annis Stukus.

Stukus, on his way west to take charge of Vancouver's new football club, paused in Edmonton last week for the Canadian Rugby Union meeting which decided that a pass doesn't have to cross the line of scrimmage to be a forward.

Chief effect of the change is to classify officially as forwards screen and shovel passes thrown to a receiver behind the line of scrimmage. They were permitted last season but when incomplete the ball could be recovered by the defending team. As forward passes the passing team retains possession, except on third down.

Former coach, player and sports writer, Stukus recalls in the Toronto Star that Edmonton lost possession of the ball at a key moment in the Grey Cup game against Toronto Argonauts last fall when a screen pass was incomplete. The Eskimos had the ball on the Toronto 16-yard line and appeare ready to overcome a 15-11 deficit. Argos recovered and got out of the hole. Under the new rule change, it would have been ruled an incomplete pass and Edmonton would have kept possession for another try.

Basically, the experts look on the forward pass and other rule changes as clarification of present regulations and doubt they will have much effect on the game.

Lew Hayman, general manager of Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four union, says the pass rule will clear up confusion about shovel and screen passes. The changes won't harm the game and will help improve it, he thinks. He considers they will help officials more than anyone else.

KEENE (ENS). — Four collection plates were dedicated at the Sunday morning service of Keene United Church, to the memory of Mrs. Clarence Robertson, who passed away June 9, 1952. The Rev. H. B. Herrington had charge of the service, and the presentation was made by Mrs. Ross McIntyre and Mrs. Ross Comrie.

Mrs. Robertson was a charter member of the Tillicum Class and her passing was the first break through death, since it was founded some 20 years ago.

The collection plates, beautifully hand-made and carved by T. W. Oke of this village, out of a mixture of walnut and gumwood and finished in a dark varnish stain, each bear the inscription around the edge: "In Memory of Helen Robertson: Died June 9, 1952."

Tamworth Defaults Over Rough Play

TORONTO (CP)—As a result of a dispute in which charges of rough play were made, Tamworth has defaulted its Ontario Hockey Association intermediate B quarter-final series to Orono, which will meet Bracebridge in the semi-final.

Orono won the opener 13-1 at Belleville Friday. Tamworth refused to play the second game, scheduled for Bowmanville Saturday night, and defaulted the game and the series after R. H. Davidson, Tamworth manager, asked the OHA for police protection against what he called "rough stuff that would leave us a bunch of cripples."

To Shift Money In Accounts Utilities Seek Permission

Commissioner Dr. G. R. Langley tilted his lance at "bureaucrats making silly rules" at Monday's PUC meeting, and succeeded in having general managed D. Howard Powell authorized to inquire from "senior hydro officials" if money could be transferred from one PUC account to another to avoid paying interest on bank overdrafts.

Dr. Langley steadfastly refused to acknowledge finality of a ruling by D. J. McAuley, municipal section supervisor of the internal audit and methods department of the HEPC, and insisted that the PUC should apply to Hydro chairman Robert Saunders for a reversal of the ruling.

"I'm sure Mr. Saunders would agree because he's a businessman," Dr. Langley said.

SEPARATE ACCOUNTS

Mr. McAuley's ruling was contained in his answer to a letter from Mr. Powell asking his advice in the matter of separate bank accounts for gas, water and electic departments.

"Where an overdraft occurs in any one department's account, due purely to the spread between billing and collecting times or lag in time occurring between the sale and payment from the city treasury of an authorized debenture, may money be transferred to cover that account from any other department's account?" Mr. Powell asked.

In his reply, Mr. McAuley stated: "Any transfer of funds from your waterworks or gas department would be borrowings by the electric department, and Section 41, Subsection 4 of the Public Utilities Act states that nothing in this section shall divest the council of its authority with reference to providing money required for the works. In other words, my understanding is that any borrowing for your utilities would have to be by the council."

In addition, Mr. McAuley stated that no municipality could borrow money without HEPC's consent, and there was no provision in existing legislation enabling hydro utilities to lend money to any other utility.

"I don't think there's the slightest intention on the part of the hydro commission to impose a penalty on any utilities commission," Dr. Langley said. "This is merely an auditor's opinion. We're not alienating the money in any way whatsoever. We're merely saving the interest on an overdraft."

"Nevertheless, Hydro says we can't do it," objected Commissioner Richard Raine.

YES-MEN?

"Have we a duty or haven't we of saving the city as much as $2,500?" Dr. Langley demanded hotly. "Are we simply yes-men?"

"Our operations are controlled by Hydro, and they say we can't do it," Commissioner Raine said.

"You've always got bureaucrats making silly rules saying you can't do this and you can't do that," Dr. Langley said.

"Let's find out first why this is done because there might be a very good reason for it," Commissioner Raine said.

"I'm content as long as you don't take this negative attitude," Dr. Langley said. "It's up to us to fight for it because those debit balances are costing us four or five per cent."

"We have the opinion of an auditor," Chairman Fred Hills said. "What are you going to do?"

"Go over his head to a higher authority," said Dr. Langley.

"He's more than an auditor," said Secretary James Turnbull. "He's supervisor of the municipal section of the internal audit and methods department for Hydro."

"In questions of gas and water we would have to get permission from the city," Mr. Raine said.

"They wouldn't hesitate for a moment," Dr. Langley said.

"Maybe so, but this is Hydro," Mr. Raine said.

"All right; we'll go to Mr. Saunders," Dr. Langley said.

"The best thing to do is to find out why it's done before we go any further," Mr. Raine said.

Toronto was one of the first Canadian cities to establish a professional police force, in 1835.

Prospector Gets £25,000 Plans To Stay In Shack

DARWIN (Reuters) — Uranium prospector Mike White has £25,000 but he is going to go right on living in his bush shack.

John Michael White, 45, is the discoverer of the rich Rum Jungle uranium field. The Australian government gave him a big cash reward for the discovery but Mike says the money won't make much difference to his way of life.

The tall, lean prospector-farmer plans to stay in his shack living the tough bush existence as he has for most of his life.

Four years ago White was trying to grow peanuts and bananas on a small plot of land at Rum Jungle, in the remote wastes of Australia's northern territory.

RECOGNIZED ROCKS

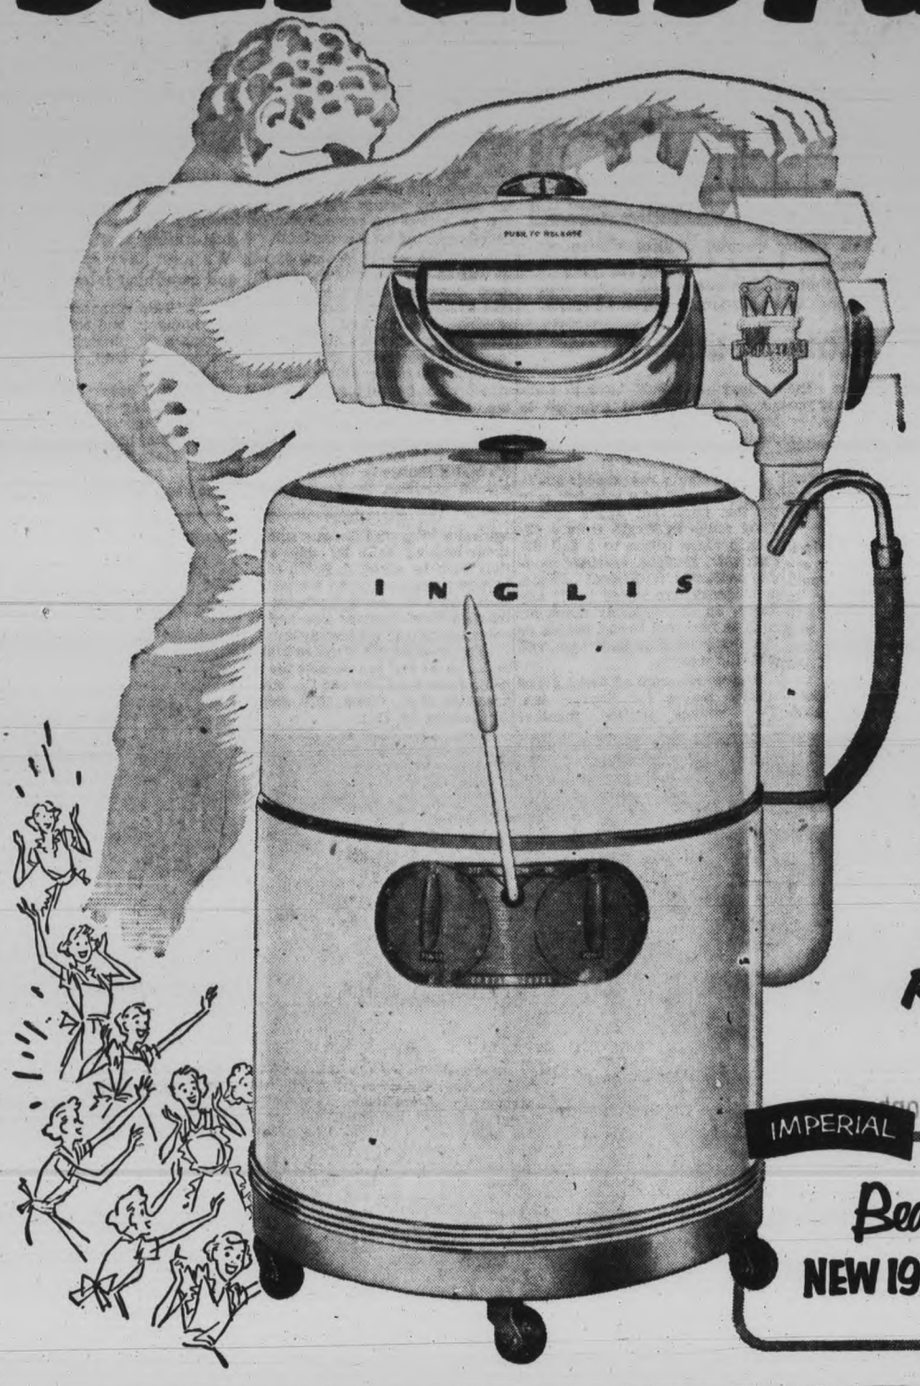
Fresh meat out in the bush is scarce, and White supplemented his diet with kangaroo meat. On a hunting expedition in 1949, the slow-speaking Australian found an outcrop of copper-stained rocks. He remembered a handbook on the identification of radio-active minerals issued by the bureau of minera resources. He rushed back to the shack. The colored samples in his hand matched the plate showing uranium-bearing ores.

White collected $20,000 the first instalment on his reward last September. The rest of the money depended on final proof that he had made a rich find .The proof now exists—Rum Jungle is one of the world's biggest suppliers of the atomic ore.

Houses are going up, sewerage and electricity have been laid on and modern roads built. The population is growing tirelessly.

White plans to use the money to develop other mining interests but meanwhile carries out contract work cutting timber, using his spare time for more prospecting.

Rail Dispute Closes Plants



PITTSBURGH (AP)—A dispute over the suspension of two railroaders forced the shutdown today of all plants of the U. S. Steel Corporation in the Pittsburgh area.

About 4,500 employees of the Union Railroad Co., a subsidiary of U. S. Steel, went on strike, bringing lay-off orders to almost 50,000 men in the mills and plants dependent on the railroad's operation.

The railroad connects various U. S. Steel plants, hauls raw materials to the mills and carries away finished products. It also serves the various departments within the plants.

U. S. Steel said the plants cannot operate while the railroad is on strike. A U. S. Steel official said all iron making blast furnaces and steel-making open hearth furnaces are being banked as rapidly as possible.

Plan $150,000 Home For Poor Children

TORONTO (CP)—The Salvation Army is to build a $150,000 home for poor children in London, Ont., as a result of funds made available to them from the estate of the late Albert MacGarvey, who died in London in 1925.

Approval of an agreement between the Canada Trust Company, administrator of the estate, and the governing council of the Salvation Army, Canada East, was reached Monday at Osgoode Hall.

The trust company will give the Salvation Army $150,000 for construction of the home plus an income from the residue of the estate, once valued at $350,000.

MAP OF A ROOM sketched on graph paper plus paper furniture cutouts make rearranging furnishings all fun and no fatigue for this young couple. Skillful placement of furniture, built-in bookshelves, and a loveseat that unfolds into a bed, packs den, music room and bedroom into a small space.

Plan With Care To Get More Space

By KAY SHERWOOD

In step with the modern homemaker's budget-minded dreams is the room that can include all the extras of a separate wing tacked on the house or a larger apartment. Probably the most wanted "extra" is the extra bedroom to house visiting firemen or care for an expanding family. A TV room, study, playroom, or sewing corner make more claims to extra space.

With skillful planning and paper work you can pack a lot of "extras" into one modest-sized room. It may be your living room, sun porch, den, basement recreation room (if it's airy and dry) or even your dining room. Smartly-styled dual-use furniture, from desks that double as vanities to sofas that conceal made-up beds, adds the needed flexibility to such a room. Even the old-time day bed with its not-so-concealing "throw" has given way to trim chintz or tweed-covered studio-divans with contemporary wrought iron frames or provincial curves.

Wedge-shaped bolsters make for comfortable daytime sitting. Fine innerspring mattresses are soft for sleep but strong enough to take us around the clock.

To extract the most use from a room with the least effort takes smart figuring. A cemetery silence usually greets my bright "who's going to help me move the furniture?" So, I found it was easier and less frazzling to nerves to shift paper furniture around on a room sketched to scale on graph paper than to heave the real McCoy into new locations only to find the couch overlapping the door by two inches.

Ready to help rearrange your furniture is a new booklet published by a bedding manufacturer (see below for the address) which comes complete with graph paper, furniture cutouts, and a baker's dozen of ideas for achieving an "extra" room. Paper furniture marked to scale includes tables, chairs, radios, TV cabinets, breakfronts, pianos and various-sized sofa-beds and studio couches.

All you do is diagram your floor plan on paper, noting window and door openings, and cut out the furniture which matches what you have or are budgeting to buy.

Incidentally, if you are planning to move into a new home, a diagram noting furniture placement, drawn ahead of time, will save you hours of work plus money for paid helpers.

The new booklet is chockablock with suggestions and tips for arrangements. For example, you'll need an eight-foot clearance in front of any sofa that unfolds to bed length. Allowing for that, you won't want anything heavier than a light coffee table blocking the front of the sofa.

I had to change one arrangement because the diagram showed that one would have to walk across the unfolded sofa-bed to leave the room. In this case, a studio couch will serve the purpose and fits the space.

Where ample clearance is available, the width of a sofa-bed may be the important space factor. They range in length from a 43-inch armless settee to a full 82-inch sofa. Designs, whether modern sectionals, traditional Lawson, or Regency, are styled to fit any decor. So are covering materials such as informal tweed, chintz, or the more elegant matelasse and metallic weaves.

The wide range of designs and widths makes for flexible use. Two settees pushed together against a long wall make a sumptuous-looking sofa by day and twin beds by night. A small, cozy loveseat takes only 66 inches of wall space but when unfolded to make a three-quarter size bed it can sleep two in an emergency.

(The booklet "14 Ways to Make an Extra Room" is available for 25 cents from the Simmons Co. Merchandise Mart, Room 1870, Dept. N, Chicago, 54. Ill.)

Science Gives Homemaker Many New Cleaning Aids

In its well - meaning way, science is doing just about everything it can think of to help us keep the household dust and grime under control. The simple old-fashioned method of brandishing a feather duster at the offending specks has fallen under the weight of evidence that it is inefficient and unsanitary.

In its place, science has given us new waxes, dusters, polishes and cleaners aimed to do specific jobs. Housecleaning is more efficient and more sanitary with these helpers. About the only exercise you get is one in vigorous self-control to avoid overloading your shelves with super-special aids.

Practically every homemaker, be she rookie or veteran, can use specialized cleaning help in the kitchen. Enamelled woodwork and shining appliances gather sticky fingerprints, food stains and sooty film. Devised to clean up problems like these is a new kitchen wax which erases even the stubborn yellowing film that cooking fumes deposit on enamelled cabinets and woodwork.

It works as well on porcelain enamelled appliances and stainless steel trims. The creamy emulsion, applied with a damp rag, eliminates the dirt. A light follow-up polishing brings out a luster that advertises the protective wax film remaining on the surfaces.

A one-job specialist that earns its way on our cleaning shelf is an oven cleaner. Although nothing will ever make the chore of removing accumulated burnt-on food and grease from an oven interior a pleasure, this liquid cleanser practically eliminates the arm-breaking scraping and scouring necessary to pry off the mess.

A sponge applicator is used to daub the stuff on the porcelain-enamel interior surfaces. After it's had a chance to loosen up the burned particles, the surfaces are washed. This cleanser is potent stuff, however, and one does have to handle it gingerly to avoid splashing on skin, clothing or kitchen floor.

Absorbent paper impregnated with a cleaning agent and rolled up in units the size of a spool of thread, makes handy little specialists for cleaning glass or porcelain.

The paper unit is rubbed over a surface and the white residue whisked off with a cloth. Because they are individually packaged in cellophane envelopes, one or two can be tucked into bathroom cabinet or a drawer ready to give quick first-aid to a steamy or streaked mirror.

Modern answer to the feather duster are liquids that are used to treat cloths and mops and which help them absorb dust. For example, with one such liquid you saturate clean dust-cloths and sprinkle mops. After cloth or mop is dry, you go ahead with routine cleaning. Instead of flying around the room, dust specks cling to the treated cloth and no dust-catching oily residue is left on the furniture.

A pepped-up new furniture polish squirts out of its red-topped can as a foamy white cream. This is a silicone base polish which is packed under pressure into a small, non-spillable can (a factor when you have a toddler "helping"). Only a tiny dab of foam, dispensed through a spout, is needed to polish an entire table top.

WIPING OFF THE FILM from your enameled surfaces is easy with the new kitchen aids for quick and easy housekeeping. This is a vast improvement over the old-fashioned dust-raising feather duster popular in grandmother's day. We now have specialized preparations for many scouring and scrubbing jobs.

PAINT LEFT OVER AFTER WALLS in this room were painted is put to decorative use on small accessories. Model is painting a plaster wall bracket with the pale cocoa shade used on background wall. The bracket was first given a sealer undercoat. After paint is dry, design will be picked out with gilt. Muted pink, left over from painting another wall, was used to paint the wastebasket and put a narrow border on the serving tray on the table and lamp shade in background.

Leftover Paint Will Brighten Rooms

What to do with the leftovers is a problem that challenges the springtime decorator as well as the cook. Dabs of paint left over from coloring a wall or touching up woodwork can be turned into decorative assets to build your reputation for homemaking cleverness.

All it takes, as the saying goes, is a little imagination and some peace and quiet while the children nap or attend school.

Helpful suggestions to spark the project come from Margaret Hutchison, noted color stylist.

"Keep the color scheme simple," she says, "when you plan to paint walls and to use leftovers to brighten small accessories. One or two colors are enough if you want to avoid a spotty effect."

Where to use the leftover paint? "Apply it to wall sconces, brackets, lamp shades, waste baskets, book ends, serving trays and even picture frames, to list a few," says Miss Hutchison.

"If you are in doubt about wall color, look to your curtains for cues," advises the stylist. For example, in her home Miss Hutchison matched exactly, a muted pink in her sheer printed curtains to paint for two walls.

A pale cocoa shade picking up another color in the curtain lines a corner alcove. Paint that can be custom mixed at your own store, in hundreds of graduations of basic colors, makes it a cinch to get a perfect match.

After any large-scale painting, the leftovers should be poured into a smaller container and tightly sealed. We use mayonnaise jars with screw-on lids. The less air in the container, the less chance for "skin" to form on the surface of paint.

"A black undercoat will make paper lamp shades opaque so that brush strokes won't show through when the lamp is lighted," says Miss Hutchison. If paint is light-colored, it will probably take two coats to cover the black undercoat completely.

Metal or wicker waste baskets also take to the paint treatment. "But," advises the stylist, "you'll be smart to finish with a protective coat of clear shellac or plastic spray." (Continued on Page 11)

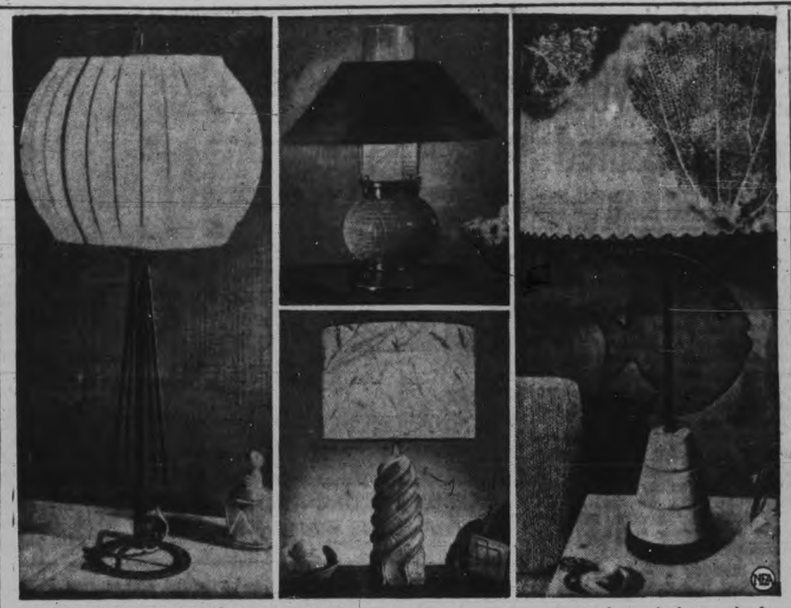
Glass Bricks Especially Suited For Remodelling

Panels of glass block—hollow bricks of translucent glass widely used in all types of construction—now are being employed on a wide scale by home builders and remodelers from coast to coast.

This material which transmits daylight without loss of strength, can be used with a wide variety to improve appearance and livabiliyt of a home.

The square glass blocks are about 4 inches thick and come in 6, 8 and 12-inch sizes. They are sturdily built and their hollow interiors contain a partial vacuum giving a glass block panel, insulating qualities similar to an 8-inch brick wall. Several face patterns of glass block are manufactured, each designed to meet specific needs.

The glass block panels are especially suitable for home remodelling. Vertical panels of glass block flanking an entrance will add beauty and light to the home. Square or rectangular panels can be used throughout the house wherever additional light is desired without exposure of an undesirable view.



Glass block panels are especially suitable for kitchens and bathrooms because the material is modern, sturdy, good looking, impervious to water, easy to keep clean, insures privacy, and on top of all that, is a good insulating material. Placed behind the sink, stove, laundry machine or other work area in kitchens, they give light where most needed. In the bath, the panels make excellent shower walls and dividing partitions admitting light without loss of privacy.

Leftover Paint

If you've used a lot of one color in a room, you may want to carry accents of it into other rooms. Good little color carriers are the inexpensive plaster or pressed-wood wall brackets which display figurines or plants. After brackets or sconces are painted with the leftover dabs, you can add an elegant and expensive-looking gleam by picking out parts of the design with gilt.

"Even though you've calculated your paint requirements so that there is only a thimbleful left over, don't waste it," says Miss Hutchison. It takes less than a thimbleful to stroke a thin line around the inside edge of a picture frame, the handles of a serving tray, or a narrow border on a wood lamp base. But this small touch adds a subtle emphasis to your decor.

Modern Lamps Replacing Old Models

There's a new look of elegance, replacing the casual air of the past, in the new lamp designs for spring.

Special emphasis is placed on brass, though black metal and black-an-white combinations are not obsolete. Many of the new collections have a dash of sophisticated color—pink, brown or green. White-and-gold combinations are well liked, too, since they show versatility in blending with color schemes.

This year's modern hasn't the stark, cold look of the past. There's new, rich dramatic quality and there's even a touch of baroque in some designs.

Crystal prisms are used for a scrolled. wrough-iron table lamp while a band of crystal beads appears in a black parchment shade to lend sparkle to light. And a wrought-iron floor lamp supports an electrified candelabra arrangement.

Black metal mesh, emphasized in modern decorative accessories, is used in this season's lamps, too. Equally light and airy are the new lamps with round lantern shades reflecting an Oriental influence. Some of these white lanterns are made of synthetic "lamb-skin." Others are acetate. These make soft lighting for conversational groupings and foyers.

Bedroom lamps are no longer pint-sized with intricately ruffled and beribboned silk shades. They've grown up in size and styling.

For spring, 1953, there are many modern lamps specially scaled for double dressers and night tables. These range in height from 18 to 27 inches, are taller and more sophisticated than the typical "vanity" lamps of the past. They reflect current styling trends, from Japanese lantern effects to wiry cages in brass and black metal.

In complete harmony with provincial decor are the lamps with provincial motifs. These are sleek, streamlined versions that show effects of contemporary styling.

The oil-lamp chimney that was once used to shield an open flame becomes a handsome motif on a modern glass column. Both chimney and cylindrical base are painted with small, white checks for a delicate pattern that is attractively transparent.

Spring Carpets Are Full Of Color

I've just had a look at the new spring carpets and they're enough to dazzle any shopper. Those of us who wrestle daily with the family budget will be inclined to throw same (the budget, not the family) out of the window when we're confronted with these new textures, colors, fibers and designs.

For nearly any family a carpet is still a major investment to be carefully planned. But this year rug makers have concentrated their talents and put fine, high-styling and luxury quality into the so-called "popular price bracket."

There is something to think of besides such purely practical considerations as: Will the design give the secret away if the family dog has an accident? Will the rug take the wear and tear of day-long traffic from the kitchen to the front door and back again? Will my husband stomp out of the house tearing his hair when he sees the bill? There is the matter of styling to be considered.

If your furniture happens to be contemporary, look for a rug like the one which I saw. It was thick cut-pile cotton in a bold, geometric, abstract motif in green on a sandy-beige ground. The designer called it "Astral."

Traditional floral designs are back in the picture minus their stiffness and scaled down to a size suitable for today's smaller rooms and furniture. Vinyl yarns shrunk into wool pile give a lacy look to a floral damask carpet. This has small sprigs of multicolored flowers joined by slender, leafy vines on a beige or gray ground.

Flowers show up again in a 1953 woven-cotton version of an antique nooked rug. The posies in this one are spaced in black-outlined squares and four dozen colors are used to translate the charming old-fashioned design into modern carpeting.

Crisp checks and colorful plaids woven from wool and carpet-rayon make neat, practical floor-coverings. Because soil and footprints don't show up on their textured surfaces, these rugs are aimed to please the homemaker who must contend with the wear that small children, together with their assorted friends and pets, can give.

Some of the smartest-looking textured effects are optical illusions. Moresque yarns, individual strands dyed differed shades of one color or in salt-and-pepper mixtures, when woven into carpets give flat surfaces the illusion of depth.

Colors rival the rainbow but noteworthy is the strong showing made by browns and gold in shades ranging from sand to earth brown and from cinnamon shades to mustard and bronze tones.

Blue takes the spotlight with aqua, turquoise, sky blue and hazy blue-gray in both wool and cotton. Green and gray are always near the top in popularity and introduce such new variations as olive green, avocado and charcoal.

SPRIGS OF FLOWERS are scattered over this wool-damask carpet. Vinyl yarns form the leaf outlines of these deisgns.

SHEPHERD'S PLAID and the tight-loop construction of this wool and carpet-rayon rug resist soil. Drapery accents the colors.

UNDERLINING the contemporary decor in this room is the new woven-cotton carpet which has a widely spaced abstract motif design in green and brown colors on a soft sand biege background.

Pilot's Error Said Reason For Crash At Karachi

KARACHI (CP)—The crash of a Canadian Pacific Airlines Comet jet aircraft here four weeks ago was written off today as the result of the pilot's error.

All 11 men aboard the Comet died when it crashed on takeoff at Karachi airport March 3. The crew was made up of five of Canadian Pacific's most experienced airmen, including Capt. Charles H. Pentland, 42, the pilot, and Capt. C. North Sawle, 38, co-pilot. Sawle, one of the original Alberta bush pilots, was a member of the select group which has flown more than 1,000,000 miles.

The report of an inquiry into the crash, published today, said "the prescribed takeoff technique was not followed."

NOSE TOO HIGH

It said the nose of the Comet was lifted too high during the takeoff run, "resulting in a partially stalled condition and excessive drag."

"This did not permit normal acceleration and prevented the aircraft from becoming airborne within the prescribed distance."

The inquiry was conducted by representatives of the Canadian, Pakistani and British governments.

Besides the five Canadians, there were six top de Havilland aircraft technicians.

The airliner was the first of two British jets ordered by CPA for flights between Australia and Canada.

All the Canadians were from Vancouver, except Pentland who was from Cloverdale, B.C.

Howe Believes Canada's Wheat Market Assured

OTTAWA (CP)—Trade Minister Howe is confident Canada can continue to sell wheat on the markets of the world "at reasonably satisfactory" prices—with or without a new international wheat agreement.

He said in the Commons Monday Canada still hopes for a "favorable outcome" in discussions for a new agreement now being held in Washington. He refrained from direct comment on the negotiations, but said Canada will not be "easily satisfied" as regards prices.

The government felt a new agreement would benefit both exporting and importing countries. But "if mutually satisfactory terms cannot be agreed upon, we can, as we have done in the past, sell our wheat successfully without an agreement."

The minister said he does not mean that 'the world will beat a path to our door clamoring for our wheat or that we shall always get the prices we would like to get."

CAN GET SHARE

"What I do believe is that importing countries will require wheat in substantial and growing quantities over the years to come and that Canada is in a good position to get a share of the market sufficient to dispose of her exportable surpluses at reasonably satisfactory prices."

He spoke as the Commons gave third and final reading to a measure extending until Aug. 1, 1957, the provisions of the Canadian Wheat Board Act under which the board handles the marketing of wheat, oats and barley. Its powers were due to expire next July 31.

All parties endorsed extension of the wheat board's operations. 'A Social Credit spokesman, Robert Fair (SC-Battle River, suggested the board should be made permanent, but Mr. Howe said the government feels Parliament should be in a position to decide from time to time if there should be any change in marketing grain.

At the start of the sitting Revenue Minister McCann announced a broadening of the government's policy on television. He said it may not be long before two or more stations are allowed to operate in the same area.

2-YEAR EXTENSION

Agriculture Minister Gardiner announced a two-year extension—to May, 1955—of the government's butter stabilization program by which it buys butter during high production periods and then releases the stocks in the months of winter shortage. The wholesale floor will not be changed—58 cents a pound in the East and 57 cents at Vancouver.

The House, in a flurry of activity, passed legislation implementing tariff and excise tax changes made in the budget.

The wheat board bill, besides extending the life of the board, provides that unclaimed balances owed to grain producers may, after a six-year dormant period, be used at the government's discretion for the benefit of producers.

FAVORS SUGGESTION

Mr. Howe said he would favor a suggestion by G. M. Ferrie (L-Mackenzie) that the balances be invested in government bonds and the interest used to set up scholarships at Prairie universities for the sons and daughters of farmers.

However, he said, most members seemed to have other ideas and it was decided to put the money in a special fund until the best use for it can be decided.

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said he hoped there would be a new international wheat agreement with satisfactory prices. He hoped importing nations would realize that farm costs had been drastically increased.

Mr. Fair, speaking for the Social Credit party, also welcomed the extension of the board's life. But he disagreed with the government's policy on domestic wheat markets and renewed claims that Prairie producers have been subsidizing Canadian consumers through the linking of domestic wheat prices to export prices.

Douglas Harkness (PC-Calgary East) said the great majority of farmers are in favor of the wheat board.

Suggest Increased Defence Spending

LONDON (CP)—The independent weekly Economist says the question that will be asked outside Canada about the Dominion's new budget is "whether a government whose finances are so prosperous should not be spending more on defence and cutting taxes rather less."

The Economist goes on to say that Canada's contribution of aid to other North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries, at $324,000,000, will be the same this year as last. "If that is not over-heroic," says the economist, "it is also not, for an election year, ungenerous."

Sentenced For Murder

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Thrice convicted of murdering his wife, Rev. George P. Hetenyi was sentenced Monday to serve 40 years to life in prison. The stocky, Hungarian-born clergyman was convicted March 6 on a charge of second-degree murder. Two other murder convictions had been reversed on appeal. He shot his wife Jean, 24, with a .25-calibre pistol on April 22, 1949. Her body, pierced by two bullets, was found in the Genesee river near Rochester.

Ask Tariff Policies Be Examined Now

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Examination of tariff policies is urged in a resolution adopted Monday night by the Windsor Council of Women.

The resolution, to be submitted to the National Council of Women, urges that "the government of Canada spare no effort in ensuring that no tariff be lowered or imports encouraged if the result is to reduce employment in Canada and that no tariff be so high that foreign goods be shut out, thus freeing Canadian goods from the healthy and equitable competition of imports."

Low Salaries Crippling Work On Atomic Energy

OTTAWA (CP)—A high-ranking government scientist said Monday that a reluctance by the civil service commission to boost salaries has swept many a federal scientist and engineer into the hands of private industry, hampering certain phases of atomic research.

Dr. John Convey, chief of the federal mines branch, said that some of the professional men working under him were getting about $6,000 or $6,500 a year. Private industry took them away by doubling their salaries.

"Because of the difficulty of getting salary increases, we're losing top men," Dr. Convey told the Commons atomic energy committee. "We've lost three in the last six months."

LIMITED STAFF

The mines branch, he said, was geared to atomic energy work and its six divisions formed part of the atomic energy team at Chalk River, Ont.

The branch was involved in a host of problems, from the challenge of finding cheap ways of processing low-grade uranium ore to getting the best metals into atomic furnace construction.

But its staff was limited. The branch brought in some 20 university students to help in routine work during the summer, but in many cases it took so long to clear the students for security purposes that none of them could be used on secret atomic projects.

Rural Missionaries Try To Reduce Illiteracy

By JEAN E. STENTON

MEXICO CITY. — Since 1920 Mexico has had an unique system for developing education and trying to cut down the rural illiteracy rate which has been high. Through the zeal and patriotism of "rural missionaries," they have made tremendous strides. Poorly paid and living under difficult conditions, these missionaries are among the unsung heroes and heroines of Mexico.

* * * *

The way was prepared by Jose Vasconcelos, director of the National University from 1920-1924 and secretary of public education from 1920 to 1925. The anti-illiteracy efforts and the Cultural Missions all had their beginnings at this time.

* * * *

The Federal Secretariat of Education was organized in 1920. It was then that the first "Missioners" began their work. Motivated by a missionary spirit, they went into the remote villages with no federal appropriation, no equipment other than what they could supply from their one-peso-a-day (12 cents) salary and such contributions of labor and supplies as they could interest the villagers in giving. Their duties were to make friends with the villagers, learn their needs and report back to the Secretariat. They remained in these areas from three days to three months. Later on it was as long as three years.

* * * *

TRAVELLING SCHOOL

Each mission was a travelling school. In each group there were a chief of the mission, a social worker, a physical director, a teacher of agriculture, a specialist in small industries and a teacher of music and art. By 1924 there were six such missions. They were closed in 1938 but reorganized in 1940 and known from then on as Cultural Missions.

* * * *

The 48 cultural missions operating in 1948-49 worked in 146 zones with a population of 540,000. Specific projects were the building of better houses, training in marriage and family relationships, child care, nutrition and health, counsel in farming and gardening, preservation of trees and purification of water. Today the cultural missions are a definite extra-scholastic division of the Secretariat of Education.

* * * *

Sr. Molinas of Mexico City was the founder of the first boarding school for Indians and was the first professor appointed October 14, 1921, as the rural missionary work commenced. He was sent to a real Aztec region in the north of the state of Puebla, his home state.

* * * *

This teacher had to use a horse in the mountainous region where he was sent and had an Indian guide. Because his father was known and liked by the natives, Sr. Molinas had an easier time and made progress. His first school was in the oldest section of that region—Naunzontla. Not only the village people but those from surrounding village areas crowded into the classes. In his first group there were more than 700 students ranging from 13 to 60. Adults studied from 6-9 p.m. They had to use the plaza until a temporary building was fixed.

* * * *

CHANGE LANGUAGE

"The first thing was to change their language to Spanish," Molinas said. "We had to make an alphabet and then teach the rudiments of arithmetic, geography and history in an elementary form. That was the start of education in the rural fields."

* * * *

As his helper, Molinas had one of the primary school professors. Today that man is principal of one of the high schools in the town of Tlatlauqui (Puebla). In the early days, Sr. Molinas recalls that they established the monetores system where the more advanced pupils were trained as leaders and sent out as rural teachers. After that rural normal schools were set up and they were sent for new training as teachers.

* * * *

The work in 1921 was an experiment and the real results were not appreciated until the First Congress, held in 1922. The progress was so amazing that in that Congress they set up the basis for rural education by a decree in September, 1922. Molinas was a representative to the Congress and was also made president of the Commission.

Warm In A Hurry

The sun warmed Peterborough 13 degrees from 9 a.m. to noon today to record a temperature of 52. This matched the temperature of Monday's highest point. But it was considerably higher than a year ago when the high point was 37 and during the night dropped considerably below freezing to 23. With a forecast of mostly sunny for Wednesday, the thermometer may even exceed today's mark.

400 Attend Rally Of Farm Forum To End Season

Peterborough farmers from the Hastings to the Durham boundary closed their Radio Forum Monday night at Normal School. Some 400 men and women attended the rally of the increased group of Forums, and affirmed the success of the winter season and the interest stimulated by the subjects of the series of broadcasts.

Wellington Sutton was chairman. Keith Morrow of Toronto told the story of the methods by which the subjects were chosen and the broadcasts prepared. He took his rural audience behind the scenes of what UNESCO has acclaimed as one of the finest farm enterprises in the whole world.

Henry A. Sharpe, president of Peterborough Federation of Agriculture, said he was confident that everybody had enjoyed the winter Monday night programs and their group discussions of the subjects.

"I feel sure," Mr. Sharpe said, "that when the snow flies again we will all be looking forward to the Radio Forum broadcasts. And I hope that our groups will be just as numerous as ever, perhaps there will even be more of them, and just as keenly interested."

The Rev. A. E. Larke of Springville moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Morrow.

ENTERTAINMENT

Potter brothers of Knox Church entertained the large assembly with a dramatic episode. The Bailieboro men's quartette, composed of Art Bebee, E. White, H. Buckham and H. Seens, sang several groups of songs in pleasing harmony. They rate with the good "barbershop chorders."

Highlight of the program was the singing of Peterborough Junior Farmers' Choir of 36 voices. This was their second public appearance, and they made new friends among their own county kind.

This cultural undertaking was begun only several months ago, projected by Ken Best, assistant agricultural representative, with Charles Allen as director. One of their offerings was "Dear Land of Home" appropriating the beautiful melody of Sibelius' Finlandia.

Will Dawson briefly explained the progress of Kawartha Medical Co-op, and Mr. Sutton reported that an effort is being made to secure a coach to Toronto April 9 for the annual meeting of the Ontario Forums. The evening closed with refreshments.

Mr. Morrow was introduced by James Bird of Brighton Township, chairman of Zone 4 of the Forum association.

Paul Irwin Heads Rotary Club

Paul Irwin, Lakefield, was elected president of the Rotary Club at a meeting of the directors

Results of the election were announced Monday at the luncheon meeting of the club.

He replaces Bob Maybee. Other officers were: Tom Taylor, vice-president; and members of the executive, Harold Deeth, Jim Archibald, Ken Dalrymple, John McColl and Gordon Monkman.

Three new members were welcomed into the club: Reeve Dick Stewart, of Otonabee township, George Green and Norman Elliott.

City May Extend Water Mains Downer's Corners

Otonabee township will make a survey of the residents of the Downer's Corners area to discover how many would be willing to avail themselves of city water service if it is made available. Meanwhile the Peterborough Utilities Commission will prepare estimates of the cost of the service.

This was the extent of the PUC's commitment Monday afternoon when it was asked by Mayor Hugh Waddell to supply water to the area.

His Worship said that H. B. McGinness had purchased property opposite the Club Aragon for industrial expansion on the understanding that he would receive the support of the city in requesting water service of the PUC and that the city would annex the area.

"It's bad enough not to be obtaining new industries without losing one already in existence," it was pointed out by the mayor who said that the McGinness firm had been looking for a new location for the past year and a half. Word had been received just 10 days before that the industry planned to locate in another centre and they had been persuaded to purchase the Hugh Stewart property comprising 40 acres on the south side of Highway 7 immediately east of the CNR track.

FIRE PROTECTION

But he said the main problem facing the city in that area was fire protection and the city was supporting the application particularly for this reason.

"We've had a couple of bad scares out there and the only fire protection we can give them is by pumping from Backwater Creek and the river," His Worship said.

Also present at the PUC meeting were Reeve Richard Stewart of Otonabee and James McCarthy, township clerk. Mayor Waddell said he had two meetings with the reeve because residents of the area were interested in obtaining water from the city and he thought this would be an added reason for extending the mains. Reeve Stewart said that in one section there were 25 residents within a quarter mile. He had attempted a survey of a number of

Holy Week Observed In City With Traditional Services

Observance of Holy Week is being marked in Peterborough's Roman Catholic churches by special traditional services of ancient origin—some of them almost as old as the sacrament of the Mass. These services will begin with "Tenebrae" in St. Peter's Cathedral on Wednesday at 7.30 p.m. and on Thursday and Friday evenings at the same hour. Origin of the rite is said to have been in mediaeval monasteries.

The word "Tenebrae" signifies darkness and recalls the darkness that covered the earth at the time of the death of Christ. It is also a reminder of the darkness of sin which enveloped the souls of men and was atoned for by Christ's death upon the cross.

The service consists of the recitation of Matins and Lauds, part of the daily office recited by all priests. The bishop and priests assemble in the sanctuary, arrange themselves in two choirs and alternate in the recitation of the appointed psalms and chanting of the required lessons and so on.

LAMENTATIONS

Chief among the lessons are the Lamentations of Jeremiah, whose sombre tone and mournful chant are indicative of the sorrow which is the dominant note of Holy Week. A sermon by the Rev. D. Coll, CSSR, will be preached on Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

On Holy Thursday, Bishop Gerald Berry will celebrate Solemn Pontifical Mass at 8 a.m. in the cathedral. During the mass, the holy oils to be used during the year in the administration of the sacraments will be blessed by the bishop.

As Holy Thursday is the anniversary of the institution of the Eucharist at the Last Supper, each of the Roman Catholic churches in Peterborough will celebrate mass in commemoration of the event on that day.

The mass will conclude with the procession of the Blessed Sacrament through the church to the repository to remain there for adoration until Good Friday. After the procession, the altars will be stripped of their hangings and remain bare until Saturday morning. Vespers will be recited by the clergy after the stripping of the altars and Tenebrae will be conducted in the cathedral in the evening.

The Good Friday services consist of the Devotion of the Three Hours. It begins with the anointing and veneration of the cross, followed by the singing of the Passion according to the Gospel of St. John, the procession of the Blessed Sacrament from the repository to the main altar and the Mass of the Pre-sanctified.

Meditations and discourses on the Passion of Christ will be given during the remainder of the service at the cathedral by the Rev. R. MacKenzie, CJ. of Toronto, followed by the Way of the Cross.

Cathedral services will begin at 6:30 a.m. Holy Saturday with the Easter blessings, including the blessing of the New Fire, Easter Water and the Easter Candle. Then follows the reading of 12 prophecies, blessing of the baptismal font and singing of the litany of the Saints.

Afterwards Solemn High Mass is sung. At the "Gloria" the bells, which will have been silent since Holy Thursday, will be rung again, the statues, which will have been veiled during Passiontide, will be uncovered and, at the conclusion of the mass, the Church will begin the joyful celebration of the great Feast of the Resurrection with the singing of the First Vespers of Easter.

Kerosene In Hydrant Cause Of Ball Of Fire Burned Three Firemen

Coal Oil Put In Hydrant After Freezing By Utilities Department Men Singed Fighting Greenhouse Fire

A kerosene-filled fire hydrant was the cause of an exploding ball of fire which burned four city firemen as they were grouped around the door of a greenhouse playing a 2½-inch hose-line on a fire at 182 Sophia St. shortly before Sunday midnight. The hydrant at the corner of Sophia St. and Armour Rd. had been giving trouble during the year due to freezing and it had been filled with coal oil by the water department of the Peterborough Utilities Commission pending its replacement.

Fire Chief Ralph Leonard said Monday afternoon that the fire department had not been informed that the hydrant had been filled with kerosene, although it was the policy of the commission to inform the fire department when this is done.

THREE TREATED

General Manager W. Howard Powell, who revealed the cause of the flash fire to the PUC Monday afternoon said that there were three hydrants in the city which had been treated in this way.

"Wasn't the Fire Chief informed?" asked Commissioner G. R. Langley.

"I don't know," said Mr. Powell, who suggested such hydrants be painted a different color than normally to warn firemen that they contain kerosene. This suggestion was approved by the commission.

PUC officials announced today that in future a weak solution of ethelyn glycol, a non-inflamable anti-freeze, would be placed in defective hydrants during the winter months in place of painting them a distinctive color.

Powell told the commission that replacement of the defective hydrant had been scheduled for spring when the frost is out of the ground as it involves digging right down to the main to remove the entire hydrant.

"I suppose it was an oversight," Fire Chief Leonard said when asked if the fire department had been informed. "It can happen in the best-regulated families."

An overheated coal stove is believed to have started the fire which caused $600 damage to the greenhouse belonging to Fred Legon. Fireman Peter Nicholson, 52, of 320 McKellar St. was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital for observation and treatment. He was burned on the left front side of his face and his eyebrows were singed.

Acting Assistant Chief Albert Mason was given outpatient treatment at the hospital after receiving burns on the left side of his face. Two other were singed about the face—Firemen Jack Wilson and Frank Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald, who joined the force recently, also had a minor burn on his hand. The "ball of fire" singed all four of them on their exposed skin.

Set Date To Hear Application Of IUE Local

The Ontario Labor Relations Board announced today that April 22 is the date for the hearing of the application by the International Union of Electrical Workers (CIO-CCL) to be the bargaining agents for some 3,500 production workers at the Peterborough works of the CGE plant.

At present Local 524, United Electrical Workers (Indep.) are the certified bargaining agents.

Formal application by the IUE was made last Thursday in Toronto. Their legal counsel, David Lewis, reportedly filed a sufficient number of cards from eligible CGE workers to ensure a vote at the plant. At least 45 per cent of the employees in the bargaining unit is required before the OLRB will order a vote.

The hearing of the IUE application will be 9:30 a.m. on April 22 in Toronto.

CIRCULATE 2 CARDS

In an attempt to upset the IUE application the UE are circulating two cards in the plant. One card says that the signee has not put his signature on an IUE application-for-membership card; the other UE card says that the signee has signed application-for-membership card, but has not paid a membership fee or taken an "obligation" of membership.

Presumably these cards will be handed in for scrutiny when the OLRB hold their hearing in April.

An ALRB hearing is also pending on the application by the IUE to be bargaining agents for production workers at the Canadian Raybestos Co. plant in Peterborough. Local 527, of the rival UE, are the present certified bargaining agents at Raybestos.

The hearing on IUE's Raybestos application will be April 15 in Toronto, a week before the hearing on the CGE application.

Ontario's First Railway Will Mark Centennial

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian National Railways is planning to celebrate the 100th anniversary of Ontario's first railway by creating a "museum" on wheels.

On May 16 a museum train will run 50 miles north from Toronto to Allandale, Ont., over the route followed 100 years ago by the Ontario, Simcoe and Huron Railway, now incorporated into the CNR system.

The train will consist of three locomotives and six cars and will contain hundreds of exhibits relating to railroading in Canada back to 1836. It will be staffed by retired railwaymen wearing uniforms similar to those worn on the O.S. and H.'s first run.

Mogul No. 674, of 1899, the oldest locomotive still operating on the CNR, will haul the train. Also on display will be wood-burner No. 40, first standard-gauge engine ordered by the Grand Trunk Railway and the pride of railroading in 1872, and a saddle tank switcher of 1894.

BRONZE REMINDER

Only a bronze plaque at the entrance of Toronto's Union Station now commemorates the old "oats, straw and hay railway" which was built as a part of a portage railway to "avoid the circuitous and dangerous route" for waterborne traffic via Lake Erie and Lake Huron.

"Varnish boxes" and "snoozers," as railroaders called Ontario's first coaches and sleepers, have been restored to their original appearance and included in the museum train. The old menus in a plush and ornate dining-car unit of 1899 prove that big appetites could once be satisfied at low prices.

Other exhibits, carefully authenticated by research, will range from tickets, rails, Bible racks and pictures, to the power plant of the first diesel car in North America.

The museum train will be in Quebec in July and in Toronto from Aug. 28 to Sept. 12, at the Canadian National Exhibition. Later in September it will move from Toronto over the original lines of the former Great western Railway which now is part of the Canadian National Railways.

Farm Problems In Africa Discouraging

SPRINGVILLE— (ENS)— The Women's Association catered for the monthly dinner meeting of the County Federation of Agriculture in the basement of the United Church.

Mr. Henry Sharpe, president, said that possibly in the future an election may be lost or won on the question, "Do you support the Federation of Agriculture?" He also spoke briefly on Bill 71 before the Ontario legislature.

Ken Best, assistant agriculture representative, told of the expanding 4-H club program and the new Junior Farmers club in Norwood. He urged parents to get young people interested in club work.

Lloyd Hooten, deputy-reeve of Cavan brought greeting from his township. Harold Lewis extolled the work of the federation among government representatives.

Also present was Melville H. Johnston, first president of the federation in Peterborough county and and outstanding worker since its organization.

The Rev. A. E. Larke brought greetings from the church and introduced the guest speaker, the Rev. Arthur Steed, a returned missionary from Angola, West, Africa.

Mr. Steed said he had worked in the coal mines in Wales from the age of 12 to 28. When he was 15 there was a coal strike and he worked three months on a farm. That settled farming for him. His subject was: "What is happening in Cina. India and Africa is going to affect you."

"Within 12 miles of beautiful Johannesburg are people living in places you wouldn't keep your pigs in," he said.

"Don't underestimate the power and influence of Russia. She has placed China in such a way that she can hold up the United Nations' program. The spirit of her people is built up on an ideal.

"If we don't put our Christian ideals into practice, we shall be exactly in the same place as the people of Russia and China" he warned, "and the time will come when your own house will fall about you as a pack of cards".

The African woman supplies the food for the table 365 days in the year. It is she, not her husband, who cultivates the fields and grows the corn, grinds it and cooks it.

"Africans live in a world of ignorance and superstition" said the speaker. Women, trying to get poor land to produce corn for food, sometimes kill their own child, beat the body to dust and sprinkle the dust over the field. They believe that this fetish will kill the power of the evil spirit that is interfering with the crops.

Out of every ten African children six will die before they are one year old. Missionaries have to keep their children in the compound because Africans do not realize that filth and malnutrition are the causes of disease.

In the middle of African villages cows are kept for protection. The manure mounts for 100 years because Africans don't realize the fertilizing value of spreading the manure on their garden. It takes 30 years to bring worn out soil back to production.

There is no rain for five months in the year and when the rain comes the grass grows over night but it also brings the problem of soil erosion. There are only four inches of top soil, and the people are so hungry for protein food that they eat the flesh of ants and frogs.

Mr. Steed told of the buildings he had erected at the missionary compound and of the fruit grove surrounding it. His son who is there now, is both an agriculturalist and missionary. Pictures taken in Africa were shown.

Roger Hanbidge, Raymond Kelk, Gordon Clifford and Neal Whitefield sang three humorous songs and a quartet and Mr. Henry Batten sang a solo.

Mrs. Elwood Johnston, Mrs. Donald Cathcart, Mrs. A. E. Larke, Mrs A. B. Preston, Miss Annie Brown and Mrs. J. Cook were the committee in charge of dinner arrangements.

Smith Pays Biggest Share Of County Tax Bill Despite Annexation

Despite its loss in assessment, Smith township this year will continue to pay the biggest tax bill of any of the 15 municipalities in Peterborough County. The county must raise $310,541.43 from the ratepayers of which Smith's share is $53,224.61, or about 17 per cent.

Otonabee ratepayers will contribute the second biggest share—$49,532.22, or $3,692.39 less than Smith.

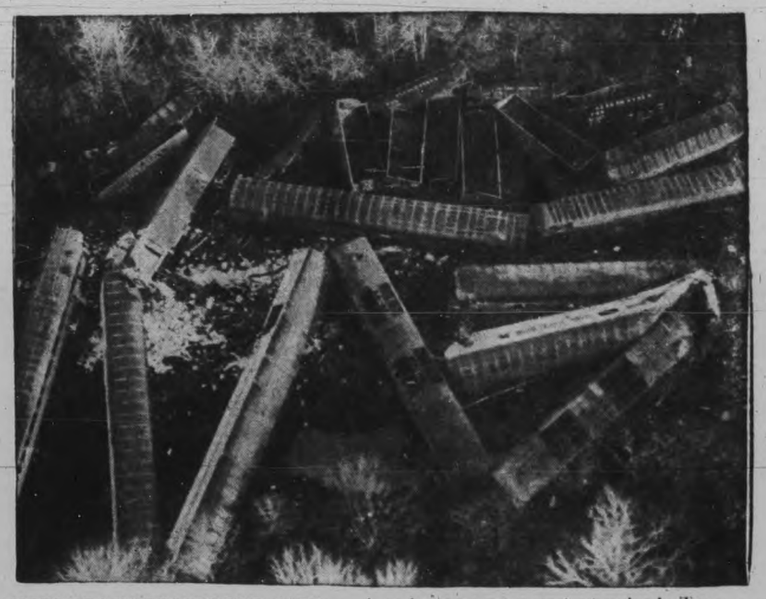
Chandos, with a tax bill of $3,416.36, has the smallest bill.

Two municipalities from outside Peterborough County are also billed because they are included in the Norwood District High School. They are Hastings Village which is being asked to pay $2,486.79, and Percy Towship SS 9, $960.22.

Following is a breakdown of the levy for various county purposes: Current municipal purposes, $102,585.39; county roads, $94,149.01 (Burleigh - Anstruther, Harvey, Galway-Cavendish and Chandos are not in the county roads system); bridge construction and maintenance, $5,681.27; Civic Hospital debentures, $10,051.99; Chemong Causeway debentures, $7,493.25; educational purposes (Douro, Dummer, Ennismore and Galway-Cavendish are not in a high school district), $12,383.35; Norwood District High School debentures, $29,981.70; Lakefield District High School debentures, $25,369.13; and hospital deficits (making up the deficit on patients who are unable to pay), $22,846.

The budget is the highest in the county's history, but only $724.15 more than in 1952 when a $19,000 deficit was wiped out. The 1953 levy is 18.914 mills on an equalized assessment of $14,203,018. This includes the $435,120 loss in equalized assessment caused by the annexation of 1,200 acres of Smith by the City of Peterborough.

(For general county purposes a mill therefore raises $14,203 but for county road purposes only $12,988 because four northern municipalities do not pay for the upkeep of county roads; they do pay on bridges and culverts.)



The road rate this year was struck at 7.5 mills, bridges .400 mills, Civic Hospital debentures .707 mills, Chemong Causeway debentures .527 mills, hospital deficits 1.608 mills, and general 8.172 mills.

Following is a detailed breakdown of each municipality's share of the 1953 budget:

Municipality	General	County Roads	Bridges	Hospital Debentures	Chemong Causeway	Norwood Dist. Education	Norwood Dist. High School	Lakefield H.S. Dist.	Hospital Deficits	Total

Senator McCarthy Sees President Backing Move

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep. Wis.) said today he looks to President Eisenhower to back his dramatic move aimed at reducing free world trade with Communist areas.

McCarthy told reporters he was "amazed" by angry accusations of Harold E. Stassen, mutual security director, that the senator and his senate investigations sub-committee are "undermining" this objective of United States foreign policy.

Stassen, at a televised public hearing Monday, flung the accusation in a denunciation of Saturday's announcement that McCarthy's sub-committee staff had negotiated agreements with Greek owners of 242 ships to carry no more cargoes to Red China, North Korea, or from one Communist port to another.

Vice-President Richard Nixon, to whom Eisenhower has assigned some trouble-shooting assignments, goes to the White House today to attend a meeting of the national security council.

A highly-placed source said in an interview Nixon has been briefed thoroughly on issues in the McCarthy - Stassen dispute, and would report to Eisenhower at that time. The informant said the result may be a presidential decision in McCarthy's favor, but not necessarily an immediate one.

Stassen argued heatedly Monday that McCarthy and the sub-committee had infringed on state department duties in making the agreement. He and his aides questioned its effectiveness. McCarthy with equal heat denied any interference.

McCarthy added that Stassen was overlooking a big point—that the state department can negotiate with governments, but not with individuals.

McCarthy insisted that "three young men" on his sub-committee staff had done what the state department had failed to do for years, first under State Secretary Dean Acheson and now under John Foster Dulles.

GOT AGREEMENT

He said the men who got the Greeks' agreement are Francis D. Flanagan, chief counsel of the sub-committee; Robert F. Kennedy, an investigator and brother of Senator John F. Kennedy (Dem.-Mass.), and William A. Leece, who has been a sub-committee assistant counsel.

Flanagan told an interviewer the agreement is a brief document, exact terms of which will not be made public until the signed copy has been placed in his file. He said it has been signed, but he has not yet received it.

McCarthy told a press conference:—

"I am still hopeful that we will sign up the Greek owners of 150 or more ships flying the British flag to just such agreements."

Praises Canada's Art Buying

LONDON (Reuters)—The London Times today praises the movement of old masters and other works of art to Canada, notably the Canadian government's recent $280,000 purchase of a Rembrandt and two works by Philippino Lippi.

"Many Canadians. . .have lately become alarmed at the intellectual and cultural poverty of their country and the purchase for the National Gallery of Canada at Ottawa has no doubt been made partly in the light of that fact.

"It is not, however, by any means the first acquisition of the kind," says The Times.

Listing old and new purchases, the Times says it may be sad to see many long-treasured possessions leaving British collections.

"Reflection may well decide that this is not only inevitable but proper. Few material things can better transmit to new lands the tested and established values of European civilization than a choice of its finest works of art," it concludes.

Two Women Promise Not To Speak Again

SHEFFIELD, England (AP)—Two Sheffield housewives who quarrelled across the backyard fence solemnly and formally agreed in court Monday never to speak to each other again.

Mrs. Lily Cutts, 40, and Mrs. Emily Dutton, 41, also agreed in separate declarations not to speak to each other's children.

Then each agreed—through a lawyer—to withdraw a summons for alleged assault against the other.

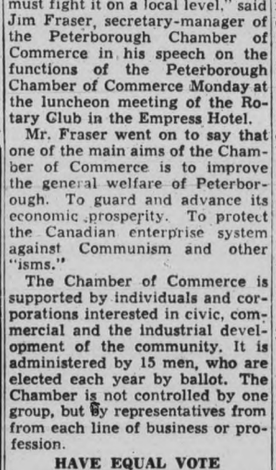
Fight Communism On Local Level

"To combat Communism, we must fight it on a local level," said Jim Fraser, secretary-manager of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce in his speech on the functions of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce Monday at the luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club in the Empress Hotel.

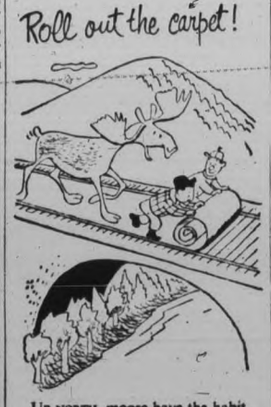
Mr. Fraser went on to say that one of the main aims of the Chamber of Commerce is to improve the general welfare of Peterborough. To guard and advance its economic prosperity. To protect the Canadian enterprise system against Communism and other "isms."

The Chamber of Commerce is supported by individuals and corporations interested in civic, commercial and the industrial development of the community. It is administered by 15 men, who are elected each year by ballot. The Chamber is not controlled by one group, but by representatives from from each line of business or profession.



HAVE EQUAL VOTE

At the annual meeting of the Chambers of Commerce when they meet with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, every Chamber is allotted one vote, no matter how large the community it represents. The Canadian US., and speedier action taken Chamber of Commerce advocated immigration, freer trade with the on the St. Lawrence seaway. The Peterborough Chamber of Commerce is affiliated with the Ontario and Canadian Chambers of Commerce.



It also helps people who are interested in moving to Peterborough in finding homes, jobs and business locations. It stops peddlers from bringing in goods which are harmful to Peterborough businessmen.

It gives advice to summer resort owners on hydro rates, fishing licences and operates a guide book for tourists. Mr. Fraser said that they had not come to an agreement on all stores closing Wednesday afternoon 50 weeks of the year. He considered it a mistake that the Chamber did not take part in the Sportsman show in Toronto, for the Kawartha area cannot be advertised enough.

This April the Chamber will sponsor a salesman course for three days. Mr. Fraser was introduced by K. S. Wightman and thanked by Ken Dalrymple.

PLEADS FIRST CASE — Special permission was given to take this photo of Marguerite Choquette pleading her first case in a Quebec sessions court. Miss Choquette, daughter of Mr. Justice Fernand Choquette, of Quebec Superior Court, is the second Quebec woman lawyer to plead in a court in the province. Miss Choquette, acting on behalf of a suspected thief, appeared before Judge Laetare Roy who gave permission for the picture to be taken.

UP NORTH, moose have the habit of using snowplowed railway lines as their personal promenades. OK until they come to a bridge; then Mr. Moose is likely to get caught between the ties, break his legs and otherwise gum things up. So the railways lay what they call "moose carpets" of aluminum between the rails and over the ties at spots where His Lordship may need safe footing.

It just goes to show how aluminum's combination of lightness, strength and resistance to weather comes in handy in the most unlikely places . . . And to explain why, in 1954, our aluminum capacity will be boosted to over a billion pounds a year. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

CPR Reports Increase Of $2,117,948

MONTREAL (CP)—Increase of $2,117,948 is reported by Canadian Pacific Railway Company in net earnings of $28,930,780 for the 1952 fiscal year, compared with $26,812,832 in 1951.

Gross earnings were $457,808,909, against $428,911,807. Other income declined $6,691,860 to $22,651,773 from $29,343,635, due mainly to a decline in earnings from ocean steamship operations and lower dividends from Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company.

Net income after fixed charges, which declined $345,000 to $12,500,000, totalled $39,100,000, a decline of $4,200,000.

After provision for dividends of four per cent on preferred stock, earnings available for dividends on ordinary stock and for reinvestment totalled $36,000,000. This was equal to $2.61 a share on 13,801,015 ordinary shares, compared with $2.98 on 13,400,000 shares in 1951.

PLAN MODERNIZATION

The report showed a surplus of $15,311,699, earmarked for modernization and other corporate purposes. This was a decrease of $4,567,761 from the 1951 figure of $19,879,460.

Total assets increased by $57,000,000 to $1,918,000,000. Working capital amounted to $116,925,631, compared with $103,859,161, an increase of $13,066,470.

Net profit of Canadian Pacific Airlines for 1952 totalled $364,000, compared with $1,084,000 in 1951.

Frost Planning Two Inquiries

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost said Monday he will introduce a resolution in the legislature to appoint select committees to inquire into the Cemeteries Act and into the present status of the Indians in the province.

The Indian committee was directed to inquire into "the entire matter of civil liberties and rights with respect to the Indian population of Ontario."

The cemeteries committee will inquire into arrangements made for the supervision of "perpetual care" plots and monuments and into present methods of selling cemetery plots.

Charges were heard in the legislature earlier in the sessions that the public was being victimized by high-pressure sales of the plots.

Both committees will sit following prorogation of the legislature this week.

Leaves Wife $1, Nurse Gets $16,753

The will of Frank Henry Hitchings is being contested before County Judge T. H. Barton by the fourth wife, Mrs. Winnifred Dorothea Hitchings, and two sons by the second wife, Kenneth Hitchings, 32, and Cecil, 18. The sons also received $1 each.

Donald R. Walkinshaw, the lawyer who drew up the will, said Mr. Hitchings told him his fourth wife, who operated a rooming house, had beaten and thrown him out, breaking his leg.

A CORONATION SCENE — II

CP

CORONATION SERVICE—The history of the Coronation is told in the film "The Coronation Ceremony," which has been prepared for public showing by Her Majesty's central office of information. The film, made up of drawings by artists James Gardiner and Reginald Jeffryes, gives an artist's impression of the scene inside Westminster Abbey during the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth on June 2, 1953. This drawing shows the Archbishop of Canterbury waiting for the Queen at the high altar. The Coronation ceremony begins with the Act of Recognition followed by the Queen's oath to serve the law and uphold the faith.

Municipal Board May Intervene In Sale

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario municipal board may intervene in the sale of privately-owned bus lines to the Toronto Transportation commission in connection with the amalgamation of the municipalities of Greater Toronto.

The legislature Monday approved an amendment to its amalgamation bill which would give private lines in the Toronto area a right of appeal to the board if prices offered by the TTC are unsatisfactory.

The amendment would eliminate a section of the original amalgamation bill, passed earlier in the session, which would make no provision for paying the private companies for anything more than their physical assets.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dunbar said he thinks that any company which has given good service and built up a reputation should be paid for goodwill as well as for physical assets.

New Probation System Promised By Foote

TORONTO (CP)—Reforms Minister Foote said Monday night he hopes soon to have an improved probation system in Ontario which will help law-breakers to mend their ways without sending them to prison.

He said in an address prepared for broadcast over a CBC-Ontario network in a free-time political series that a study of British experience has shown availability of a full probation service contributes to keeping down the prison population.

"I hope that we may shortly have a probation system in Ontario which will rehabilitate many offenders in civilian life without the necessity of them being committed to institutions," he said.

Broke Act

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Two Hamilton men were fined Monday for violating the Lord's Day Act by shipping bags of waxed turnips from Rockwood to Brooklyn, N.Y., on a Sunday. Stanley Wydryth and P. M. McArthur were fined $48 for operating two tractor trailer transports on the highway on a Sunday. Fines of $23 each were levied on three charges.

Decide To Leave Act Unchanged

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature decided Monday to let one sleeping dog lie.

Premier Frost told Opposition Leader Oliver that a section of the Theatres Act which Mr. Oliver had been questioning has worked well for 25 years. The House decided to continue it.

Mr. Oliver suggested revision of a section which would require municipalities to issue licences to theatres which had already been licensed by the provincial government. Mr. Oliver said the act conflicted with the Municipal Act which gives broad licencing powers to municipal governments.

Mr. Frost agreed that the Theatres Act did in fact take from the municipalities a power granted them under the Municipal Act, but said that provincial theatre standards are high enough for any municipality.

"Anyway," he said, "this apparent conflict has existed for 25 years. Why disturb something which has been working well for that period?"

Named Police Chief

SARNIA, Ont. (CP)—James Torrence, who joined the Sarnia police force 24 years ago and rose through the ranks to become staff sergeant a year ago, was appointed Monday to succeed Chief constable S. C. Pratt, effective June 1.

Industrial Expansion Theme Of Play

TORONTO (CP)—The name of the city and council of Stratford was used Monday in a two-act play presented at the fourth annual Industrial Promotion Conference.

The play, "Stratford Calls for Help," was presented so that members of planning boards and councils from 125 communities could learn how to overcome problems of industrial expansion.

In the first act, the 350 delegates heard the questions industries usually ask in centres where they plan to locate. In the second act, a half-dozen experts answered them.

Stratford's mayor was played by Alderman W. P. Gregory and David M. Rae, chairman of the Stratford industrial commission, acted the part of an alderman.

This is the first time Mr. Scott has visited the village and he was welcomed by Fire Chief Allan H. Clark and his men.

In addressing the men, the Fire Marshal said he was very pleased with the efficiency of the Lakefield brigade and also with their equipment and congratulated their chief.

Keep Example Of Queen Mary Minister Urges

LAKEFIELD — In a sermon delivered at a memorial service for Queen Mary, the Rev. Horace Kaye, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, urged his congregation to "keep her example before us" and "exhibit those virtues and graces with which she was so nobly endowed."

Queen Mary, he said, was a woman who feared the Lord and is deserving of the praise being accorded to her by rulers, statesmen and dignitaries the world over. She was profoundly religious and religion was the very basis of her character and conduct.

Fearing the Lord, the pastor pointed out, is holding God in reverence, hating evil, walking in uprightness, loving and serving God and obeying His commandments. Queen Mary was a good woman, a good wife, a good mother, and a good queen.

Mr. Kaye quoted: "She has gained eternal rest; from earth's grim bondage won release. That kindly soul we loved so well, through all the trying years, now rests at last beyond the thrall, to wear the brightest crown of all."

The speaker said, "We best honor her memory when we cultivate and exhibit those virtues and graces with which she was so nobly endowed."

He concluded: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

TORONTO (CP)—Charles Henry Parry, Sr., 89, oldest member active in curling at the Granite Club, died Sunday. A native of Oil Springs, Ont., he was well known in Copper Cliff where he operated a general store before coming to Toronto in 1925 following his retirement.

MP's Get Refresher Course In History

OTTAWA (CP)—Commons members got a refresher course in Canadian history Monday night.

Members from many parts of the country reviewed historic events in their areas as they debated a government bill to set up the historic sites and monuments board on a statutory basis.

The 13-member board, which recommends to the government the marking of spots where history occurred, has operated under order-in-council for about 30 years. Resources Minister Winters' bill would establish the board permanently.

The measure received third and final reading in the Commons late Monday night, after the regular 10 p.m. adjournment hour and after Works Minister Fournier, government house leader, had appealed to members to ease up on the history lessons. The discussion was still going strong up to then.

MEMORIAL TABLETS

During debate on the measure, Mr. Winters said the board has recommended memorial tablets to former prime minister R. B. Bennett at Hopewell, N.B., his birthplace, and at Calgary, where he practised law. It also was considering commemoration of the birthplace of Sir Robert Borden at Grand Pre, N.S.

Other members put in recommendations for commemoration of favorite local sons—some of whom loomed large on the national scene—or for significant events in their home ridings.

H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) called for the remembrance of these in his southern British Columbia riding:

The discovery of the Columbia river by David Thompson;

The Arrow lake Indians, whose lone survivor is a squaw;

DISCOVERY OF GOLD

The discovery of gold at the junction of the Pend Oreille and Columbia rivers;

The discovery of base metals near Kootenay lake;

The "first organized support for the principles of socialism" in an 1895 election in that area, at Sandon, B.C.

The establishment of the right of labor to strike without being sued for damages, arising from a strike at Rossland, B.C.

Hugh Cavers (L—Lincoln) recalled that Fort Missisagua at Niagara-on-the-Lake played a celebrated part in the War of 1812 and said the board should preserve and mark it.

Furniture Design Changes Show Television Influence

A dramatic new influence has come into the American way of life and has made itself evident through the entire field of home furnishings.

Television, a relatively new form of home entertainment has brought forth some newsworthy changes. Furniture designers are quick to adapt their new creations to the needs of the times.

Light weight furniture takes the spotlight—pieces that are easily moved around and regrouped for comfortable viewing.

To achieve this lighter type of furniture, designers have turned to wrought iron for the framework of occasional chairs and coffee tables.

Sofas are taking on a trimmer line and depend upon textured fabric and color for distinction.

A headliner as well as a newcomer to the furniture field is the room

Milliners Determined Hats Worthy Of Coronation

Of Interest to Women

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—In this festive year, milliners are determined that hats shall be worthy of the occasion.

London's top hat designers therefore are concentrating on Coronation hat styles reflecting the glitter and color of the summer season in Coronation Year.

A designer experienced in giving a royal touch to women's most frivolous accessory is Kate Day, one-time milliner to Norman Hartnell, the Queen's dressmaker. She now has her own hat salon in exclusive Mayfair and supplies customers who once praised the models she designed for wear with Hartnell's chic suits and beautiful, embroidered gowns.

ROYAL PATRONAGE

Among Miss Day's customers is the Queen, and styles similar to the neat little bonnets with tiny brims Her Majesty has favored recently can be seen in the present collection.

Good examples are a navy silk straw with close-fitting crown, no brim at back and a tiny front brim curving down one cheek, and "Derby Day," a golden-corn waffle straw with feather trimming over one eyebrow, and much the same style.

Most of Miss Day's Coronation hats are small, and many expose the hair-line. One such is "chimney sweep," a black straw toque bonnet, its peaked, almost brimless front giving a widow's peak effect to the hairline. A witchy look is achieved by a spike of straw spearing two straw chimney-sweep "brushes." The crown is covered with similar brush heads.

Miss Day has hats for every society event from tennis at Wimbledon to garden parties at Buckingham Palace. A Wimbledon style is a close-fitting poke bonnet shape in deep leaf green, its tiny brim giving the beautiful sweeping curve of a gothic arch, the crown swathed in white chiffon that floats gracefully to the shoulder.

An unusual touch to a yellow organza picture hat for garden parties is provided by sprays of summer flowers hand-painted above and below the brim. "Oxford and Cambridge" is a turn-coat hat supporting both university boating teams. A light-blue linen cloche, it is trimmed with a twist of dark blue chiffon that sweeps down one side to the waist.

"CHIMNEY SWEEP"—In this festive royal year London milliners are determined that hats shall be worthy of the occasion. This creation, entitled "Chimney Sweep," a black straw bonnet trimmed with chimney-sweep brush heads, is one of the fashions for the Coronation season.

"CAFE CREME" — This attractive hat is called "Cafe Creme," and is a coffee-and-straw bonnet that might be worn at one of the big British race meetings where fashions are important as horses. It was designed by Kate Day, of London, one-time milliner to Norman Hartnell, the Queen's dressmaker.

Modestly Priced Carpets For Homemakers

If one had to choose a single word to describe the soft floor-coverings that are being introduced for the new season, it would be "textured"!

Texture is keynoted in carpets and rugs from needle-tufted twist cottons to luxurious combinations of wood with nylon and carpet rayon, and is created through the use of color.

Best news to the budget-conscious homemaker is that most of these newest floor-coverings are modestly priced.

The charming 18th Century floral carpet which won top place in many homes across the country, now gains a modest look with a tightly-twisted yarn background.

Ancient mosiacs and Greek key patterns have all been adapted to modern tastes in new carpet themes.

Choice of fibres is wide and varied, led by the perennially-favored all-wool in every color and pattern. There are interesting blends of wool with specially developed man-made fibres.

Cotton, a favorite everywhere, may be found in every imaginable color. There are woven cotton carpetings with thick, clipped pile, and budget-priced, needle-tufted cottons with strong latex backings to hold them firmly to the floor.

Earth tones—beige, green and gray—are still the major choices. Brown, cocoa, and nutria have edged out grays.

Grays verging on charcoal . . . gold tones, from lemon yellow to rich bronze, appear as accent colors in solid color carpetings. A soft apple-jade and a tree-moss green are new carpet tones. Rose with coppery warmth, and peppermint-candy pink appear among cotton fibres.

Blue, recently a rarity, has reappeared in soft muted tones in nearly every line. Aqua and turquoise show up in cotton, solid color wool, or blended twists.

Accent colors include avocado, moss, olive and lime greens, jonquil yellow, wedgewood blue, cherry and lipstick red, amethyst and coral.

Interesting and new are black and grey accented with white, cocoa, gold or cinnamon.

FASHION NOTE FROM BRITAIN

Fashions for town-wear tweeds prompted Edmund Garigue, of London, England, to launch his lace tweeds which have been having a big success in London, Paris and New York. Transparent and as diaphanous as net, his new range is fascinating. Woven in Scotland by a process of which Mr. Garigue jealously guards the secret, the tweeds combine the fashionable bulky look with a lightness which is a delightful foil. Although they are loosely woven, these lace tweeds, says Mr. Garigue, keep their shape and will

Easter Ham Baking Hint

The traditional Easter Ham, under a sparkling glaze, is the holiday feast in many homes. Here's an easy glazing recipe, and a cooking hint to save work and assure a ham that will melt in your mouth.

To prepare a glaze as good-looking as it is toothsome, make a paste of the following ingredients:—

1 cup brown sugar
¼ cup flour
1½ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup maple or corn syrup
3 tablespoons water.

Before putting your hame to bake, wrap it in aluminum foil, to retain moisture and reduce shrinkage. You don't have to oven-peek. Just bake to your favorite recipe, or follow the directions on the ham wrapper

After baking, remove the rind or casing. Score surface of the hot ham and stick with cloves. Pour paste over ham and return to oven. With the foil folded back, bake ham an additional 20 minutes, or until glaze is cooked.

You will have a ham fit for a queen's table, and after baking in foil there is no pan to scour.

Shades Tending Towards Gold In Demand

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—The color and gaiety of Coronation Year are reflected even in the choice of wedding finery for Easter brides.

Retailers say that many women going to the altar this spring are asking for something special in bridal wear to mark the Queen's crowning. Many last-minute orders call for dresses in pale yellow deep ivory and a blue-tinged frosty white that suggests silver. These shades tend towards the gold, silver and cream of the dresses worn under Coronation robes.

Those desiring even more color show preference for the delicate, pearly tones of a sea shell—amethyst, flush pink, and a blue-grey shade with the sheen of mother-of-pearl. The traditional wish of a bride to look like a queen is also seen in the popularity of pearl and diamante tiaras instead of orange blossom, for holding the veil in place.

A truly "royal" outfit, with rhinestone coronet topping the veil, is a pure white satin with ermine-trimmed "batteau" neckline, a loose over-skirt cut and trimmed like peeress' robes worn over a straight skirt. Suggested touch of color is a bouquet of blood-red roses.

GRACEFUL GOWNS

Most bridal styles this year are cut on the lines of gala evening gowns for royal balls. Big skirts sweep out in graceful trains, and bodices are much as always with different styles of necklines and traditional sleeves. Many brides still favor fitted boleros that can be removed to provide a decollete evening gown.

A new winner, for those who can afford it and want to ensure they won't shiver in Britain's chill Easter winds, is nylon lace with a wool finish. This British-made material, sold here for the first time this year, comes to the British market after export sale in Canada, the United States and other countries.

It seems that brides change along with bridal fashions. Eileen Ascroft, writing in the Evening Standard, notes that brides chosen for Britain's stately homes have changed from gaiety girls to mannequins. In the gay '90s, scintillating Gertie Millar became Countess of Dudley, and Rosie Boote quit the footlights to marry the Marquess of Headfort. Sylvia Grey entertained a King, Edward VII, and received jewelled gifts from his son, the Duke of Clarence.

This year, the Earl of Dalkeith, once tipped as suitor to Princess Margaret, married fashion model Jane McNeill. The present Duchess of Rutland was previously Anne Cumming Bell, a blonde mannequin, while Viscountess Boyle carries on the model career she started as Catherine Carlton.

Indian Wife Queen Of Household

TORONTO (CP)—Women in India have the last word in the home, Dr. Lakshmi Rao told members of the Toronto Wren Association.

"Here in the west many persons have the idea that Indian women are kept in the background as obedient little housekeepers. But actually the Indian woman is queen of her household and has the final say in everything concerning it," she said.

As to professional life, Dr. Rao, who is the first woman of her race to receive a PhD in Canada, said that it has been the men who have encouraged Indian women to enter the professions.

She cited the case of her sister, a medical doctor, who when she attempted to pay fees at medical school was told it was not necessary as women were being encouraged to become doctors.

"However," added Dr. Rao, "they had to stop this as they were swamped with prospective doctors."

She said Indian women had been prominent in many professions long before western women, but were not particularly encouraged to go into business and financial careers.

"The men like to feel they have control of the money," said Dr. Rao.

Dr. Rao has spent the last three years in Canada and now is doing postgraduate work in bacteriology. She is aiso a don at Whitney Hall, University of Toronto.

Ask For $1,000 From Local YW For World Service

The annual World Service Fund campaign at the YWCA has perhaps never had a better start-off than in '53. Although the sum asked by National Y is somewhat larger—$1,000—the amount to be raised has already been reduced $175 by proceeds from the Spring Hat Tea, an all-association effort.

Also, there are already on hand donations from the Little Women's Club of $60 (from proceeds of their St. Patrick's Tea) and from the Children's Theatre, $15 (from proceeds of a recent theatre night.)

This $75 is credited to the Y Teen and Junior Department which has an allocation of $100. The Senior Club Department is asked to raise $200; the health education department $200; the residence $50; and the board, committee and special names $275.

Some of the events planned for fund-raising purposes as well as social are the swim department's Bunny Tea of April 8; the gym department's display on May 1; '38 Club's fashion show and evening tea in May, celebrating the 15th anniversary; KCY Co-Ed's "Country Fair" in April; and Friday Night Supper Club is having two dances—the Blue Jean Jump of last week and the Saddle Shoe Shuffle of Easter week.

Official opening of the fund campaign was on Monday evening when a meeting was held with at least two representatives from each department attending. Campaign chairman is Mrs. W. G. Ovens, who presided, and the guest speaker was Mrs. I. G. Pollock.

Re-affirmation of the pledge to world service was led by Mrs. J. Nicholls. A collection of treasures brought from other countries by citizens emphasized the scope of the work. The meeting closed with a world service prayer.

A MOTIF OF GOLD SEQUINS highlights the tiny waist and rounded hips of this Canadian-made crimson net dress. Two layers of net over a slim taffeta underskirt give restrained fullness to the skirt, while a deep flounce gives a flare to the feminine net stole.

STARCHED LACE CHOKER

Conversation piece jewellery is starched lace and embroidery made into chocker necklaces to match a summer dress. Slips of the embroidery or lace are cut out and tied with a ribbon around the neck or wrist. Cords of summer print makes multistrand bib necklaces, to match a dress too. Californians are also cutting lace to paste to the bare shoulder topping a strapless lace gown.

In connection with the exhibition of leathercraft work at the Public Library this Wednesday evening, April 1, the Peterborough Recreation Commission will hold a ceremony to commend the achievements of two citizens, Mr. Jack Haymer, artist, and Mr. Stan Hayman, sculptor in metal. Mr. Haymer has had pictures among the 99 selected by the RCA each of the past 10 years and two were selected on two occasions. Mr. Hayman made his first entry this year and his box of medals were selected for exhibit. The Handcraft Guild of Peterborough is sponsoring this evening and will serve tea. Mayor Hugh Waddell is to open the exhibit.

Cantata First Presentation

The choir of St. James' United Church will present the sacred cantata "The Last Supper," by Eric Thiman, on Wednesday evening, April 1, at 8 o'clock in the church. Eric Thiman, an English composer, and organist of a Congregational church, has devoted most of his composition to the field of church music. For this cantata some of the thematic material has been derived from plainsong sources, and use has been made of three German chorale melodies. The harmonization of these is by Thiman, with exception of the last, the beautiful "Schmucke Dich," the harmonization of which is by Bach, and is taken from the closing number of the cantata of the same name. This will be the first presentation of this cantata in Peterborough. The choir will be under the leadership of the organist, Mrs. Charles Renaud, and soloists will be Mrs. H. G. Doig, Mrs. E. Kitney, Mr. J. Worrall, Mr. Fred Huffman, Mr. W. Collison, Mr. W. Piercy. As this is not a long cantata, it will be fittingly followed by a communion service.

QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

Dr. J. P. Wells, new medical officer of health in Peterborough, was guest speaker at the health night meeting of Queen Mary Home and School Association Monday. After a film on tuberculosis had been shown, he spoke on the subject, saying that the death rate continues to drop but what is needed is more education to persuade the public that health examinations and chest X-rays are needed.

He was introduced by Dr. Frances Stewart and thanked by Miss M. Munro.

President R. C. Honey conducted a brief business meeting. Mrs. Sweet's grade three class won the attendance prize.

Mrs. T. E. Currier, Miss Munro and Mrs. A. Legon received the parents at the door. Mrs. O. Phillips and Mrs. H. Wells, social conveners, were in charge of refreshments. They were assisted by grade four class mothers, Mrs. B. Northey, Mrs. Legon, Mrs. L. W. Thompson, Mrs. L. J. Calvert, Mrs. G. Harrison and Mrs. H. Mesley.

HAT OF ROSE PETALS

LONDON, Eng —Auret's spring collection has a "rose" hat. The crown is made of blush rose petals, scattered judiciously with diamante and covered with mauve and blue shaded silk veiling which flows over the shoulders in the approved manner. Van Gogh yellow and rich dark green are two shades which prevail gloriously in that hat collection.

Mrs. I. G. Pollock Contrasts Y Work In Three Countries

The Y's place in the community life of South Africa is contrary to the principles on which it is founded—open to all races, colors, creeds—Mrs. I. G. Pollock told local YWCA members Monday evening. She was speaking at the meeting which launched the campaign for funds which wil be used in aid of Y's being established or re-established throughout the world.

Mrs. Pollock is a native Scot and lived in her homeland until 1945, then went to South Africa with her minister husband, remaining for seven years, and came to Canada and Peterborough eight months ago. She contrasted the YW and YM position in the three places, saying that in Scotland the work has a very definite place, but "I have never met a place where the Y dominates the life of the community as it does in Peterborough."

Fine work is done by the Y in European circles of South Africa, she said, but the blacks and whites do not mix there and consequently there is no Y available to the blacks in the section with which Mrs. Pollock was acquainted, including Capetown and Johannesburg.

"One way in which we can all help is by learning and knowing about other countries," said Mrs. Pollock. "Fear comes from ignorance. There should be no part of the world that we can say we know nothing about." She continued: "We are all becoming world citizens, whether we like it or not. What happens in a little dot on the map can affect us. In every corner of the world today there is a heap of inflammable material."

Likewise, the desire for help and service is in every corenr of the world, and the speaker pointed to the response to the plight of flood victims in Europe recently as an example.

She said that South Africa is a wonderful country for the white man and a paradise for the white women—because she must have a maid and servants to do all the labour. However, industrialization and the advance of civilization is giving the blacks a chance to break away from service, and the maid problem is now the main topic of conversation among European women at tea.

Mrs. Pollock affirmed that natives do own land, but, when a son marries he brings his wife to the farm, and soon four or five families may be living on a small plot. Farming there is badly planned, through ignorance, and the soil becomes worn out and unproductive, so the natives are forced to go to the cities. "There the crime problem becomes perfectly dreadful," she said. "It is worst in Johannesburg where no one goes to sleep without a revolver handy." She pointed out that the whites completely forget that these men who rob for a livelihood have been driven from their land.

"Today people are turning to North America—not only for the dollars—but for freedom and new opportunity of living an ordinary life," said Mrs. Pollock. "We must face the task of learning how the rest of the world is living; of realizing that people of other countries are just the same, with the same desires, and dreams as we have."

"Do not look on them as people who can carry their own burdens," she concluded.

Y president Mrs. H. T. Rehill introduced Mrs. Pollock and she was thanked by Miss Hazel Wilson.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Reputation-Makers Using Chicken

You all have friends that excel at making some particular dish. For instance: Jennie makes the highest-angel foods, Barb the finest whole wheat bread and Pearl the smoothest Hollandaise, and so on.

Every cook aims to outshine her friends in some accomplishment and it is a human and commendable ambition.

The women at the church always ask Mrs. Weston to make the meat loaves. When your efforts are on display and subject to the cool appraisal of your sister-Ladies-Aiders and their husbands you had better watch out for your laurels.

I'm going to aid and abet you in your unspoken competition by giving you a recipe for a Chicken Loaf that is custardy and delicate in consistency and with a flavor that no one can challenge.

CHICKEN LOAF (HOT)

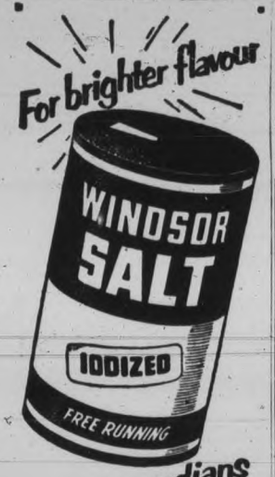
One-quarter pound sliced mushrooms, 1½ cups soft fresh bread-crumbs, 1 cup each milk and well-seasoned chicken broth, 2 eggs, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, ¼ cup very finely cut canned pimiento, 3 cups sliced cooked chicken cut small. In about 1 tablespoon butter saute the sliced mushrooms over very low heat until they are limp and soaked with the butter but not at all browned. In a bowl mix together all remaining ingredients and add the hot sauteed mushrooms. Butter a loaf pan about 9 x 5 x 3 inches and press the chicken mixture into it. Stand this in another large pan containing about 1 inch hot water. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. To turn out, let stand for 5 minutes, then loosen sides with knife and turn out on hot platter. Serve hot in slices. Mushroom Sauce is an ideal accompaniment.

Mushroom Sauce: For 2 cups sauce melt 4 tablespoons butter and saute them in 1 teaspoon grated onion or 1 teaspoon finely chopped green onion tops and 1 cup sliced mushrooms, for about five minutes, but do not brown. Then add 4 tablespoons flour, stir it in, add ¼ teaspoon salt and shake of pepper, then stir in 1¾ cups hot milk, until thick.

Years ago I knew a girl who could make only four things: coffee, poached eggs, chicken Hollandaise, and broiled steak.

And yet, she was a success as the wife of an executive of a mighty company who, fortunately for her, was moved from city to city from time to time.

When she and her husband had guests she would make quarts and quarts of delicious coffee, then very officiously broil the steak with the air of a duchess, while her adoring husband tossed the salad. For dessert they served a variety of cheeses and crackers. A bit Bohemian but she carried it off—all in a low black chiffon gown too.



Her luncheon specialty was

CHICKEN HOLLANDAISE

(Try it and you will understand why the other office wives were always happy to come back for a repeat.)

One and one-half tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon finely chopped onion, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 cup chicken stock, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, ⅓ cup finely chopped celery, ¼ teaspoon salt, shake of paprika, 1 cup cold cooked chicken, cut in small cubes (well-packed), yolk of 1 egg. Cook gently the butter and onion 5 minutes, then stir in cornstarch and then the stock gradually. Add lemon juice, celery, salt, paprika, and chicken; when heated through, pour this over the beaten egg yolk, then cook over low heat 1 minute longer, stirring.

Our hostess served this on buttered graham toast cut in triangles but it would be good in timbale cases or French pastry cases or if you want only to serve a small amount, for instance for an evening snack, it could go on buttered crackers.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

DOROTHY DIX:

His Persistent Old Flame Causes Wife Much Worry

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband, to whom I have been married for fifteen years, recently received a loving epistle from an old sweetheart. He showed it to me and said he had no intention of replying to it.

A few weeks ago another letter from her found its way to our mailbox (it had been forwarded and reforwarded). She is still carrying a torch for my husband and begs him to write her a few lines. I have not given him this letter; in fact, I am so worried over the whole mess that I can't sleep. I love my husband dearly and, although he is devoted to me, I don't know what this letter might do to him.

N. C.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You also state that the woman claims she has written your husband many letters in the past ten years, without hearing from him. Since it is almost certain that he has received some of this mail, the fact that he has so completely ignored it should be enough to put your mind at ease.

END THE MATTER

I think you are worrying needlessly over the matter. If your husband were serious about the woman, he wouldn't have shown you the first letter. You confess that you are a natural worrier (though there's nothing natural about most types of worry), so if you don't get the affair cleared off the books, you'll fret over it to the point where you, not the hidden letter, will spoil your marriage.

Show the letter to your husband, tell him you are very upset over it, and ask if he won't write the woman and tell her he is happily married, has no further interest in her, and will return any future letters unopened.

Also, learn to have more faith in your man.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 17, and in love with a man of 24. We've gone together for a year, during which he has gone with one other girl, while I've gone out with several boys. Now I haven't seen him in a month, though we parted on good terms after our last date. I haven't been out with anyone else since. I truly love him and would like to get him back; I've written, but it hasn't helped.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Perhaps the boy has found a greater interest in the one other girl he dated. If you have written him, and he hasn't answered, there isn't much more you can do. There's quite a bit of difference in your ages, and he may feel an older girl would be more congenial. You'll be much better of going out with some of the other beaux, than in mooning over the one that is apparently unavailable to you.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: How much help should I expect from my 13-year-old daughter? I have three other small children, and could use a little help. Should she be expected to wash dishes, dust, etc? My husband and I try to tell her that she should help, but she refuses to co-operate.

E. V.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: A girl of 13 is capable of doing—and should be expected to do—many tasks around the house. In fact, such simple jobs as dishes and dusting can be handled by children even younger. She should be able to help with cooking, shopping, ironing, look after her own room, closet and dresser and help out with the younger children. Instead of mildly requesting her help, let it be understood that it is expected of her and failure to co-operate will result in loss of privileges.

Be sure your younger children learn their share of responsibility while they are still small.

Engineering Inst. Gives A. L. Killaly H. Membership

A. L. Killaly, 502 Weller Street, former superintendent of the Trent Canal system, Department of Transport, was awarded an honorary membership to the Engineering Institute of Canada. Incoming-president Ross L. Dobbin made the award to Mr. Killaly on Monday.

It is the highest honor the Institute can give and was awarded for his long-time service with the department and as a citizen of Peterborough. District engineers say they are very pleased that one of their senior members should be so honored.

The award is not lightly won, according to Mr. Dobbin. It is one conferred on governor-generals, and at present the Hon. C. D. Howe was given the recognition. The 50-member council must make a unanimous vote on the matter.

City May Extend

residents but it was difficult to get definite answers because he wasn't able to quote costs.

"No matter how you look at it, you'll never get enough money at that end to pay for it," General Manager W. Howard Powell objected. "There are only $100,000 worth of buildings and $35,000 worth of land over there." He said it would cost between $52,000 and $54,000 to take the water as far as Downer's Corners.

He said that a trunk main could be built as far as Downer's Corners and then domestic feeders could be tapped into it. Cost of the trunk main could be legally spread over the whole city water distribution system.

Commissioner Dr. G. R. Langley pointed out that there were no building sites between the end of the existing main and Downer's Corners.

MORE USERS

"There would be lots of users past there," Reeve Stewart said. "A few domestic consumers wouldn't begin to pay the cost," Mr. Powell said. "You have to have a whole built-up area."

Mr. McCarthy admitted that several residents of the area had installed their own pressure systems recently and it might be difficult to persuade them to scrap these if the cost of city water service was too high.

"Mr. McGinness has bought 40 acres of land," Reeve Stewart pointed out, "and it's ideal for an industrial site, right next to the railway track."

"When the people of the city request service we have to give it," Commissioner Richard Raine said, "but they also expect us to use discretion in deciding on investments for future development."

"No-one can say for sure, but I feel lack of water has retarded development in that area," Mayor Waddell ventured. "My personal opinion is that annexation by the city will only include the 40 acres recently purchased. But, in view of the publicity given to recent annexation, I think we would want to get the opinion of the township residents before we took advantage of the township and the city to annex more."

PUC chairman Fred Hills explained that there were two possible routes that an extension of the main could take—across the bridge at Highway 7 or along Armour Rd. The latter would require dredging of the canal and would cost a little more.

Pupils Stand Silent, Honor Queen Mary

Although far distant from the final ceremony of the entombment of Queen Mary at Windsor Castle, the pupils of Queen Mary School participated this morning in the universal sentiment of respect and of mourning of the death of one of the great Queen consorts in British history.

The boys and girls of all the grades stood in silence of tribute during the minute that began at 11 o'clock. As a preface to those moments quietly ticking away, the principal, O. M. Steer, spoke from his office over the inter-class room system of communication explaining the significance of the brief period of memoriam.

The Board of Education in 1913, forty years ago, had chosen the name of Queen Mary for the new school that was then completed on the western fringe of Peterborough, Mr. Steer said. Since then several generations of boys and girls had passed through the school, beginning their education. During those long years, Queen Mary had been a great and exemplary inflence among the people of Britain and of the British Commonwealth around the world.

RENEW PLEDGE

Mr. Steer proposed to the pupils that in their thoughts of the burial today of Her Majesty, they should renew their pledge of "head, heart and hands in years to be" for the character and work and traditions which Queen Mary had left as a bequest to the young people of this generation. That promise signified intelligence, patriotism and labor in the cause of Canada and the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The gong in Mr. Steer's office sounded at 11 o'clock and was conveyed throughout the building. The principal left to the teachers anything further which they wished to say to their respective classes about the life and death of Queen Mary.

The first of Peterborough Public Schools titularly honoring British royalty was Queen Alexandra in the north end. King Edward was next, then in 1913 King George and Queen Mary Schools on oposite fronts of the city, and finally Prince of Wales.

William Hogle Heads Liberals

The annual meeting of the Northumberland County Liberal Association was held Friday afternoon in the Colborne town hall. William A. Hogle, of Campbellford, was elected president for the third consecutive year by a unanimous vote. First vice-president is Robert Love, Cobourg, and second vice-president Mrs. Jean Denike, of Cramahe township. Mrs. Denike is also president of the Northumberland County Liberal Women's Association. J. C. M. German, QC, was re-elected as secretary-treasurer.

Great interest was shown in the formation of the Young Liberal Association. Irvin Blair was elected president and Bert Franklin, of Haldimand township, first vice-president. It was decided that the Young Liberal Organization would choose their own officers and act quite independently to the parent body.

Reports were given by the presidents and chairmen of the various organizations. Wes. Sweet, president of Campbellford Liberals, said he believed his organization was better than any previous one in his town. Reg. Seymour, president of Seymour township Liberals, was also very optimistic. Mayor Jack Brunett, of Cobourg, assumed the chair during the election period.

Dr. W. P. Robertson, M.P. for Northumberland, gave a short address and introduced Harry Cavers, M.P. for Lincoln county. Mr. Cavers spoke at some length on the policies of the present Liberal government, giving much credit for such outstanding Canadians as the Hon. Lester B. Pearson, Minister for External Affairs, the Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Trade and Commerce. Mr. Cavers criticized the Leader of the Opposition, the Hon. George Drew, for failing to bring forth a platform for his party; instead he has offered nothing but criticism of the present Liberal administration.

Mink Coats Stolen

MONTREAL (CP)—Police reported today seven mink coats valued at $25,000, were stolen from a west-end furrier last week-end by thieves who also made off with $7,974 in cash, post-dated cheques and bonds. New Metals Agreement Means Expanded Mine

TORONTO (CP)—A Toronto paper in a financial page story today says that the metals agreement announced Monday between the United States defence materials Procurement Agency and Falconbridge Nickel Mines, Ltd., will mean a greatly expanded mine, mill and smelter program in Ontario's Sudbury district.

The paper says it is informed by H. J. Fraser, vice-president of Falconbridge, that "the program will require doubling of all facilities and the over-all spending of at least $42,000,000, about equally divided on plants and mines."

The story adds:

"Up to now, Falconbridge had been expanding to meet a 35,000,000 pound annual nickel production objective by 1956. . .The new production objective of 60,000,000 pounds minimum will require provision for additional smelting—possibly introduction of a reverbatory furnace—and raising of Norwegian (refining) capacity to about 40,000,000 pounds annually."

Goodfellow Praises Work Of Foundation

TORONTO (CP) — Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, Ontario minister of welfare, said Monday night he is most impressed with the work of the Atkinson Charitable Foundation of Toronto.

"In the wise distribution of funds, the Atkinson Charitable Foundation has engaged in pioneering in the fields of welfare, health and education," the minister said as he piloted his estimates through the Ontario legislature. "The results of their efforts will pave the way for governments of the future."

The foundation was established by the late Joseph E. Atkinson, founder of the Toronto Star. The foundation owns the Toronto Star and the Toronto Star Weekly, bequeathed to it by Mr. Atkinson.

OF GREAT BENEFIT

With its account of Mr. Goodfellow's remarks, The Star today published an interview with Premier Frost saying that the 61 new grants authorized by the foundation in 1952 and continued aid to other projects will be "of very great benefit."

"These grants, I am sure, are directed to the assistance and furtherance of projects which would be limited in their work," the premier said. "The development of these projects makes it possible for other organizations interested in them to develop their work and thus make a great contribution to their country. All of this is very worth while."

Labor Official Endeavors Break Deadlock

Negotiations are going on all day today in the Department of Labor offices at Queen's Park in an endeavor to break the deadlock between the Canadian General Electric Co. and the United Electrical Workers (Indep.) Louis Fine, Ontario's chief conciliation officer, is sitting in on the talks.

They will adjourn all day Wednesday and probably resume Thursday morning.

Attending the talks on behalf of Local 524, UE, the Peterborough local in the CGE-UE chain, are President George Wallace and Lawrence Thornington, chief of the grievance panel. The Toronto plant in the CGE-UE chain make up the rest of the UE Joint Negotiating Committee.

A two-year master contract between the CGE and the UE ended March 27.

Among the union proposals are 20 cents an hour increase and a reduction of the work week to 40 hours; also a company-paid-for pension plan and a health and welfare plan.

Build Quarters For Zoo Animals

City waterworks employees hope to begin in May construction of a building for winter accommodation of animals at the waterworks park zoo.

The building, of cement block construction with gable ends of cedar bevelled siding, will measure approximately 25 by 35 feet and will be located north of the existing buildings near the deer run.

At present the swan, monkeys, baboons, geese and ducks are kept in the old pump house during the winter. Once the new building is completed, the space vacated by the animals will be put to use as a workshop and much-needed storage space.

Walls of the new building will be lined with cages and it is hoped to erect outdoor cages adjacent to the building giving the animals access to both outside and inside quarters.

Considerable saving in the cost of construction will be effected through use of steel roof trusses and window sashes from the old gas plant on Simcoe St. and spare lumber from the new filtration plant.

Smelt Running In Lakeshore Creeks

COBOURG (ENS).—The smelt have started to run. Monday night fishermen netted catches at Grafton and streams along the line westward to Cobourg.

The take was not very large, but it indicated that the tasty fish are on their annual surge upstream to spawn. The Factory Creek did not yield very many smelt Monday night, mainly because the stream is still running high and is too deep at the mouth and also too swift to use nets.

MAIN ST. TOPICS

SALE OF EASTER SEALS

Sale of Easter Seals to date in the campaign being conducted by the Peterborough Rotary Club to raise $10,000 for crippled children totals $4,924.58. The total at the same date last year amounted to $4,769.55. To date this is an increase of $155.03.

TELEPHONE THE PUC

The PUC has issued a plea to residents to co-operate in replacement of broken bulbs in street lamps. Immediate service will be given if you telephone 4615 day or night seven days a week whenever you see a broken street lamp bulb.

TWO FIRE CALLS

Firemen used two hand pumps to put out a fire Monday noon at the home of Miss Mary Murphy, 141 Hunter Street East. Damage was limited to the chimney. Earlier they were called to the home of Miss Nina Thompson, 184 London Street, where some stove pipes came apart.

Says Scholars Must Have Some Freedom

PRINCETON, N. J. (AP)—The Association of American Universities says scholars must study and examine all ideas—even those considered "dangerous." However, it stresses that Communists, because of their beliefs, are unfit for university positions.

The association comprises 37 U. S. and Canadian universities. Canadian members, who approved the report, are Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto, and F. Cyril James, principal of McGill University, Montreal.

A 10-page policy statement released by the AAU Monday said that appointment to a university position involves diligence and loyalty in citizenship, as well as integrity and independence in scholarship.

"This renders impossible adherence to such a regime as that of Russia and its satellites," the statement said.

A definition of a concept of academic freedom was contained in the first portion of the statement.

"The scholar's mission requires the study and examination of unpopular ideas, of ideas considered abhorrent and even dangerous," it said, adding:

"For, just as in the case of deadly disease or the military potential of any enemy, it is only by intense study and research that the nature and extent of the danger can be understood and defences against it perfected."

The statement said that unless a faculty member violates a law, his "discipline or discharge is a university responsibility and should not be assumed by political authority."

No Settlement Seen At Swift Plant

STRATFORD (CP) —A three-hour meeting Monday between company officials and representatives of Local 307, United Pack- (CIO-CCL), ended without a settlement in the strike at the Swift Canadian Company's plant here.

The walkout which began March 6 involves 61 employees who are striking for higher wages.

W. J. Henderson, Swift's public relations officer, today said another meeting was scheduled for Thursday.

The company is reported to have offered the local a 7½-cent wage increase with no retroactive pay. However, the union is said to have turned it down. The original company offer was six cents.

Picketing continued at both the company's main packing plant and the hatchery.

Obituary

RALPH CHESTER EVANS

Ralph Chester Evans, 34, of 718 Gillespie St., died today at his residence, following a short illness.

Mr. Evans was born and raised in St. Thomas, son of Charles H. Evans and the late Mrs. Evans. He attended the St. Thomas high school and graduated from the Westerbelt Business College in London. He enlisted in the RCAF in 1939 and before his discharge in 1946 reached the rank of WO2. He was a member of the United Church and belonged to the Sealkirk lodge, AF and AM, of Manitoba, and has been employed with International Fibre Board Co. of Toronto since his discharge.

He is survived by his wife, the former Bertha Hjalmarson, his father, Charles Evans and his two sons, Ralph and Brent Evans.

He is resting at the Comstock funeral home and the funeral service will be conducted in St. Thomas.

Burwell Moore Last Manager Loan Company

Last manager in Peterborough of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company, Burwell V. Moore, 634 Weller St., died this morning at his residence after an illness of nearly three years. His age was 55.

Mr. Moore was born in Peterborough, son of the late Thomas J. Moore and his wife, Marguerite Holmes. He received his education at the Collegiate Institute and Peterborough Business College. It was that training for business which recommended him to the late W. G. Morrow who was for years manager of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company with offices in the building now occupied by Victoria and Grey Trust and Savings Company.

Mr. Moore began as the clerk and junior of the staff and was eventually promoted to the responsibility of teller, subsequently secretary and finally manager, succeeding Mr. G. H. Thompson. Dispersal of the company's property interests was accelerated during the managership of Mr. Moore and in the end the duty fell to him of closing the company's business here and of transferring its books and records to the Toronto office.

During his lifetime Mr. Moore was associated with Mr. Thompson and the late Mr. Morrow and to his many friends in the city it was a gratifying fact that he terminated his career as manager of the company he joined as clerk after completing his education.

Mr. Moore was a member of Trinity United Church and its Official Board, and in recent years he was trustee and treasurer of its building committee. In that connection his competent service was highly valued by the members of that committee. His appointment as its treasurer was not only a recognition of his ability and experience in financial affairs, but was probably also an indirect appreciation of the endowment of the late Mr. Morrow of Trinity Church.

Mr. Moore was a member of Corinthian Lodge, AF & AM. He leaves his wife, the former Margaret Franks; his daughter, Barbara Anne Moore, RN, at Western Hospital, Toronto; his sister, Mrs. P. M. (Mabel) McCarrell and brother, Claire J. Moore, both of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place Thursday at 2 p.m. in the Belleghem funeral chapel, Hunter St., with the Rev. Gordon S. Maxwell of Trinity United Church officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake cemetery.

New Substations Just Like Home

Seldom does a city beautification scheme result in a direct saving to taxpayers, but the PUC has come up with one they say will do the trick.

The plan is to build all future electric substations within a shell which outwardly will resemble almost exactly the surrounding houses.

Officials claim that for a number of reasons, including the fact that equipment will be stored inside a heated weatherproof shell, a substantial saving can be made in cost of construction.

First on the list under the new scheme is the substation required for the section recently annexed from Smith Township.

The idea did not originate with the PUC, but has been used in Montreal and other larger centres where it is said substations cannot be distinguished from surrounding houses in residential areas.

When the boarding schools were set up for the natives, following Molinas' pattern, the students were taught trades especially designed for rural education in Mexico.

WORK CARRIED ON

"This work is still being carried on today," Molinas emphasized. "Groups are still going out under the system. The community centre where they stay is centrally located in the town where they perform their duties. At the moment one of these missions is operating among a group of Aztecs and Totonacas Indians between Puebla state and Veracruz.

* * * * *

"The group has a head professor, a professor of physical culture and sanitation; a woman who is not a teacher but is trained as a social worker. She visits the homes. There is a practical professor of agriculture, a professor in home economics and small industry; also a bricklayer to help teach the building of homes; a carpenter; a professor of music and drama and a professor of art. There are usually 12-15 on the staff."

* * * * *

These missions have a movie apparatus also to aid in their lectures, and they have a portable electric plant. At the same time the missionaries have to teach many adults to read and write along with the more advanced students. They have been teaching them the Castilian alphabet by using booklets printed with the dialect vocabulary. This has been a success except with two tribes.

* * * * *

The campaign of pioneers like Molinas in the anti-illiteracy effort has made great strides. Under the Calles administration some years ago, there were 8 open air schools in the capital; 3,550 new rural schools; 40,000 adults attending night schools; 190,000 children in primary schools. By 1944 there were 19 regional normal schools and 3 agriculture colleges, besides the regional agricultural schools. By 1951, 2,655,723 had been made literate.

* * * * *

Today the work is being pushed as rapidly as personnel and funds will permit. It is hoped within a few years that every child will have equal opportunity for education, Molinas declared.

Jr. Homemakers Model Dresses

BETHANY (ENS) — The Junior Homemakers Club, "The Glad I Canners" met at the home of Mrs. Frank Bigelow with Miss Marie Carr presiding. The roll call was answered with "A Special Feature in My Record Book".

Mrs. Clarence Page gave instructions on final fittings of the cotton dresses being made and Mrs. H. L. Challice discussed proper finishings of seams, belts, pressing and so on.

The nine girls present modelled their dresses which are almost completed. They were invited to meet again on Wednesday, April 1, at the home of Mrs. H. DeGeer. Mrs. Bigelow and her daughter Miss Janet Bigelow served refreshments.

Furniture Design

divider. Fashioned of wood or wrought iron most room dividers permit a variety of arrangemnts.

Warmer tones are returning to the woods used in the modern group. Ambers, lighter mahogany and fruit woods contrast dramatically with coarsely woven fabrics in vivid colors. High in favor are coral, turquoise, and chartreuse.

Small cocktail tables, to be easily moved and huge ottomans make a place for themselves in more and more modern livifg rooms.

Early American furniture remains the favorite of those who prefer the coziness of by-gone days. Here again the influence of television is felt. The mellow warmth of maple is evident in adaptations of antique designs—in high demand for the ranch-style home.

French Provincial takes second place.

Consistent with the design of modestly-sized homes, formal dining rooms are less in demand.

However, more formal furniture takes precdence where the dining room is separated from the living area. Here period furniture attains more elegance.

Today bedrooms are becoming the only quiet sanctuary for concentration, reading and study. Thus the bedroom will be furnished as a friendly room with easy chairs, tables, a desk and more tailored draperies and bedspreads. Gone are the frills and ruffles of past years.

Outdoor living has maintained rattan as a fashion leader in the patio-terrace field, with wrought iron becoming increasingly popular. Both are strikingly combined with colorful woven fabrics.

GUIDED MISSILE ZOOMS SKYWARD — With smoke billowing from its twin manifolds, the Navy's new guided missile, "Regulus," boosts its climb skyward on a test flight. The missile has a high explosive warhead and can be adapted for use on a variety of naval craft. Its training counterpart has a tri-cycle landing gear that enables it to return with valuable flight data and to be re-used.

Reserve Decision In Hockey Death

COLLINGWOOD (CP) — Magistrate Gordon Foster reserved decision Monday in a preliminary hearing of a manslaughter charge against 18-year-old Walter Fines of Aurora, held in connection with the death of Robert Gillies, a 17-year-old Collingwood hockey player.

Gillies died March 4, a few hours after he was injured in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior C playoff between Aurora and Collingwood. Fines was given a match penalty for checking Gillies into the boards.

George Gordon, a goal judge at the game, testified Monday he had overheard Fines tell the Aurora goalkeeper several times that he was going to "start a brawl."

Hit Song Writer Dead

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Arthur Fields, 65, composer of several popular song hits, was identified Monday as one of the 33 persons killed when a fire swept a nursing home. Among the popular songs he wrote were "On The Mississippi," "Abba Dabba Honeymoon," "And The Angels Sing" and "11 More Months and 10 More Days."

Flood Waters Drop, Damage Widespread

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP)—Flood waters of the racing North river seceded steadily today leaving behind widespsead damage to summe homes and farms. Meanwhile police reported the Ottawa river has been rising steadily during the last few days at Ste. Anne de Bellevue —the point where the North river flows into the Ottawa.

Since Friday morning, when the North river overflowed its banks at several places in the Shawbridge, Lachute and St. Jerome districts, thousands of acres of farmland have been inundated. Farmlands between here and Lachute, 35 miles west of here, are still under three feet of water.

Will Decontrol Animal Feeds

LONDON (CP)—Dates for the decontrol of animal feeding stuffs have been announced by Britain's food ministry.

Rationing and price control of feeding stuffs end Aug. 1. On the same date, United Kingdom wheat growers will be free to dispose of their crops for human consumption or seed.

Announcement of the decontrol dates follows the original announcement in January that freeing of controls was in prospect for grain, cereals and feeding stuffs. It had not been announced yet when the grain trade will be handed back to private enterprise, but it is expected to be this fall.

Shedding of grain controls may slightly increase Canadian wheat sales to Britain, as the British government intends to use dollar wheat as a kind of bargaining counter to avoid paying premium prices for non-dollar wheat.

HOME MAKER SHOW

THEY SURVIVED— Four survivors of the Littlefield Nursing Home disaster in Largo, Fla., huddle together on the steps of a dwelling across the street from the fire ravaged building. Twenty-five aged and infirm inmates of the home ran to safety, but 33 others were killed as the home burned to the ground. Most were trapped in their beds.

FIRE KILLS 33 PERSONS—Flames roar over the wreckage of the Littlefield Nursing Home at Largo, Fla., after razing the frame building and killing 33 persons. Most of those killed were trapped in their beds, the metal frames of which are visible in the photo. Twenty-five others ran or were helped to safety in a nearby orange grove.

Recalls Opening Of Suez Canal

CANORA, Sask. (CP)—When the history of Canora is written, there is sure to be a place in it for Jacob Kusiak, the town's earliest pioneer.

Born in Austria during the last year of the Crimean War, he left Europe in 1895, bound for Canada at the age of 39. Mr. Kusiak settled on his Prairie homestead about seven miles southeast of what is now Canora.

For a man who will be looking back on 98 years of life this August, Mr. Kusiak has an active and remarkable memory. He recalls the opening of the Suez canal in 1869, the Russo-Turkish War of 1877-78, the forming of the dual Austro-Hungarian monarchy, and other historic events.

DIFFER IN POLITICS

The minister of telephones for Saskatchewan, Alex Kusiak, can agree with his pioneer father on most things—but not politics. When Alex was running as CCF candidate for Canora, his father was actively campaigning for the Liberals.

The only settlement in the immediate area of Mr. Kusiak's homestead was Yorktpn, which he remembers today as having a population of about 100 people.

He recalls that the people in the Yorkton area did a lot of walking in the pioneer days. Mr. Kusiak used to hike into Yorkton every three weeks for supplies. The round trip was approximately 78 miles. Twice a year he used to walk to Winnipeg for other supplies and business. That round trip was about 604 miles.

Ontario Wants Ottawa To Look After Unemployed

TORONTO (CP)—Welfare Minister Goodfellow said Monday there is "no valid reason" why the federal government should not assume responsibility for unemployed employables.

During the debate in the legislature on his department's estimates of $21,921,150, Mr. Goodfellow said the Ontario government will continue to be fully responsible for the province's unemployables.

Other activities that highlighted the sitting were the department of lands and forests estimates of $12,600,000 and an outline of reforestation plans; and an increase in the cost of mineral rights leases on Crown lands in Northern Ontario.

Speaking on unemployment, Mr. Goodfellow said the federal government is well equipped with its chain of national employment service offices to handle the problem. Provincial action only duplicated the work of federal officers.

3,600 ON ROLLS

The minister also said the government has set up relief rolls for 3,600 disabled persons since this form of assistance was started last July.

He reported that there was a marked increase in the number of adoptions last year and that the department plans to revise the Children's Protection Act, the Adoption Act and the Child of Unmarried Parents Act. The House accepted his estimates.

HAS AMENDMENT

Mines Minister Kelly introduced an amendment to the mining act which would increase the cost of mineral rights leases on Northern Ontario Crown lands from 10 cents to $5 an acre.

He said it would prevent mining companies from leasing large areas of Northern Ontario and then "sitting on them." The amendment also provides for a reduction of the size of leases from 100,000 to 64,000. This would protect small prospectors but still allow big companies to use the latest devices for prospecting.

Attorney-General Porter denied a newspaper report of large-scale resignations from the provincial police. He said the rate of resignations is less than half that of the Ontario civil service as a whole.

Widow Called To Bar

VANCOUVER (CP)—A white-haired widow was admitted to the British Columbia bar Monday as a barrister and solicitor. She is Mrs. Viola McCrossan, widow of George McCrossan, QC. She articled as a law clerk in 1916 to her brother E. K. De Beck, now clerk of the B.C. legislature. But her studies were interrupted by her marriage and later the education of her three children.

Crosby Denies Marriage Plans

PARIS (AP). — Bing Crosby waved aside Monday with a casual "it's all news to me" gossip of an approaching marriage to 26-year-old actress Mona Freeman.

As for the gossip column prediction of a Crosby-Freeman wedding at St. Moritz, Switzerland, in December, the crooner merely said:

"We're good friends, yes. I've known Mona since she was a little girl—10 or 12 years. But I certainly don't know anything about a wedding at St. Moritz. And I doubt if she does either."

Crosby was more voluble about a British sneer at his golfing prowess.

The actor-singer's qualifications to play in the British amateur tournament at Hoylake next May 25 were challenged last week by the London Daily Express columnist, Desmond Hackett, who said Crosby had turned the 1950 amateur into a cheap circus, when female Crosby fans in high heels had "run screaming all over the course."

If Crosby rated a low three handicap, said Hackett, then he Hackett, ought to get top billing at the Palladium, London's top variety theatre. So today Crosby produced his membership card in the Lakeside Golf Club in Hollywood, pointing out his rating as a three-handicap man.

"You can see for yourself," said he. Then he added: "Of course I can see that there might be some complaint about the confusion on the course, but no one has objected before."

London Bureau Chief Transferred To Ottawa

NEW YORK (CP)—The New York Times announced Monday that Raymond Daniell, chief of its London bureau for the last 10 years is being transferred to Ottawa to direct the Times' Canadian coverage.

Daniell, a Times staffer for 25 years, will succeed Percy Philip who has held the Ottawa post for 13 years. Philip is retiring after 33 years on the Times' foreign staff.

Corporations Act Date Extended To 1954

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario's Corporations Act will come into effect April 30, 1954, instead of next July 1, it was announced Monday.

Col. G. A. Welch, provincial secretary, said in the legislature the date was extended to allow a select committee to continue its consideration of the act.

He made his announcement during discussion of amendments to the act, introduced earlier in the session. The measure is a revision of the present Companies Act, untouched since 1912.

RUSSIA PLEDGES PEACE BID BACKING

Secret Talks Begin In Berlin

U.K., Russian Officers Discussing Safety Of Planes

BERLIN—(Reuters) — The first East-West conference for 20 months opened in East Berlin Tuesday night between Russian and British air officers in strictest secrecy.

Even the names of the British representatives were withheld until the last minute, and then came from the British foreign office in London.

A foreign office spokesman said the British representatives are Air Vice-Marshal J. H. Edwardes-Jones, senior air staff officer with the 2nd tactical air force in Germany, and two British high commission officials.

SAFETY OF PLANES

The conference—to meet alternately in the Russian and British sectors—will deal with the safety of Allied planes flying over Russian territory to and from West Berlin. They were suggested by the Russian commander in East Germany, Gen. Vassily Chuikov, after Russian jet fighters shot down an RAF four-engined bomber March 12, killing all seven crew members.

British officials here said they knew nothing of the talks, but a U.S. spokesman said: "We don't think anything important will arise out of them, since this is only a two-power meeting. . . Any alteration in the existing agreement would have to be decided by the four powers."

Swede Agrees To Accept Lie's UN Post

Surprise Nomination Breaks Deadlock Between Soviet, West

STOCKHOLM—(Reuters) — Dag Hammarskjold, Swedish deputy foreign minister, said today that he will accept the post of United Nations secretary-general.

Hammarskjold announced his decision personally to a specially-summoned press conference, attended by about 100 reporters, in the Swedish foreign office.

The Swedish diplomat was nominated by the security council Tuesday to succeed Norwegian Trygve Lie in a surprise agreement between the Soviet Union and the Western members. No previous overtures had been made to Swedish officials, government sources said.

Announcement of his selection was the first anybody outside the council knew that he was even being considered.

UN delegates immediately coupled Russia's agreement on a new secretariat chief executive with Communist China's two-day-old proposal to settle the Korean prisoner-of-war deadlock barring the way to a Korean armistice. Delegates figured both are major steps in the Soviet Union's new post-Stalin peace offensive.

Delegates hoped that the agreement by the cold war adversaries on Lie's successor also presages future east-west concord on other bitter problems harassing the 60-country world organization.

SECRET HUDDLE

Hammarskjold (pronounced as hamn'-mahr-sheuld) was approved first in a secret huddle of the security council's five permanent members—Britain, The United States, France, the Soviet Union and Nationalist China. Each agreed not to use his veto if the Swede won the seven council votes necessary for his selection.

In a hastily-called meeting just after, the council then nominated Hammarskjold overwhelmingly 10-0. Nationalist China abstained, because Sweden recognizes the Chinese Communist government, but this did not count as a veto.

Hammarskjold now must be confirmed by the general assembly, considered a certainty. As soon as the council acted, Assembly President L. B. Pearson of Canada noti-

Anxious To Help Establish Truce Molotov Declares

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW—(AP)—Foregin minister V. M. Molotov today pledged Soviet assistance in trying to bring about an armistice in Korea on the basis of proposals by Chou En-lai, Chinese premier. Molotov's statement was the first official Soviet comment on the latest Korean developments. It appeared in the form of a foreign ministry announcement issued through the official Soviet news agency Tass and broadcast by Moscow radio. Molotov said the Soviet government "recognizes the complete justice" of the new proposals "and expresses its readiness to fully assist" in realizing them.

OTTAWA (CP)—Dana Wilgress under-secretary of the external affairs department, said today the Canadian government thinks Premier Malenkov is changing Russian tactics while he entrenches himself in an effort to achieve something approaching the "deification" accorded Stalin. Mr. Wilgress told the Senate external affairs committee there are indications that Russia wants to relax tensions with the West but there is no evidence of any change in basic Soviet policy.

There have been two proposals —one from North Korea for the exchange of sick and wounded prisoners, and another from Chou En-lai in Peiping for the repatriation of other prisoners of war. Under the latter proposal prisoners unwilling to return home would be handled by neutrals.

WOULD JOIN U.N.

At the same time, Molotov strongly suggested the Chinese Communists and the North Koreans should be represented in the United Nations. He declared this would greatly assist in settling all issues of the Korean war.

From this it is obvious the U. S. S. R. intends to continue its fight for Chinese Communist and North Korean representation in the UN.

In regard to the specific Peiping proposal for exchange of sick and wounded prisoners of war, Molotov said:

"Both the government of the Chinese People's Republic and the government of the Korean People's Democratic Republic have stated that they agree to the proposal for the exchange of sick and wounded prisoners of war, and as before express readiness to reach agreement on the immediate settlement of the entire question and thereby of ending the war in Korea.

"I am authorized to state that the Soviet government expresses its full solidarity with this noble act of the government of the Chinese People's Republic and he

London Clerk Remanded For One Week

LONDON (AP) — An owl-eyed clerk charged with murdering his wife and under questioning about the sex-thrill strangling of at least five other women appeared briefly in a crowded court today. He was ordered jailed for another week.

Gaunt, 55-year-old John R. H. Christie seemed nonchalant—even bored—with the eight-minute proceedings in the London magistrates court. His only outward sign of emotion was a single furrow in his pale brow. He made no statement.

Scotland Yard homicide men continued dismantling the entire murder house and spading through every foot of the grounds in a search for further bodies.

REOPEN FILE

The yard also reopened its file on a double strangling murder in the same house in 1949 for which Timothy J. Evans, a fellow tenant of Christie's, was sent to the gallows.

The victims of that slaying were Evans' wife, aged 19, and their 14-month-old daughter. Their bodies were found stuffed into an outdoor washhouse adjoining Christie's kitchen. Police claimed Evans had confessed to the killings but at his trial the 25-year-old laborer charged Christie had done away with the woman and child. Christie denied the accusation.

The prisoner was heavily guarded by police and detectives. Outside the court, a crowd strained against police lines or queued for the few available public seats in the courtroom.

RUSH FOR SEATS

There was a mad rush for seats when the courtroom doors opened.

Scores of other persons filled the windows of nearby homes and apartments, craning for a view of Christie's coming and going.

Christie stepped briskly into the dock when his name and case—No. 7—were called. He wore horn-rimmed spectacles.

Railway Tracks Bombed, Blame Douks

GRAND FORKS, B. C. (CP)—Railway tracks winding through Sons of Freedom Doukhobor settlements in British Columbia were reported "bombed" at points 40 miles apart Tuesday night.

During the same period a lumber mill was swept by a mysterious fire which destroyed an estimated 1,000,000 board feet of lumber.

RCMP said the track bombings, at least, appeared to be the work of Sons of Freedom terrorists.

The dynamiting damaged the Canadian Pacific Railway's Kettle Valley line two miles west of here.

Later, the Nelson Daily News said 150 feet of track was damaged in an explosion on the CPR line at Tarrys, 18 miles west of Nelson.

The two points are roughly 40 miles apart.

UNKNOWN ORIGIN

The lumber mill fire was at Passmore, 24 miles northwest of Nelson. No details were known and police listed the blaze as being of "unknown origin."

The track dynamitings were the first in months.

Only about two months ago did trains resume running at night through this region, near the United States border some 230 miles east of Vancouver.

At that time representatives of railway workers said that if raids on railway tracks resumed with the lifting of the night embargo, the possibility of strike action would be discussed.

The restrictions were originally ordered because of past raids blamed on terrorists of the Sons of Freedom sect.

The Grand Forks blast, heard in the community proper, destroyed ties and twisted a section of the track. The explosion occurred shortly before a freight train was scheduled to pass over the tracks.

To what extent the explosions disrupted rail traffic was not known immediately.

Cautions Against Apathy

Peterborough civil defence workers were cautioned against apathy Tuesday night when they received instruction in the emergency role of the city's industries and institutions in the final meeting of their six weeks' course at PCVS auditorium. John A. Dewart, chairman of the city's civil defence set-up, reminded the meeting that the organization had been formed when Chinese forces were first engaged in the Korea campaign. "It seems rather ironic that tonight should see some possibility of the conclusion of that war," Mr. Dewart said, but he subscribed entirely to what was said by the guest speaker of the evening, Brigadier R. G. Whitelaw, St. Catharines, director of civil defence for Lincoln county.

"If you fall into apathy you're doing exactly what the enemy wants you to do," Brig. Whitelaw said. He noted that civil defence authorites in Washington had stressed that the Korean war was only one part of a steady program of aggression by the Communist countries.

WHAT THEY'RE AFTER

"If they can lull the democractic countries into a false sense of security then they're winning the war and gaining exactly what they're after," he claimed.

George R. Melton, who acted as chairman, explained that the course had been intended to explain to representatives of local industries and institutions the civil defence plan generally throughout Canada and in Peterborough particularly in order that any planning that was to be done by executives of those bodies could be tied in with the city plan.

Roy Bogle, local civil defence vice-chairman, briefed the audience on what ought to be done in their own industries and

Municipalities Won't Get Sales Tax Exemption This Year Abbott Decrees

OTTAWA—(CP)—Finance Minister Abbott, keeper of the federal purse, has decided against any exemption of municipalities from the 10-per-cent sales tax this year. That was his reply in the Commons Tuesday as spokesmen for all parties, including one Liberal member, argued for exemption not only of muincipalities but also of certain social welfare organizations. The minister said he had decided against any change because it would take something like $590,000,000 a year from the federal treasury and because he believed it would not be appropriate for the federal government to assume any direct responsiblity for the financial problems of the municipalities which were creatures of the provinces.

To exempt the municipalities, he said, the government would have to increase either personal income or corporation taxes by 50 per cent to make up the loss.

TOO CUMBERSOME

Besides, said the finance minister, keeping track of such exemptions would be cumbersome and involved because the tax is imposed at the manufacturer's level. There were some 4,000 municipalities and they bought an extremely wide range of goods.

Except for these difficulties, he said, he would be glad to lift the sales tax from municipal purchases.

Labor Wins 2nd By-Election

STOKE-UPON-TRENT, England (CP) — Labor retained its seat in the House of Commons for Stoke-upon-Trent, Staffordshire, today by winning its second by-election in two days to fill vacant Labor seats.

Conservatives hold an over-all majority of 20 in the House of Commons.

Labor candidate Mrs. H. Slater, 49, a former teacher, defeated Sam Middup, Conservative, by 23,103 votes to 7,502 in Stoke-upon-Trent. The by-election was necessitated by the death of Labor member A. E. Davis. Polling took place Tuesday and results were announced today.

In the general elections of October, 1951, Labor polled 71 per cent of the total vote in Stoke-upon-Trent. Tuesday Labor polled 75 per cent of the total vote.

In another by-election at Barnsley, Yorkshire, Tuesday, Labor retained the seat vacated "for strong personal reasons," by Sidney Schofield. Labor candidate Roy Mason won 29,283 votes compared to 10,905 for Conservative Geoffrey Whittaker.

Grandmother 48, Gives Birth To Triplets

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Mrs. Ivy Spencer, a 48-year-old grandmother, gave birth to girl triplets Tuesday night.

One was still-born but the other two were doing well in hospital.

Mrs. Spencer has a married son and a two-year-old grandson.

Workmen Fall 16 Ft. As Tank Explodes

TORONTO (CP) — An acetylene tank exploded in an east-end scrap yard here today, toppling workmen 16 feet away and shattering store windows three blocks distant.

One of the workmen, Bill Gemza, was hurled against a freight car and bruised about the back. Another, Ben Yaklo, was spun like a top by the blast.

Two Brothers Jailed For Life

MONTREAL (CP)—Two boys who shot and killed their father when he scolded them for keeping late hours were sentenced Tuesday by Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure to life imprisonment in St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary.

Robert Bedard, 16, and his brother Yvon, 14, shot and killed their father, Paul Bedard, a postal employee, and wounded their mother last October when their parents censured them for coming home at 3 a.m. The shooting occurred in the Bedard home in the city's north end.

Mr. Justice Lazure, sentencing them, noted that according to their own admission Yvon first fired two revolver shots at his father and one at his mother, wounding them both.

Mr. Bedard called out for a doctor and then, said the judge, Robert took the gun and fired two fatal shots at his father. They fled after taking what money they could find in the house. Police arrested them later.

The brothers had been charged originally with murder but this charge was reduced to manslaughter by agreement between Crown and defence.

Court officials said it was the first case in Montreal court annals in which boys of that age had been sent to penitentiary for life.

Gov't Seizes Rail Assets

GUATEMALA CITY (Reuters)—The government has seized the assets of the American and British-owned International Railroad of Central America in lieu of a disputed tax claim of $3,500 000 it was disclosed today.

The attachment took place March 28.

Afterwards the railroad president, Thomas Bradshaw, a British citizen, tried to raise the matter with the government. The railroad management has denied owing the disputed tax claim.

IRC is the only railroad of importance in Guatemala. It operates a network of 795 miles.

It had repeated labor troubles over a period of years and disputes with the left wing government. The company is Anglo-American, 42.68 per cent of its capital being owned by the United Fruit Company of Boston, Mass.

United Fruit itself has been in dispute with the Guatemalan government which proposes to expropriate 250,000 acres of its plantations.

Ex-Policeman Catches Hit-Run Driver

TORONTO (CP) — A former Orillia police sergeant chased and captured a driver Tuesday night after a traffic accident in which a pedestrian was severely injured by a car police said did not stop.

As a result of the actions of Alvin J. Pitts, the ex-policeman who now works for a Toronto insurance company, Albert John Kiekebelt, 32, of nearby Woodbridge, was charged with dangerous driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

The accident victim, Ilio Lorenzetti, 30, today was reported in critical condition in hospital with a broken right hip and head and internal injuries.

Kiekebelt was remanded to April 8 today when he appeared before Magistrate Tupper Bigelow. Bail was set at $5,000.

3 Cars Wrecked In Collision

HAMILTON (CP) — Four persons were injured and three cars, including a police cruiser were wrecked, in a three-car collision on York street shortly after midnight.

Police claim the accident was caused when an old-model car, heading west, made a U-turn on the roadway, directly in the path of the cruiser, also west-bound. The third car, struck the cruiser in the rear.

Joseph Pollard, 46, of Bridgeview Survey, driver of the old model car, was arrested and charged with intoxication, dangerous and careless driving.

Treated at St. Joseph's hospital were: Paul F. Zuercher, 38, RR 2, Hamilton; Oscar Lariviere, Mount Hope, a passenger in the Pollard vehicle, and Mr. Pollard. Constable Ed Forden, who was riding in the police cruiser, was treated for knee cuts at the General hospital...

Railway Blocked By Derailment

NORTH BAY (CP) — A passenger train locomotive was derailed early today at Washago, about 90 miles north of Toronto. The derailment forced closing of the Canadian National Railways line between North Bay and Toronto for 7½ hours.

The mishap was the second in the region in 48 hours. Monday night traffic was held up three to four hours after a freight car was partly derailed on the Canadian Pacific Railway's main North Bay-Ottawa line at Deux Rivieres, 60 miles east of North Bay.

No one was injured in either derailment.

In Tuesday night's accident, the locomotive and tender of passenger train No. 3 northbound was derailed, blocking both CNR lines around Lake Simcoe. An auxiliary from Allandale retracked the engine.

Passenger train No. 47 from Toronto, due here at 7:30 a m., was rescheduled to arrive here this afternoon. Toronto-bound No. 46 was stopped at Gravenhurst until the line was cleared.

Think Slain Man In Bullion Theft

MONTREAL (CP) — Provincial police said today Charlie (The Kid) Waggoner, believed the victim of an underworld slaying, may have been connected with an unsolved $300,000 bullion theft in Toronto.

Provincial officers investigating the week-end killing of the 26-year-old underworld habitue declined to elaborate on their theory of his connection with the gold theft last September from Malton airport in Toronto.

Anatole Roch, provincial police investigator, said the police inquiry is "taking that line."

Waggoner's body was found Sunday in a creek on the outskirts of Montreal.

Today police combed Montreal underworld for information about a man seen with Waggoner, also known as Wagner, shortly before he was found slain at St. Mathieu de Laprairie.

Mau Mau Terrorists Killed In Battle

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters) — More than 20 Mau Mau terrorists have been killed in a battle with government forces raging today a few miles north of Nairobi, according to reports reaching here

It was in the same area of Kiambu reserve that terrorists massacred scores of loyal Kikuyu tribesmen last Thursday, burning huts and slashing down Africans who had co-operated with white authorities.

Clear Group Of Companies In Quebec Price Fixing

OTTAWA (CP)—Combines Commissioner T. D. MacDonald today cleared a group of Canadian and United States companies of allegations that they had combined to fix prices illegally in Quebec's huge maple products industry.

The allegations were made in a petition signed by a group of maple syrup and maple sugar producers in the Beauce district of Quebec. Mr. MacDonald said in a 44-page report tabled in the Commons by Justice Minister Garson.

This is believed to be the first time in many years that the combines commissioner has issued a report, giving companies charged with operating a combine a clean bill of health.

The companies involved included one Canadian and five U. S. buying maple products from Quebec—world's maple products centre—at a common price through a single agency, Farm Products, Inc.

Mr. MacDonald estimated Quebec's 1952 maple production at 38,727,000 pounds, more than 80 per cent of the total Canadian output of 45,111,000 pounds. The Canadian output—the world's biggest—was almost triple U. S. production of some 17,500,000 pounds.

The six companies cleared were: Confederated Foods of Canada Ltd., Delta, Ont., which left Farm Products Inc., after the 1950 buying season; American Maple Products Corp., Newport, Vt., Cary Maple Sugar Co., Inc., St. Johnsbury, Vt. Fred Fear and Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.; Maple Orchards Ltd., Beauceville, Que., wholly-owned subsidiary of United Maple Products Inc., Burlington, Vt.; and Our Husbands Co., Lyndon, Vt.

Mr. MacDonald said he had made a three-year investigation into the allegations and evidence gathered "did not go so far as to prove a combine within the meaning of the Combines Investigation Act."

The finding was based on the conclusion that the companies purchased only 15 per cent of the Quebec maple crop and were not shown to account for a "sufficiently large part of the market or to have such control over it as to make it appear conclusively that their arrangements are detrimental to the public, in this case, the producers."

Goes On Crime Spree

Young Marine Confesses Five Slayings

DUBUQUE, Ia. (AP) — A young U. S. Marine on a cross-country crime spree with a 'teen-age girl was seized here Tuesday and admitted slaying five persons in holdups in four days, authorities said.

Three women, a man and a college student were shot down by the nervous young trigger-man in holdups which netted the youth only a small sum of money. Four of the slayings occurred in the midwest, the fifth in New York state.

The marine, Fred E. McManus, 18, of Valley Stream, N. Y., who was on a 10-day leave which ended Monday night, was held in jail here awaiting arrival of authorities from three states.

ADMITS SLAYINGS

Dubuque county sheriff Leo J. Martin said McManus in a signed statement had admitted double slayings in Minnesota and Illinois and the fatal shooting in New York state of a Hobart College student whose body has not yet been found.

His father, Mose McManus, a brewery firm official, planned to fly to Dubuque "to see for myself" that it is his son whom authorities said had admitted the slayings.

Young McManus was picked up with a 16-year-old girl he said was his wife, and another man in a stolen red and black convertible near here late Tuesday.

Martin said the young marine confessed shooting the student, Allen Braverman, 19, near Rochester, N. Y., Friday afternoon and then taking Braverman's 1953 model car. McManus said he dumped body in a ditch about 20 miles outside the city and covered it with dirt.

Monroe county, N. Y., authorities said they were searching for the youth's body.

Sheriff Martin said McManus also confessed these killings:

Mrs. Davis Beaton, wife of a Spring Valley, Minn., cafe owner and Mrs. Harriet Horseman, 48, a waitress in a cafe, early Monday.

George N. Bloomberg, 56, and his wife, Florence N., 55, Saturday in a grocery-garage they operated at Kenneyville, Ill., about 25 miles northwest of Chicago.

Death Sentence Passed On Pavlukoff

VANCOUVER (CP) — Walter Pavlukoff is under sentence of death here after a trial which followed by more than five years the murder which made him a hunted man.

Pavlukoff, who has said he was innocent but "doomed when I was still in my cradle," Tuesday night was convicted of murder in the death during a holdup of bank manager Sydney Petrie.

A jury of 10 men and two women brought in the guilty verdict three hours and 15 minutes after retiring. Mr. Justice A. M. Manson sentenced Pavlukoff to die on the gallows June 23. Defence counsel announced the conviction will be appealed.

The 39-year-old Pavlukoff took the verdict calmly. "The case is in the hands of my attorneys," he told the Assize Court, "and whatever is to be said is in their hands."

KILLED IN HOLDUP

Petrie was killed during a holdup attempt Aug. 25, 1947, at the Kitsilano branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. He was shot when he tried to upset a heavy desk on the gunman.

A murder warrant was issued against Pavlukoff within days of the killing and he held a high place on the RCMP's list of "most wanted" men.

But capture didn't come until January of this year.

Mr. Justice Manson told jurors there was no question of manslaughter in the case. Conviction of murder or acquittal were the only choices.

During the week-long trial one woman said she was positive Pavlukoff was the man who walked into the bank carrying a newspaper in his right hand to shield his face and a gun in his left hand. One youth said he would say Pavlukoff was not the man.

The other witnesses called by the Crown said Pavlukoff undoubtedly resembled the bandit, but that they could not make positive identification.

Mr. Abbott outlined his position as he argued that a motion moved by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, was out of order. The motion, an amendment to second reading—approval in principle—of the government's budgetary excise tax changes, urged legislation to remit the sales tax charged on purchases of machinery and other equipment made by municipalities and school boards.

OUT OF ORDER

Speaker Ross Macdonald eventually ruled Mr. Drew's motion out of order. Immediately J. M. Macdonnell (PC-Toronto Greenwood) moved practically the same motion but deleted a reference in the original motion to the government's "failure" to pay municipal taxes on federal property.

Again the Speaker ruled the motion out of order and on a challenge by the Progressive Conservatives, his ruling was upheld by a vote of 108 to 51. Liberals voted for the ruling, supported by J. L. Gibson (Ind-Comox Alberni). The Progressive Conservative, CCF and Social Credit parties were joined by P. E. Gagnon (Ind.-Chicoutimi) and Raoul Poulin (Ind-Beauce).

In the excise-tax debate, which continues today, Mr. Drew said it was unfair that the provincial governments should be exempt from the sales tax while the municipalities and school boards were liable. Some federal measures had added to the municipal burden, mainly the necessity to buy civil defence equipment.

"The extent to which the federal government is steadily encroaching on their tax dollar is a matter of very real concern to many municipalities," said Mr. Drew.

"The more we encourage municipal control of their own affairs, the betteer it will be for the taxpayer."

TAX PYRAMIDS

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, and Stanley Knowles (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre) both called for exemption of municipalities and social welfare agencies from the 10-per-cent sales tax. Mr. Coldwell said the tax pyramided to 15 or 16 per cent by the time it reaches the ordinary consumer.

"Not necessarily," interjected Mr. Abbott.

Mr. Coldwell said he wouldn't quibble, but the taxpayer should know what he was paying.

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said his group is opposed to the sales tax in principle. The tax was applied at the manufacturers' level and because of this had the effect of pyramiding consumer prices. If there were administrative difficulties it was the federal government which created them and it should work them out.

fied the Swede of his nomination and asked him to accept.

His choice was a complete surprise, not only to non-council delegations but to him and his colleagues in the Swedish government as well. In Stockholm, both Hammarskjold and his premier, Tage Erlander, said there had been no preliminary contacts made on the matter.

Hammarskjold emphasized that he would have to talk to his government associates before deciding whether to accept the nomination.

CAREER DIPLOMAT

The nominee is 48, a bachelor, and an internationally known economist and career diplomat. He is from a family of statesmen and military men and his father, Hjalmar Hammarskjold, was Swedish premier during the First World War.

Hammarskjold was tapped for the $40,000-a-year post to succeed a fellow Scandinavian—the Norwegian Lie. The Russians had fought Lie bitterly since he supported the U.S.-UN action in Korea in 1950.

Lie submitted his resignation last Nov. 10 in a move to ease east-west tension, but the continuing deadlock had prevented choice of a successor.

Approval of Hammarskjold came as the Russians and India moved to speed UN discussion of Korea in the light of the new developments there.

The assembly decided to recess tonight for the Easter week-end. It will resume next Tuesday.

Some observers thought Vishinsky's plea for urgency indicated he may have new proposals to bring up.

Would Organize 300 Camp Cooks

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—A program to organize some 300 camp cooks in northwestern Ontario into the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union was outlined today by William kitching, business agent of Local 891 of the union.

Mr. Kitching said the union, which now has about 150 members, will seek certification at a later date in an attempt "to correct some injustices to camp cookery workers."

The statement said that while the majority of bush, construction and mining camp operators in this section of the province gave fair treatment to cooks, "some operators have refused to hire men over 65, and one large pulp and paper company recently issued orders that only female cooks are to be hired."

government of the Korean People's Democratic Republic and has no doubt that this act will find ardent support among the peoples throughout the world.

"The Soviet government also expressed confidence that this proposal will be correctly understood by the government of the United States of America."

Molotov said that the Chinese proposal on repatriation "gives an opportunity to solve justly the question of the repatriation of war prisoners and removes the remaining barriers to realization of an armistice in Korea."

Molotov said "of course the question of repatriation of war prisoners as a whole must also be decided in correspondence with the clauses of the Geneva Convention on which the Soviet government, as also the governments of the Chinese People's Republic and the Korean People's Democratic Republic, naturally insist.

NO POSITIVE RESULTS

"However, neither the lengthy talks in Panmunjom nor the frequent discussion of this question at the general assembly of the United Nations, as is well known, gave positive results."

Molotov added: "Inasmuch as this question remains the only disagreement between the warring sides in Korea, which stood athwart the pathway of agreement on an armistice, the Chinese People's Republic and the government of the Korean People's Democratic Republic, guided by a striving for attainment of peace and for bringing an end to the war in Korea, made a new step toward final solution of this question."

OFFER NEW HOPE

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill told a cheering House of Commons today that Communist China's latest proposals "seem to offer a new hope" for ending the Korean war.

Churchill said the formula suggested by Chou En-lai, China's premier, "appeared not inconsistent" with Britain's principles.

Earlier the premier had touched on the wider subject of talks between himself, President Eisenhower and Russia's Georgi Malenkov.

He welcomed Russia's apparent desire to improve relations with the West but advised the house to await results before pressing for talks.

On the Korean issue, he said that Chou's new proposals seem in line with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's declaration to the United Nations last Nov. 11 against forcible repatriation of Korean prisoners.

MAKING PLANS

MUNSAN, Korea (AP) — Gen. Mark Clark, the United Nations commander, made it clear today that the first concrete step toward a truce in Korea must be the exchange of sick and wounded prisoners of war.

But he told correspondents "we're making all preparations and will be ready to go. We don't want to do anything to hold up negotiations."

Clark's demand that exchange of disabled prisoners be the first order of business came as Red China's premier, Chou En-lai, cabled to United Nations headquarters the latest Communist proposal for ending the Korean fighting.

The UN commander voiced the same demand Tuesday in a letter answering an earlier Red proposal to trade disabled prisoners and to resume the suspended truce talks.

The plan Chou cabled to UN headquarters was first broadcast by Peiping Monday. It called for immediate exchange of all prisoners who "insist" on repatriation. The rest would be turned over to a neutral state until their future is determined. Of 132,000 Chinese and North Korean prisoners in UN stockades only about 81,000 have said they want to go home. The Communists have listed 3,198 American prisoners, all of whom presumably would want to leave North Korea, and about 9,000 other prisoners, mostly South Koreans.

U. S. government officials emphasized that there can be no compromise on the principle that prisoners shall not forcibly be returned home.

But spokesman generally appeared hopeful that the Reds actually are ready to bring the Korean war to a close on terms acceptable to the UN.

The Communist command has not yet answered Clark's letter in which he proposed settling details for exchanging sick and wounded prisoners before taking up plans for resuming truce negotiations.

Meanwhile, here were these other developments:

1. A six-car press train moved into the Munsan station for use by correspondents if full-scale talks are resumed. A Signal Corps communications van equipped to relay stories to Tokyo has been parked next to the train.

2. Eighth army medical officers sped plans for handling Allied sick and wounded personnel now in Communist hands.

3. U. S. Marine observers on the western front reported the Chinese Reds have cleared Koreans from a village just outside the Panmunjom truce site, possibly in anticipation of an early exchange of prisoners.

4. The Red Cross announced that it was ready to help with the exchange of sick and wounded prisoners by providing personnel and supplies.

institutions, stressing the fact that responsibility for whatever was done at that level was solely with the owners and operators.

"The basic principle for each owner and operator should be self-help," he said. "He should not expect other people to help him while he has facilities to help himself."

OUTLINES PROPOSALS

He outlined his own proposals for setting up private civil defence organizations, suggesting that the program should be built around the normal line of authority with one person appointed to direct the program and maintain liaison with public civil defence authorities.

Mr. Bogle proposed that industrial and institutional civil defence organizations should be built around existing personnel providing fire protection, first aid, police and evacuation services.

Two things ought to be done now, he stressed —basic organizations should be built and plans laid to paper.

Specific points he stressed were shelter areas should be clearly marked; people should be assigned to specific shelter areas, guards appointed, arrangements made for roll calls and capacities of shelter areas computed; ventilation problems should be studied and consideration should be given to the type and location of notices directing people from specific areas to specific shelters.

In an emergency, furnaces should be banked and automatic fuel supplies cut off. Steam, compressed air, inflamable gases and liquids, electric power and water should be cut off.

Communications systems, including runners, would have to be established and maintained, the speaker said, and a standard warning system should be worked out in conjunction with local officials. A record should be made of the types of construction of buildings in such a form that if it is called for by civil defence authorites it can be provided at a moment's notice.

STUDY SHELTERS

Finally, he suggested, a study should be made of any available shelter and where shelters can be built.

Mr. Bogle's address was followed by a film, "Disaster Control," illustrating steps to be taken in civil defenec for an industrial plant.

Brig. Whitelaw outlined the work that had been accomplished in civil defence in the St. Catharines area during the past 14 months.

"Everyone in Canada has attacked the problem cold," he said. "Available text books for local use leave a lot to one's imagination but, just as in the army, one has to work each problem out from first principles."

He said he was interested to learn that Peterborough was organized on a different system from St. Catharines but he intended to copy some of it because he thought it was good.

In going around the country, he had noticed that other centres of the size of Peterborough and St. Catharines did not have balanced systems but had "weighted the dice in favour of one service," such as police, fire, health or welfare."

NEED ALL SERVICES

"One service is no good if you haven't got the others," he warned.

Brig. Whitelaw said he thought it was a mistake to allot a percentage of civil defence personnel to a given population. He said that the number of rescue people required was not a matter of a percentage of the population but the number of buildings that would be destroyed in a raid based on the number of man hours required to get a person out. The same was true with all the other services required.

Declaring the course closed, Mr. Dewart said that when representatives of industries and institutions had been sought for the course, an immediate response had been obtained and 100 per cent. co-operation received throughout.

"If they are able to return to their industries and institutions and organize their own programs of civil defence then the purpose of this course has been achieved," he said.

There is no question that civil defence people in Great Britain and the United States are taking their work much more seriously than we are, he concluded. "In any event, civil defence is never wasted. It can be used in any disaster."

Mayor Hugh Waddell presented certificates to candidates who had qualified in the general instructors' course, concluded in December. They were: Victor F. Barry, R. A. Bell, Robert J. Bolton, Louis M. Brooks, Miss Eva Brown, William A. Clarke, Donald T. Crawford, J. A. Dewart, Miss Mary E. Elliott, Douglas J. Farthing, Harold G. Freeman, Florence B. Gladman, Gordon H. Hall, Samuel R. Say Advertising Excessive In Australia

By LOUIS LECK
Canadian Press Correspondent

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—Australia's Broadcasting Control Board a government watchdog over commercial radio programs and technical standards, says there is a trend here toward excessive advertising.

In its current report the board said there have been frequent complaints that advertising methods on radio are a source of irritation to listeners, and if not controlled could reduce commercial radio's value as an advertising medium.

The report noted that some station licences had been renewed subject to limitations on the length and number of advertisements.

The report said that in the year ending June, 1952, advertisers paid about £3,600,000 to commercial stations, from which the stations made a total profit of £515,000. Australians had about 2,500,000 radio sets, or nearly one to every three persons.

MUCH IMITATION

Discussing programs, the report criticized "the lack of originality in the approach of many stations to development of new programs and a tendency to imitate, frequently without great success, a new idea introduced by a competitor." Examples were the many quiz sessions, the extension of the practice of give-away prizes and the number of "thriller" sessions, whose desirability the board sometimes had occasion to question.

There had also been complaints that too many stations at the same time were broadcasting descriptions of boxing, horseracing and other sporting events. Some stations however had revised their policy and now were providing musical programs instead of racing reports.

NEED THIRD PROGRAM

The control board says that the desire of the Australian Broadcasting Commission (the national non-commercial radio network) to provide a third program raised many financial and technical problems. (The ABC says that a third program is necessary because during federal parliament sessions one of its two networks has to broadcast proceedings and it was not possible to cater for different tastes with only one alternative network).

The control board said there were no further clear channels left on the normal broadcasting band but there was a possibility of establishing a chain of high-power stations in the main capitals synchronized on a channel between 1500 and 1600 kilocycles.

Beef Industry Future Good

TORONTO (CP)—Speakers to the Ontario Beef Cattle Producers' Association Tuesday were optimistic about the future of the beef industry.

Dr. H. L. Patterson of the economic branch of the federal department of agriculture said he foresaw more and more demand for beef products in the future. He noted that Canada's population has been increasing.

"A lot of the immigrants are young people," he said. "They will want meat to eat. And let's not forget that our birth rate has been increasing since 1945."

He urged efficiency in production and said that producers will be called upon to produce more from less land, and more expensive land in the future. But he added the key to the future development of Canada rests with the farmer.

Robert McCubbin, parliamentary assistant to Agriculture Minister Gardiner, urged beef breeders to keep their cows and not dispose of them.

Rural Carriers To Get Raise

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons gave third and final reading Tuesday to legislation empowering the postmaster general to make increases in payments to rural mail carriers considered underpaid.

Approval came after some Progressive Conservatives suggested the bill should be held up.

W. Chester S. McLure (PC—Queens) and L. E. Cardiff (PC—Huron North) supported the principle of the bill but thought it should be delayed until a special committee studying post office matters could make recommendations.

Earl Catherwood (PC — Haldimand) praised the legislation but said something should be done about the tender system. H. O. White (PC—Middlesex East) said employment conditions for rural carriers should be the same as for urban carriers.

C. W. Hodgson (PC—Victoria, Ont.) said the legislation would allow the post office department to give rural carriers a better break.

Large-Scale Purge Of German Sea Police

BERLIN (AP) — The U. S. high commission newspaper Neue Zeitung reported today that a large-scale purge is under way in East Germany's "Sea Police," reported to be the nucleus of a future Communist German navy.

The newspaper said the sea police chief, Waldemar Verner, had ordered 3,000 "unreliables" transferred from his force to East zone army units.

This would cut the force considerably. Recent reports have estimated it at upwards of 10,000 men, with a fleet mostly of torpedo and speedboats and minesweepers.

Neue Zeitung reported also that 15 officers and 40 men of the force were arrested two days ago at the Baltic Sea port of Wismar for plotting to escape to West Germany in two sea police speedboats. Wismar is about 32 miles east of the West German border.

Detectives want more time to probe into Christie's past and to grill him further about the mass "murder house" slaying in London's drab Notting Hill gate district.

Christie was captured Tuesday after a seven-day country-wide manhunt—Britain's most intense since the days of Jack the Ripper in 1888. He was charged formally with the slaying of his wife, Ethel.

Believe Moscow Means Business On Armistice

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Latest cold war developments strongly suggest Moscow means business concerning a Korean truce. The Kremlin appears to have tumbled to the notion that it has much to gain by an apparent halt in the cold war.

Developments also suggest Stalin lost control of the Soviet government long before he died—perhaps longer ago than last October, when the Soviet Communist party called its all-important congress.

The ideas behind that congress appear to have been those of the cautious Georgi Malenkov, now Stalin's successor as prime minister. The words attributed to Stalin then reversed Stalin's doctrines in a number of outstanding instances, leaving the impression that the much-touted "Economic Problems of Socialism in the U.S.S.R." which came out under Stalin's name just before the party congress, was written or dictated by Malenkov.

WHY A TRUCE?

Why a truce in Korea?

In "Economic Problems of Socialism" this view is attributed to Stalin: In the United States, the contest for maximum profits leads to militarization of the economy.

If the U.S. economy depends upon militarism and thus upon continuing world conflict, then Korea by that premise is a prop to the American economy.

The same treatise advanced the view that world communism has shrunk the world market available to the capitalist countries, thus stirring up frictions among the capitalist countries in the contest for the remaining markets. However, said the treatise, the U.S. capitalists were "saved" by the outbreak of Korean hostilities.

The Soviet Union's leaders already have manufactured and have at hand other enemies to frighten the populace. They may consider themselves strong enough internally to do without the Korean conflict, and to take the gamble.

Americans want a truce in Korea. If it comes about, however, it will be because the Kremlin wants it too, for its own purposes. In such circumstances, the West and particularly the United States, would have to keep its guard up.

Cobourg Ordered To Stop Dumping Sewage Into Creek

COBOURG — (ENS) — Town council instructed the clerk to get a revised price on hooking up the west end sewage system, now draining into the Factory Creek, to the sewage disposal plant after hearing a letter from Dr. Barry of the department of health.

The department informed the council that dumping raw sewage into the creek had to stop. New housing sub-divisions in the west end are making such a step imperative, Dr. Barry told the council.

Major Jack Burnet said when the sewage disposal plant was built it was made large enough for future needs and this included hooking it up with the west-end sewage system. The price some some years ago was around $79,000 but it is expected it will be considerably more now. Financing it will not pose a particular problem, it is pointed out, because new housing going up will mean more taxes plus the regular sewage charge which each householder pays.

NEED NEW ROOF

Councillor Lilian Richards, who is chairman of the town hall committee, advised council that a recent check of the town hall showed that it leaked badly and a new roof could not be delayed any longer. She estimated the cost at around $4,000. The committee was instructed to look into it and report back with tenders.

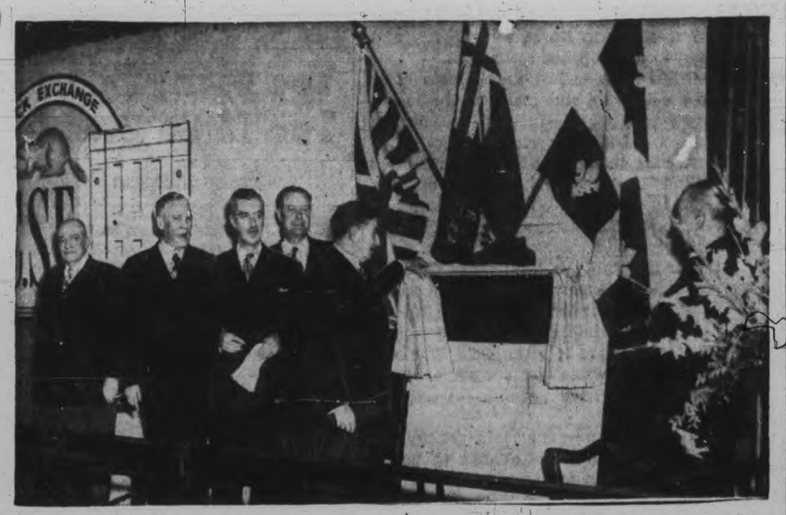
Mrs. Dorothy Barr advised the council she was getting tried waiting for action in regard to removal of a large tree on her Division street property. Council admitted the need of getting rid of the tree but the mayor observed that it was too big a job for the town streets department to handle and the tree removal firm would not be able to come back here until fall, at which time the tree could be cut down.

A request from Alnwick township council for an agreement which would provide them with fire protection by the Cobourg fire department was referred to the fire, water and light committee.

Council devoted considerable discussion to the Sidbrook housing development at the east end of the town. The promoters wanted the plan amended so that the south end of the street would be closed. This end is at the lake and the noisy night parties at the beach which were typical of other streets ending at the waterfront, were something to be avoided and it was felt that making it a dead-end street would serve that purpose.

APPROVE PLAN

Council agreed with the request of the subdivision promoters but Councillor Otto Curtis did not favour the fact that the plan called for only one street crossing the long north to south street. Councillor Curtis declared that there was only one cross street in the 1400 foot thoroughfare and there should be more. Gordon Dunlop, representing the housing scheme, said that the promoter would agree to providing for another cross street although it would mean shifting some of the lots around. On motion council approved the plan as amended to include closing the south end of the street and to provide another cross street.



The streets department was given authority to add another storm sewer at Park Street to relieve the spring flooding in that area.

PLANNING BOARD

Council passed a resolution to bring in a bylaw to establish a planning board which would regulate the types of houses which could be erected in the various residential ones. Until the board was established no more buildings could be set up which were converted from houses purchased and brought in, such as wartime type dwellings.

Deputy-Reeve C. Johnston commented that such a move would not be fair to the working man.

Councillor Curtis replied that the bylaw would not create a hardship, but would provide areas where the cheaper type of house could be built instead of permitting a cheap house going up alongside a costly one.

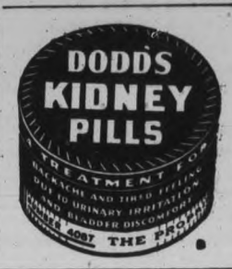
TORONTO (CP)—Two Holstein bulls were sold Tuesday to buyers in the Argentine and United States for $9,000 each.

The two were part of an auction of 64 head of cattle owned by Stephen B. Roman of King, about 10 miles north of here. The sale brought $50,235 for an average of $782 per head, the highest average for a dispersal sale since 1950.



The $9,000 bulls, Houckholme Re-Echo Champion and Rockwood Rag Apple Revelation (XX), went to W. F. Young of Titusville, Pa., and Henry Martin of Buenos Aires.

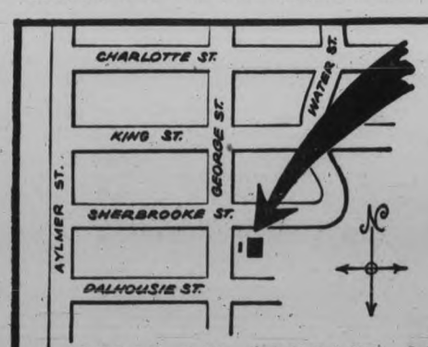
Narcotics Racket

NEW YORK (AP)—A snappily-dressed young man was accused by detectives Tuesday night of wholesaling narcotics by leaving the drugs in dime subway lockers and then peddling the locker keys for $500 each. Police said the man identified as Joseph Durso, 25, netted about $30,000 a week. Durso was charged with possessing and selling heroin.

NEW STATION MANAGER GUARANTEES HIS SERVICE TO MOTORISTS



WES EDWARDS says: "Drive around and get acquainted. My staff and I will welcome you with the kind of service you'll really appreciate . . . fast, friendly, and efficient."

"I give a written guarantee with every Shellubrication," said Mr. Wes Edwards, new manager of the Shell Service Station at George and Sherbrooke Streets, Peterborough, in a recent interview.

Mr. Edwards revealed that this guarantee is given under Shell's exclusive Shellubrication programme....the most comprehensive method of lubrication based on specification charts of every popular make of car and truck, including 25 different English models.

"And we do more than just lubricate," went on Mr. Edwards. "A systematic check-up during Shellubrication reveals dangerous mechanical faults which are briught to your attention. This helps protect you and your car against costly breakdowns or accidents! Mr. Edwards also sells "Activated" Shell Premium — the most powerful gasoline your car can use — and Shell X-100 Motor Oil that counteracts acid action, the cause of up to 90% of engine wear.

CONVENIENTLY LOCATED . . .

at the corner of George and Sherbrooke Sts., Wes Edwards' Shell Service Station is ready to do a big service job for motorists in Peterborough.

Legal Indignation

Elsewhere on this page we publish a Letter from the Peterborough Law Association in which we are rebuked for an editorial dealing with criticism of the Unsatisfied Judgement Fund which was made by W. M. Nickle, member of the Legislature for Kingston and himself an able lawyer. We have previously published four long letters from lawyers in which this matter has been discussed, and in which we have been taken to task with the full thunder of forensic wrath. We feel that the time has come for some mild reply.

* * *

In the first place we must point out that it was not The Examiner, but Mr. Nickle, who opened this attack on a section of the legal profession. His speech was warmly commended by the Premier, Mr. Frost, who is himself a lawyer, and it had the tacit approval of the Attorney-General. It was quickly followed by changes in legislation. A reply was made to Mr. Nickle by the Law Society of Upper Canada, and for the information of our readers we print it on this page today; if it is intended as a full reply, it leaves much to be desired; for instance, it deals with only one of four specific cases which were mentioned by Mr. Nickle. If Mr. Nickle was so wildly wrong, why did no lawyer in the Legislature tell him so? Mr. Nickle is himself a lawyer, and has been described as brilliant upon more than one occasion; he is the son of a former Attorney-General of Ontario; a general contradiction is not enough to confute what he has said. He appears to be the last man to make an irresponsibly malignant attack upon his own profession.

* * *

The Law Association discloses, apparently in the belief that it will make the Examiner appear contemptible in the eyes of its readers, that a member of our staff did not accept an invitation to appear at one of its meetings. We were not aware that such an invitation had been seriously extended. The management of the Examiner, as every lawyer knows, must accept responsibility for every word we print, and it is to the management that such invitations should be sent. We cannot be expected to require our staff members to appear before drumhead courts organized by professional associations who feel themselves aggrieved against the newspaper.

* * *

It is the last paragraph of the letter which particularly commands our attention. Cases involving the Unsatisfied Judgements Fund have been rare in Peterborough; our editorial made no reference whatever to the lawyers of this district, but only to those lawyers under fire from Mr. Nickle. Surely, then, the local legal indignation has been excessive? Surely the Peterborough Law Association is quick to cry "Libel!" when all its members are white as driven snow? Our comment was headed "Greedy Lawyers": as the local Law Association has amply and eloquently proved that it does not contain one single greedy member should it not be happy in the consciousness of virtue, and not indignant, as though Mr. Nickle's shafts had found a tender spot? We are, of course, a pack of unprincipled journalists and our views on matters of honour are probably of little value, but we can never recall hearing a group of men shout so loudly when they have not been hit.

Peace?

Mr. Malenkov may have meant peace when he talked of peace in his two speeches since he became Russian premier. One reason for believing that the intention lies behind the words is that he addressed them to the Western Governments, not to the Western peoples over the heads of their governments. There is thus a great difference between Malenkov's statements and the Russian-sponsored "peace campaign" which has been going on for four years.

Peace is not made by peoples. It is negotiated between their governments. It is not made by "peace-loving masses" of the West turning against their "warmongering Governments". It is made in the way the Russian Premier suggested: by go..ents getting down to the problems and facts which divide them. This is the genuine approach.

Another reason for believing that Mr. Malenkov may be pursuing a new policy, really leading to peace, is the offer of Premier Chou En-lai of China. The settlement of the Korean prisoner-of-war issue which he proposed was this: to turn over to a neutral country until their fate was settled all prisoners of war who did not want to be repatriated. This was an important proposal and could bring an armistice in Korea very shortly and lead to a full peace settlement.

What relation has the Chinese offer to the Russian statements? We do not know whether Malenkov's attitude has influenced Mao, or whether Mao influenced Malenkov. It may be that the Red China leader wants to call off the Korean war, has so told Russia, and Russia in the interests of presenting a solid front is cooing in advance. Another possibility is this: faced by demonstrated Western strength in Korea and a mounting Western front in Europe, both Russia and China may have decided that they have lost the Cold War and should tread quietly for a while. Thus both would have parallel interests in peace.

It is by no means certain yet that an armistice will be negotiated in Korea or that Russia is as even-tempered as Malenkov's speeches indicate. Other Russians have been making speeches, too. Mr. Gromyko was on the old line at the U.N. Assembly: that the Western masses look to the Kremlin for support, not to their Governments, in their striving for peace. Mr. Molotov's overtones, too, have been different from those of the new Premier. Does Malenkov mean what he says? Or is there now a division of opinion on foreign policy at the Kremlin? Or perhaps Gromyko and Molotov spoke before the new party line was drawn.

Sebastian Haffner, a foremost analyst of European politics and diplomacy, makes this careful assessment. His despatch to the Examiner was written before the Chinese proposal was made: "If we then, tentatively at least, accept that Mr. Malenkov may want to make a genuine approach to peace (perhaps against the wishes of some important colleagues of his, who would profit from any clear setback to his new policy), what follows? Certainly not that we should rush into a new ill-prepared Big-Three meeting a la Yalta or Potsdam, which might end either with a disastrous breakdown or with an even more disastrous misunderstanding. It is quite utopian to believe that one could move in one jump from the present world-wide cold war to a world-wide settlement of all controversial questions. And a "Five-Power Peace Pact" without such a settlement, as constantly clamoured for by the Communists, would be a meaningless sham and a booby trap for the unwary. The right approach to a detente is to tackle the outstanding questions one by one, proceeding from the smaller to the bigger ones, and from the relatively easy and straightforward to the complex and difficult."

Through The Air

Ten years ago people who took a plane to go anywhere were considered adventurous. Ten years ago no passenger planes flew from Canada across the Atlantic, although T.C.A. was about to operate a service from Montreal to Prestwick, Scotland, for the Government. This was carry mail to troops.

Last year T.C.A. flew 28,600,919 aircraft miles, carried 1,132,518 passengers, flew 4,843,052 mail ton miles and more than five million aircargo ton miles, over continents and seas. By the end of 1952 Trans-Canada Air Lines was operating 9,916 miles of domestic routes and an overseas route pattern of 8,999 miles, between fifty cities in Canada, the U.S., Britain, France, Germany, Bermuda and the Caribbean. If Canadians have not lost the power of amazement, surely here is a record to astonish, if they think back only eight or ten years.

The size of T.C.A. operations is indicated by their operating revenue of fifty-five million dollars last year. Income after expenses but before taxes was two million dollars. Taxes took $1,200,000, leaving a net income of $807,879. Canadian taxpayers—they are the owners of T.C.A.—will find this financial state satisfactory, especially when they remember the company's commital to heavy expenditures for new equipment last year and in the coming eighteen months.

Among the new planes ordered are fifteen Vickers Viscounts for use on domestic runs. One of these new British turbo-prop passenger planes flew on March 19th from Zurich, Switzerland to London, a distance of 490 miles, in 107 minutes—cutting nearly an hour off piston-engine time. It is an augury of even speedier (and, incidentally, much less noisy) plane travel which T.C.A. is going to make possible between Canadian cities.

We read of a New York doctor who speaks nine languages. Of course a doctor has to familiarize himself with a variety of tongues.

The Edmonton Journal pugnaciously remarks: "Let the critics say what they will, Canada is undoubtedly developing a literature of her own." But may we point out that the critics have been saying precisely that for a quarter of a century?

WORLD ECONOMIC REPORT

Too Many Bikes Too Little Bread

By SUSAN STRANGE

A WORLD frantically intent on industrialising; a world in danger of producing too many bicycles and too little bread; a world divided year by year by two ever-widening gaps—a political one between Communist states and the rest, and an economic one between rich countries and poor; a world managing to avoid—so far—the catastrophe of economic depression; a world pitifully unable to fit together the wealth of the United States with the investment opportunities in the under-developed continents.

* * *

THIS IS the confused picture painstakingly drawn by the United Nations' World Economic Report for 1953, published Monday. The report, which is a mine of facts on many topics, from the depression in Lancashire's cotton mills to the market for woodpulp, is the fifth to be issued by the United Nations. Compared with its predecessors, it tends to take a rather longer view of the world economic developments and to stand back a little in order to see the events of 1951 and 1952 as part of a recognisable post-war trend.

* * *

THUS, the report notes that industrial production, which in 1946 barely exceeded the pre-war volume in the world as a whole, has now reached a level which on the average for all countries is seventy-five per cent. or more higher than in 1937. By contrast, per capita production of food is still less than before the war, especially in Asia. For, although food output has risen on average by ten per cent., world population has risen about fifteen per cent.

* * *

ALTHOUGH most of the world's industry is concentrated in Europe and North, America, the rates of expansion at present is most rapid in the developing countries, particularly in the communist world, where a very high proportion of national income is devoted to capital investment. According to their statistics, industrial production rose between 1951 and 1952 by eleven per cent. in the Soviet Union and by twenty-four per cent. in Hungary. Communist China reported an increase of thirty-eight per cent. in 1951 over 1950, and of forty-seven per cent. in 1952.

* * *

THESE FIGURES (quoted with the barest hint that they are to be taken with a small pinch of salt) show a striking contrast with the two or three per cent. rates of increase in industrial output recorded in Western Europe.

(Percentages, when used comparatively, are apt to be rather misleading, however. A new oil refinery added to one existing one is an increase of one hundred per cent. Two similar refineries added to ten existing ones is an increase of only twenty per cent.)

* * *

WORLD TRADE, according to the report, is now one-third greater in quantity than it was in 1937, in spite of the fact that it is still cramped and distorted by controls and restrictions. More and more, however, the two worlds—Communist and non-Communist—are expanding trade within themselves while allowing East-West trade to shrink. It is a striking fact, noted by the report, that before the war the East European countries transacted ninety per cent. of their trade with the rest of the world and only ten per cent. with each other. By 1951, trade between themselves accounted for two-thirds of the total.

The same development has taken place in China's foreign trade. In 1937, China's trade with the countries now under Communist rule accounted for less than one per cent. of her total foreign trade. By 1951, the proportion had risen to sixty-one per cent., and the total quantity of China's foreign trade had itself increased by about sixty per cent.

* * *

IN INTRODUCING their factual survey of world economic developments, the United Nations' economists observe three major economic problems which still dominate the scene and qualify, to some extent, the physical progress in economic development achieved since the end of the war:-

(1) Can a Slump be avoided?
(2) Can the Dollar Gap be closed?
(3) Can the poor countries ever catch up with the rich ones?

* * *

TO THE FIRST question, the report answers rather doubtfully. Thus far, the free world has been fortunate in avoiding mass unemployment. But in the future, even if the governments of the industrialised countries can keep internal demand high and steady, this will not stop fluctuations in the volume of stock-pile buying from rocking the international trade boat. In the opinion of the United Nations, "the existing supply of gold and foreign exchange in the hands of governments," even when supplemented by international institutions, "is insufficient to enable them to meet disturbances of the size of those which have occurred in recent years without recourse to import restrictions or deflation."

* * *

ON THE SECOND question, the report is equally pessimistic. After surveying the methods by which the United States might allow the rest of the free world to earn more dollars, it concludes: "Whatever expansion may be achieved in the supply of dollars is unlikely to dispense with the need for adjustments in the rest of the world to economise the demand for imports from the dollar area."

* * *

THE third question, according to the report is the crucial one. If, economic development of the under-developed countries can be pushed ahead fast enough, this in itself will help to find answers to the first two questions and will contribute both to economic stability and to a closing of the dollar gap. The report, however, does not pretend that economic development is purely a matter of how much the industrialised countries like Britain and America can invest overseas. For "while technical assistance .. can contribute to the easing of this problem, the main burden of its solution rests with the under-developed countries themselves, especially since questions of the pattern of social organisation and land tenure are frequently involved."

* * *

FINALLY, the report admits to two past errors of judgement by international economists. One was that Western rearmament would interfere with the supply of capital goods and machinery to under-developed countries. This fear has proved groundless. Equally unfounded has been the belief that rearmament in the West would mean less butter. In fact, the report notes, the total output of the North American and West European countries increased between 1950 and 1952 by more than the increase in arms production— "and hence real consumption and real wages could rise notwithstanding the substantial increase in resources devoted to arms production."

Malenkov Goes West

The Law Society and Mr. Nickle

(Statement issued by C. F. H. Carson, Q.C., Treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada in reply to the statements made by W. M. Nickle, Q.C., in the Ontario Legislature on March 18.)

THE Unsatisfied Judgement Fund provisions of the Highway Traffic Act require that every action in which a claim is to be made against the Fund, proceed to trial and judgement. The Act also provides that every person against whom a claim might be made must be joined as a party to the action if the plaintiff is to be entitled to subsequently ask payment from the Fund.

No settlement can be made out of court no matter how clear-cut the liability appears to be. In addition, in many cases persons must be added as defendants who would normally not be sued. The result of the above is that trials last longer and costs are necessarily increased. In fact many cases go to trial which, if an Insurance Company was concerned, rather than the Fund, would be settled before trial.

Lawyers engaged in such trials can recover only the costs awarded by the Trial Judge, the amount of which is later fixed by the Taxing Officer in accordance with the prescribed tariff. This officer is appointed by the government of the Province of Ontario and is accountable only to it. The Law Society of Upper Canada has no control whatever over the costs awarded by the Trial Judge or the amount fixed by the Taxing Officer.

Where the action has been defended by the Attorney-General's Department representing the Fund, his Department is given notice of the taxation and is entitled to make its submission as to the amount of costs which should be awarded.

The lawyer gets no costs except those awarded him by the Judge and the Taxing Officer.

Since the present provisions of the Act were passed in 1951, the Discipline Committee of the Law Society has had only one complaint as to costs charged by a solicitor under it. The matter was promptly considered by the Discipline Committee and the solicitor claimed that he was entitled to the full cost retained by him under his interpretation of the Act. As the meaning of the Act was a matter for decision by the Courts, the Attorney General's Department was so advised. There are over 3500 lawyers practising in Ontario and only one complaint has been received.

If any complaint is made to the Discipline Committee that a lawyer is taking more fees than he is entitled to under the Act it will immediately be dealt with.

Contrary to Mr. Nickle's opinion, the majority of the practising lawyers in Ontario find that motor accident cases are often the most involved litigation in the courts today. This is borne out by the fact that they take up a very large part of the court's time.

Mr. Nickle referred to a case in which judgement was recovered for $56.95 and the costs awarded amounted to $999.31. This was a case in which there were two trials and two appeals and the costs awarded were determined finally by the Court of Appeal and the Taxing Officer.

In referring to the amount paid out of the Fund for lawyer's fees, Mr. Nickle did not say that such amount included the court costs, witness fees, transcripts of evidence and other disbursements which have to be made by the solicitor for the client.

Every lawyer is an officer of the Court and his fees are always subject to control by the court and not by the Law Society. The Law Society has no jurisdiction as to the amount of fees awarded in any action. The Law Society is charged with the duty of supervising the professional conduct of its members. This it has done and will always continue to do.

Letter To The Editor

WHOLE LEGAL PROFESSION BESMIRCHED

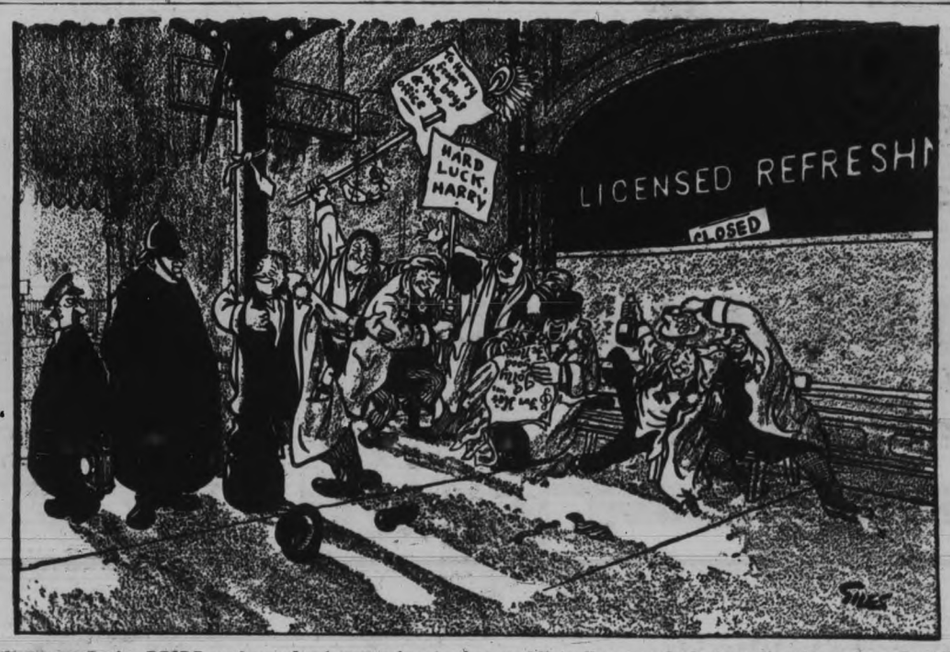
SIR: The Peterborough Law Association has met and considered the editorial contained in the issue of The Examiner of the 20th instant headed "Greedy Lawyers" and purporting to be based on a speech made by Mr. W. M. Nickle, Q. C., M. L. A. Mr. Cyril Carson, Q. C., Treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada, replied to Mr. Nickle's charges and a brief summary of this reply was contained on Page 2 of the same issue of your paper but was entirely ignored in your editorial. Since then a number of letters from individual members of the bar have appeared in the Examiner. These have shown how erroneous the statements contained in your editorial were. It is unnecessary for us to repeat.

This Association has always upheld, and will continue to uphold, the freedom of the press and its privilege to make fair editorial comment on matters of public interest even though the comment is against the legal profession itself. However, we feel that the privilege accorded the press also involves a strong moral obligation on its part to inform itself of the true facts pretaining to the subject especially where these facts could be obtained with no more trouble than picking up a telephone receiver. In all the experience of the members of our association there has never appeared in any newspaper a more scurrilous, unjustified, defamatory and vituperative attack on any group of indivjduals or profession than that which appeared in The Examiner. The whole legal profession was besmirched.

We would point out that your newspaper, being the only daily newspaper published in this city and district, enjoys a monopoly of one source of public communication. As a consequence it has great power and should realize that it has likewise a great responsibility. This the Examiner has failed to do.

We wish the public to know some facts that have not yet been disclosed and which we feel they should know. Following the publication of your editorial our association extended an invitation to your editorial writter to come to its meeting so that he could learn the true facts as the editorial he wrote plainly showed that, no matter what his academic qualifications may be, he was woefully ignorant of the subject about which he chose to write. He did not come to the meeting. Despite the fact that other newspapers have made editorial comment on the facts presented in defence of the legal profession to the Nickle charges and have admitted quite fairly that these charges were unwarranted as to the profession generally, the Examiner has remained silent although its editorial comment went far beyond the Nickle charges in abusive epithets and comments. The public should also know that it is possible in law to libel a whole profession with impunity. There is no legal redress obtainable whereas if the same remarks were made about individual members of the profession the Examiner could be held accountable for libel. When one wrongs others by his statements in ordinary society we expect, when these statements are proven to be incorrect, he will apologize or at least retract the unwarranted statements. The Examiner has not seen fit to do so. We are not asking for an apology or even a retraction. If the Examiner is so lacking in its own sense of journalistic decency that it has already failed to retract the abuse it has heaped on what we believe is an honourable profession then we are content to let the public judge between us.

One other fact the public should know that has not appeared in any of the letters written and that is that while there are 26 practicing lawyers in the City of Peterborough and while the Unsatisfied Judgement Fund came into existence six years ago (1947) there have only been 9 cases in which clients represented by Peterborough lawyers (and the lawyers themselves) have obtained any payment from the fund. This should make clear to the public that the Unsatisfied Judgement Fund in so far as this district is concerned has neither been mulcted nor milked by the citizens or lawyers of this district. It has been a dismal failure because of the unnecessary 'red tape' that is required to obtain payment from it.



If any persons have been guilty of greed in repect to the fund it is certain that neither the lawyers nor the citizens of Peterborough have been the offenders.

Your truly,
THE PETERBOROUGH LAW ASSOCIATION,
W. C. GRANT, President.
J. C. N. CURRELLY, Secretary.

Built In Barn, Cruiser Waits Canal Flooding

By H. L. JONES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Spring sunshine nowadays warms the shapely curves of a sleek, 38-foot home-made cabin cruiser built in a barn more than a mile from water.

The work of one man and costing an estimated $10,000, the cruiser boasts almost every modern nautical device. She now is on a muddy lakebed in the heart of Ottawa, awaiting flooding of the 120-year-old Rideau canal to start her trial run.

Passersby linger to admire her trim lines. Few know the story behind her birth. It goes back four years and represents the sudden determination of a man to create something.

Until then Len Greene, tall and husky 50-odd-year-old Ottawa-born civil servant, wasn't much interested in building anything. A bachelor, he hadn't felt the call of the sea or ships. Then came the urge.

BARN FOR WORKSHOP

He decided to build a boat, something substantial.

He assembled a workshop in a dilapidated barn on the outskirts of Ottawa.

By day he worked at his job in the exhibition branch of the trade department; by night on the boat. He spent an estimated 6,000 hours laying the keel, ribbing, planking and decking, and hammering home thousands of copper-bronze nails. He doesn't see anything unusual in the feat.

"I read a couple of books," he said in an interview. "It was no more difficult than building a couple of houses. Anyone who can learn to handle a few tools and isn't scared of hard work can build a boat."

He hasn't decided on the name but, being a sentimental fellow, he thinks he'll christen the white-and-blue cruiser Mary Bird, his mother's maiden name.

Boat lovers who have inspected the white hull—from clipper stem to twin-screw gasoline engines—marvel.

"She's sweet," they say.

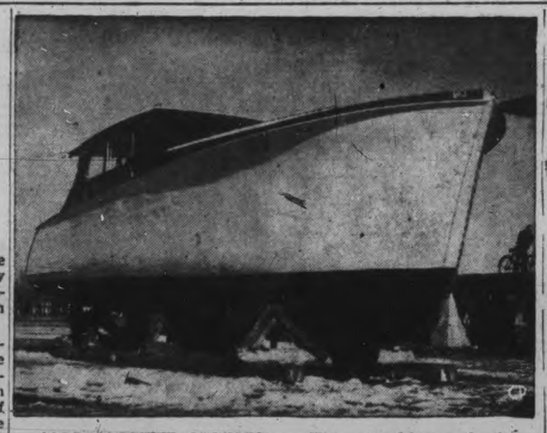
IN DOW'S LAKE

The cruiser now is in drained Dow's lake, part of the Rideau canal system, bordering the capital's scenic driveway. Not far away is the federal experimental farm. About May 1 the canal will be flooded.

"I hope she floats," said Mr. Greene with a grin.

This is no dream boat, for the builder is a practical man. And he approached the job in 1948 with method and far-sightedness. There were many problems but the toughest were selecting a building site and obtaining materials and fittings.

He rented a barn from a farmer. A war-surplus generator fed the electric lights necessary for night work. He got a power sander, saws, drills, built a steam box to bend the ship's ribs and obtained a set of plans from a Far Rockaway, N.Y., designer.



He confided in few persons to keep interruptions to a minimum. Occasionally friends dropped around to offer advice and encouragement.

The boat this month was ready for launching. The builder called in the haulers. The end of the barn was knocked out and the cruiser was pulled on her cradle by winches aboard a big trailer-truck. She was carried about three miles to the lakebed. There was no trouble.

The cruiser will sleep six and has the most modern fittings. There is a plastic hatch on the foredeck. She has a fine galley, foam-rubber sleeping bunks, remote control power devices and an after-hatch set in foam rubber that can be lifted to reach the steering mechanism and gasoline and water tanks.

Until retirement eight or nine years hence Mr. Greene plans to cruise the Rideau lakes and the Ottawa and St. Lawrence rivers.

After that, who knows? Perhaps a trip to Florida waters for a retirement most people can only dream about.

HOBBY-BUILT CRUISER — This trim blue and white 38-foot cabin cruiser represents 6,000 hours of labor by Len Greene, Ottawa civil servant who built it by hand. Until four years ago he hadn't constructed anything in his life and then got an urge to build a boat. Now waiting spring waters in drained Dow's Lake, near Ottawa, Greene plans to cruise the boat down the Ottawa and St. Lawrence rivers.

Some People Still Slaves Three-Year Survey Shows

By A.I. GOLDBERG

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—A three-year survey of the United Nations shows that actual crude slavery still exists in some sections of the world, but information is incomplete and the solution is not easy.

UN Secretary-General Trygve Lie summed up the situation in a report calling on the UN economic and social council to study further steps to meet the slavery problem when it meets here March 31.

In Lie's report, based on the work of a special committee which has been studying the slavery problem since 1950, Lie told the council no satisfactory definition of slavery ever has been reached.

The world has been trying to control slavery under an international treaty framed by the League of Nations in 1926. This defines slavery as "the status or condition of a person over whom any or all of the powers attaching to the right of ownership are exercised."

The special committee reported that other forms of servitude include debt bondage, serfdom or peonage on farms, contracting out persons for hire, marriage customs where the woman is deprived of free human rights, and child transfers for payment or other conditions which exploit the child.

The special committee divided up the world for the survey, each making an intensive study of his area. It got the UN to send questionnaires to all countries to get further data.

NO ANSWERS

Nine UN members and seven non-members did not answer requests for governmental information. Lie listed them as Cuba, Haiti, Liberia, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Poland, Saudi Arabia, the Ukraine and Yemen, all UN members; and Albania, Andorra, the sultanate of Muscat and Oman, Portugal, Romania, San Marino and Spain.

The Ukraine answered only by calling attention to a Soviet Union reply that "the problem of slavery . . . does not arise in the Soviet Union."

The slave labor inquiry did not apply to the question of forced labor and labor camps. That was taken up by another assembly committee after charges that millions of subjected peoples were used as slave labor by the Soviet Union.

Both Lie and the special committee agreed that some government information received differed sharply from information gathered from private sources.

Lie told the economic and social council that it appeared further study is necessary to find out just how much and what kind of servitude still exists, before measures to stamp it out could be considered.

Says U.S. Radio Can't Hurt CanadianCulture

OTTAWA (CP)—Senator Thomas Reid (L—British Columbia) said Tuesday statements that a Canadian culture might be endangered by the effect of United States radio and television are "a lot of balderdash."

Senator Reid, speaking in the Senate during a debate on the tourist industry, said such statements have been made by the CBC and in the report of the Massey commission on arts, letters and sciences.

"It's all a lot of balderdash for the CBC to think we will be swallowed up if we allow United States radio and television programs to come into Canada."

He said he feels "so wrathy about the CBC statements that I want to go on record as being absolutely opposed to them because they are contrary to facts."

Magistrate Criticizes Police Second Time In Two Weeks

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Magistrade A. W. MacMillan Tucsday criticized for the second time in two weeks methods used by policemen getting evidence against persons charged with liquor violations.

After sentencing Anthony Rainone, 32, and Donald Brown, 20, to three and two months respectively for unlawfully selling liquor, Magistrate MacMillan said he was "a little skeptical" of the methods adopted by police in this case. It looked as if police were "endeavoring to manufacture evidence," he said.

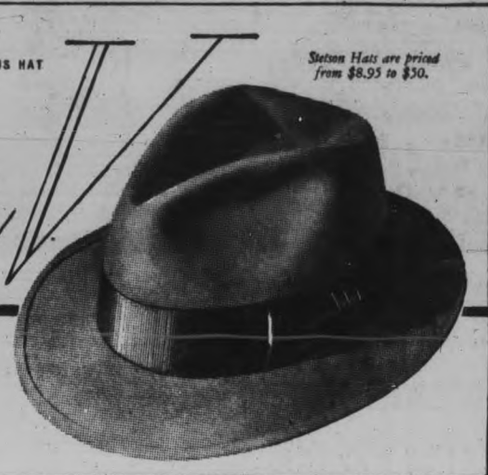
Police constable Harold Revait identified a voice on a telephone as that of Rainone's when a fellow officer, constable Gordon Prior phoned Rainone's residence to make plans to buy a bottle of liquor.

AGREED TO DELIVER LIQUOR

The officer gave an assumed name and said he was told to call there by a friend of Rainone's. During the conversation the voice, identified as that of Rainone, agreed to deliver the liquor to the rear entrance of an address given by the police officer. Police later arrested Donald Brown when he arrived at the address with the liquor.

Asked how he could be sure the voice was that of Rainone, constable Revait said he had known Rainone for several years and had "talked to him on many occasions."

Rainone's brother, Dominic, testified it was he who took the telephone call because his brother was not there. He said he saw the chance to make "a fast buck" and agreed to deliver the bottle of liquor. He said he met Brown and gave him the liquor to deliver.



Two weeks ago magistrate MacMillan said in sentencing Cecil Smith to two months on a similar charge that he did not think "there is anything more despicable than officers inveigling people to break the law."

Dukes Capture TVL Game From The C's

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS)—In a rough game, marred by no less than 26 penalties, Wellington Dukes trounced Campbellford 11-5 in Belleville last night to take the third game of the best-of-seven TVL hockey finals. Campbellford still leads the series 2-1, the fourth being on Quinte ice this Friday night.

A crowd of 1,089 fans viewed the wide-open, scrappy game in which play at times just about got away from Referess McFall and Scarrow of Trenton. The last five minutes of the tilt saw the teams playing four a side, following a free-for-all between a bunch of players from either team. Wellington drew 15 of the penalties.

DUKES GOOD

The Dukes played good hockey throughout and Campbellford only clicked up to form at times. Wellington racked up a 5-0 lead in the first frame, Leo Goyer performing the hat trick for three, with Scott and York counting. Hatfield aided on two, single assists going to Johnston, Twigg, Hurst and Cousins.

The middle heat was a 4-4 affair. Goals for Wellington were notched by Scott, Hurst, Goyer and Pettinell, as Johnston aided on two, and Hatfield and Scott one each. For Campbellford, Free clicked for a brace of markers, and Simpson and Payne got one apiece. Wilkes, Blake and Free each drew an assist.

Doug Free got the C's only tally in the third from Herrington. The Dukes dented the twine twice more in this chapter, York and Hatfield being the marksmen, with an assist apiece marked for Twigg, York, Scott and Hatfield.

Brooklyn Dodgers Blow Game 4-2 Bow To Arch Enemies Yankees

By BEN PHLEGAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

Spring and fall New York Yankees continue to bring fear to the hearts of Brooklyn Dodgers.

No matter how well the Dodgers are going against the rest of the opposition, they grind to a stop when they run up against the Yankees.

It's happened in the world series every time the two clubs have met and it happened again in the five-game Florida spring series that wound up Tuesday in St. Petersburg.

Brooklyn won the first game of the series played two weeks ago, then dropped the next two. When the series resumed Sunday Brooklyn won the fourth game on the sterling pitching of Montreal rookie Johnny Podres, but in the deciding contest, with their ace Carl Erskine on the mound, the Bums blew it 4-2.

POUND ERSKINE

The world champions pounded Erskine for six hits in five innings and all four runs, including a homer by Yogi Berra. Ewell Blackwell threw with his old time zip as he mowed down the Dodgers.

Murry Dickson of the Pirates warmed up for his opening day assignment by going nine innings Tuesday against the Pirates' "B" squad and winning 7-4.

Bob Rush of Chicago Cubs came within one putout of a nine-inning job against St. Louis Browns but he was lifted when the Browns rallied for three runs. The Cubs won anyway 5-3.

Detroit and Cleveland had another field day in the run-making department. The Tigers exploded for seven runs in the seventh inning against Philadelphia Athletics and won 13-7. The Indians scored in double figures for the third straight day against ineffective New York Giant pitching, winning 11-5.

Mohawks Win Hockey Playoffs

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP)—Cincinnati's Mohawks Tuesday night drove home four goals in the last period to sweep their International Hockey League final playoff with Grand Rapids Rockets 8-4.

The four straight victories in the best-of-seven series gave the Mohawks a record of eight consecutive playoff wins. The Mohawks previously won four in a row from Toledo after dropping the opener of the semi-finals.

Cincinnati now plays Sault Ste. Marie Indians of the Northern Ontario Senior Hockey League in a best-of-seven semi-final round for the United States amateur hockey championship. The winner will meet the Eastern League champion. The Cincinnati-Sault series will be played at Sault Ste. Marie.

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

The decision of the senior baseball club here to carry on this season will be generally applauded. The proposed interlocking schedule with the Toronto Viaduct League will mean 16 home games at Riverside for the Petes and should present a lot of new faces for the fans. Playing manager Joe Stewart has enough local talent to field a contending club, such players being available as Bill Edger, Phil Clancy, Lefty Bill Dadson, Gunner Whitehill, Al Menzies, Joe Stewart, Freddy Garvey, Cack Pagett, Bill Huntley, Joe Lowrey, Arn Dugan, Bryon Young and some ex-juniors. This April Fool's Day announcement, alas, is just that— April Fool!

* * * * * *

Sorry, ball fans, to disappoint you that way and pull the old April Fool joke, but that day always does something to our veracity. No, we'll have no senior ball here this year. That's why we wanted to mention those good senior diamondeers once more ere they hang up their spikes after winning the COBL title last year. Also their 1952 executive of Max Swanston, Dr. Cliff McKee, Jack McNamara, Lloyd Grose, Tommy Holyman, the late Bill Ovens, Cy Whatley, Dr. Ralph Clark, Hugh Campbell, Cliff Cadd, Clare Collins and Alex Sinclair. Probably a windup executive meeting will be held to officially fold up the club for this year. But senior ball will return some other year, no doubt.

* * * * * *

But There'll Be Ball

Meantime, diamond followers should see some good baseball in the park by the river this summer. The Young Petes are entered in the strong intermediate Lakeshore League with such teams in as Lindsay, Port Hope, Cobourg, Colborne, Bowmanville, Whitby and one or two from Oshawa. Just a step below senior "A" calibre, these clubs carry a number of senior players in their lineups. Local executive comprises: President, Dr. Cliff McKee; vice-prexies, Ray Tanner and D. A. McGillis; secretary, Ray Pammett; treasurer, John Foster; committee, Mrs. Edith Frizzelle, Alex Sinclair and Joe Kearns, Manager is Shockey Mein, and the coach is Howie Dalton. Hugh Campbell is honorary president. Peterborough will field a strong squad in this lakeshore circuit.

* * * * * *

Five young hockeyists from here will do their stuff Saturday, Sunday and Monday in Detroit's Olympia Stadium as they attend the Wings' tryout school for youngsters About 70 lads from all parts of the province have been invited to take in this three-day camp where they'll be given a good look by Jack Adams, Tommy Ivan and Johnny Mitchell of the Red Wings, and by Coach Jim Skinner of the Windsor Spitfires, of the Detroit organization. Adams will hold three such schools this year, one going in Brandon, Manitoba, on April 6, and the other in Winnipeg late in August. Possibly also another in Windsor or Detroit comes September. That's why the Wings keep winning NHL titles— they don't permit their farm system to go to seed.

Pulling Wings Apart

Our Wings were badly clawed by Bruins in Boston last night and the outlook is rather grim for the champs as the scene shifts to Detroit on the morrow. The battling Bostons are on the verge of pulling the puck upset of the season, and they deserve to sweep this series on their showing in the last three games. One more win and they're in the finals. It was underdogs night in Chicago, too, as the Hawks took Canadiens fairly handily to sew up their set at two each, next one being Thursday in Montreal. The Chi announcer had quite a time with some of Canadiens' names, tabbing St. Laurent as Saint Lawrence, for instance. This scribe's place is a house divided in hockey playoffs, as he pulls for Wings, the missus for Canadiens, and the boy has sulked since Leafs lost out.

* * * * * *

Secretary Chuck Rowan of the OLA told Frank Patterson—local junior lacrosse sponsor— that there may be 11 junior squads in Ontario this summer. Likely entries are: Peterborough, Brampton, St. Catharines, Dundas, Mimico, Toronto Maitlands, Owen Sound, Orangeville, Fergus, Orillia and Long Branch, the latter playing at Oakville. Just how the teams will be grouped is not known yet, but they expect a meeting during the second week of April to iron things out and arrange for schedule, opening dates, and so forth. Doug Miller Jr. coaches the Peterborough pack this semester, and it won't be long till the boys are getting in their first practice licks. Ditto with the senior club.

Thorpe To Be Buried On College Grounds

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP)—The U.S. Army today granted permission for the body of Jim Thorpe, famed Indian athlete, to be buried here on the grounds of its war college—the former Indian school where Thorpe began his athletic career.

Col. Kenneth Anderson, on the staff of the war college, made the announcement at meeting to found an organization to bring Thorpe's body back to Carlisle, the scene of some of his greatest achievements. Thorpe died Saturday of a heart attack.

3-Goal Rally Gives Irish 5-3 Victory

BARRIE (CP)—A three-goal rally in the third period gave Toronto St. Michael's a 5-3 victory Tuesday night over Barrie Flyers in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A finals. The best-of-nine series is tied 1-1.

The third game will be played here Thursday.

The final goal came when Hap Emms had pulled Bill Harrington out of the net in an attempt to tie the score. Dick Duff shot into the open net.

Barrie took the lead at the 8:50 mark of the opening period when Bob White knocked in the puck off Chadwick's skate. Larry Thibeault took Tony Poeta's pass 40 seconds later to put the Flyers another goal ahead. Poeta came back from Martan to make it 3-0. In the dying minutes of the period, Dick Duff cleared from the corner and Art Clune beat Bill Harrington with a shot from 20 feet out.

NOTCH ANOTHER

St. Mikes notched another at 18:38 of the second when Dick Duff fed a pass to Jack Caffery, who beat Harrington cleanly. Coming out trailing 3-2 in the last period St. Mikes tied it up at 4:32 when Bill Lee shoved the rubber past Harrington. Dick Duff put the Majors ahead at the 12:23 mark while Thibeault was serving a penalty.

Only 12 penalties were called, seven of them to the Flyers.

Oilmen Get City Hoop Title Against The Marines As Penguins Tie "Y" Series

The Oilmen won the men's city basketball championship Wednesday night when they swept the final game 51-44 from Marines, winning the first game last week 83-60. Meanwhile in the YMCA house league, the Penguins tied their final series at one game each, defeating the Trojans 33-32 in five minutes' overtime. Oilmen had to overcome a first half lead by Marines before taking the title. Hugh Dibben and Gord Burns provided the winning points in the second half as the Oilmen rallied.

Warren Smith, Chum Gillespie and Jack Richardson paced Marines to a 39-36 half-time lead. Gord Burns, Doug Galvin, Doug MacPherson and Dibben kept the Oilmen within range.

Then in the second, Oilmen broke for their rally, feeding Dibben and Burns who accounted for 19 of the Oilmen's 25 in that half. Smith was the only effective Marine during the half, whipping in 11 points, but his was the only scoring strength.

Dibben was the game's high scorer with 17, closely followed by Marine's Smith with 16, Burns with 14 and Gillespie with 13.

A CLOSE FRAY

The Penguins-Trojans' house league final was by far the league's closest. It wasn't decided until the final minute of the five-minute overtime when Outram sank the winning point with seconds to go.

Playing with only four men, the Trojans relied upon foul shots to give them a 5-3 margin in the first quarter. Roininen with a basket and three foul shots, plus a basket by Noble gave the Trojans a 12-10 score at the half.

But the Penguins rallied in the third quarter to take the lead, 18-16, and from there the teams took turns taking the lead. Finally the regulation game ended at 28-all.

In the overtime, Noble put the Trojans two up only to have Thompson tie the game. Roininen put the Trojans up two points a second time on foul shots. The Penguins pressed hard and then, at the three-minute mark, Groves fouled out, leaving Trojans with only three players.

Hurrle and Noble attempted fould shots, Hurrle making his. Then Thompson was fouled by Roininen and the former PCVS star tied the game at 32-all. Outram gave Penguins the one-point winning margin on a foul shot with seconds to go.

Mostly on foul shots, Roininen led the scoring with 15 points, closely followed by Thompson.

Lineups:

First game:

Oilmen (51)—Dibben 17, Galvin 6, McPherson 10, Boorman 2, Burns 14, Ryan 2.

Marines (44)— Edger 4, Gillespie 13, Richardson 10, Frise 3, Smith 16.

Second game:

Penguins (33)— Hurrle 3, Ceresino 3, Gandy 4, Fowler 5, Thompson 12, Outram 3, Wyatt 2, O'Connor.

Trojans (32) — Roininen 15, Noble 8, Wood 9, Groves.

Wings Humbled As Bruins Romp To 6-2 Victory

By ED SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Boston Bruins are still playing David to Detroit's Goliath and Chicago Black Hawks are beginning to get into the act. For the third time in a row, Lynn Patrick's canny crew of opportunists made the mighty Red Wings look pitiful Tuesday night as they romped to a 6-2 victory and an imposing 3-1 edge in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final. At Chicago, the Hawks squared their series at two games each with Montreal Canadiens, who finished two notches above them in the National Hockey League standings, by whipping them 3-1 in a weird and wonderful set in which the team scoring the first goal has lost every game so far.

But the most awe-inspiring feature of last night's play was the apparent collapse of the tremendous Detroit scoring machine, almost odds-on Stanley Cup favorites before the playoffs opened.

SIT IN DAZE

An unaccustomed Boston crowd sat in a daze as the Bruins built up an almost unprecedented 5-0 lead before the game reached the half-way point, then reverted to their customary play-it-safe tactics to coast home.

For a brief spell, late in the second period and early in the third, the Wings showed a flash of the form that brought them the NHL title.

Metro Prystai, leading scorer of the playoffs so far, spearheaded the lightning assault as he scored one goal and set up a second for Alex Delvecchio in just over a minute.

But the Bruins went back to their man-for-man defensive style and even added their sixth goal on a breakaway.

Jack McIntyre, hero of Boston's overtime victory Tuesday night, fired two of the Bruin goals, as did winger Eddie Sandford. Milt Schmidt and Jerry Toppazzini were their other marksmen.

VIC LYNN HERO

For the Hawks the hero was Vic Lynn, a refugee from the minors who hadn't scored an NHL goal all year until he sank the Canadiens with a carom shot off defenceman Doug Macpherson's arm in the third period.

Lynn, whose nine years of professional hockey have included hitches with all six NHL clubs and five American Hockey League teams, hadn't scored a playoff goal in the big time since he was with Toronto Maple Leafs five years ago.

Bert Olmstead had given the Canadiens the lead in the first period and Bill Mosienko tied it up in the second. When the Canadiens pulled goalie Gerry McNeil for a sixth forward in the game's dying minutes, Jimmy McFadden added the final goal.

The fifth games in both series are scheduled for Thursday night, Boston playing the Canadiens in Montreal and Chicago moving to Detroit against the Wings.

Charles Takes On Layne Tonight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Former heavyweight champion Ezzard Charles, punching his way back into contention, clashes with free-swinging Rex Layne in a 10-round fight here tonight that may determine the top challenger for the title.

The nationally-televised bout will go on at 7 p.m. PST (10 p.m. EST). It will be judged on points. The California scoring system is 11 points to the round. An even round is 5½-5½. Two judges and a referee will officiate.

Charles has been established a 4-1 favorite in this third meeting between the two. Ezzard won an 11th round technical knockout over Layne in October, 1951. Rex took a close 10-round decision over Charles last August.

Since that defeat Charles has won six fights, four by TKO and two by decision. Layne's last bout was a split decision loss to Roland La Starza. The big Lewiston, Utah, walloper wants another crack at La Starza.

Charles has trained rigorously for this fight. He's 31 and realizes he must hurdle this obstacle or be relegated to the second division.

Bruins Not Overconfident After One Of Biggest Upsets

BOSTON (CP)—Boston Bruins were happy but far from overconfident Tuesday night after coming within one victory of fashioning one of the greatest upsets in National Hockey League Stanley Cup history.

The Bruins refused to get boisterous about their third straight verdict over the powerful Detroit Red Wings following a 7-0 walloping in the opener.

Coach Lynn Patrick, whose strategy of playing veteran Woody Dumart against scoring champion Gordie Howe and Joe Klukay against Ted Lindsay is a major factor in Boston's surprising showing, said:

HAVEN'T FORGOTTEN

"I just hope we can keep it up."

His attitude was like that of his players who recall only too vividly that the Wings thumped them 10 times, lost only two and tied twice in the regular season play. They remember that Detroit outscored them 62-19.

"I hate to say this," said Ed Sandford, "but we haven't won it yet."

Patrick was high in praise of his defencemen and goalie Sugar Jim Henry who turned back 38 shots to 26 for Terry Sawchuk.

There was nothing but a dull silence from the Detroit dressing room although the Red Wings' exit from the rink at the end of the game caused a bit of a furore.

A fan lunged at Tony Leswick who had been elbowing several of the Bruins late in the last period. Leswick shoved his stick out in front of him and he and the fan shoved, with the fan suffering a small cut inside his mouth. A dozen policemen broke it up.

JUNIOR HOCKEY HASSLE—A free-for-all interrupts the opening game of the best-of-seven series for the Western Canada junior hockey championship at Fort William between Fort William Canadiens and St. Boniface Canadiens. Fort William's Don McLeod (on his knees) wrestles Ab McDonald (on his back) of St. Boniface while referee Chick Little (right) looks on. Linesman Ike Morrison holds back a St. Boniface player. No. 19 is Pete Johnson of Fort William and No. 1 is Fort William goalie Lynn Davis. Fort William won the game 7-0.

Wolves Score First Win Over Kitchener

SUDBURY (CP)—Sudbury Wolves are not going to be easily disposed of in their all-Ontario Eastern Canada senior semi-finals with Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

The Wolves dropped the first two games of the best-of-seven series, and came from behind to tie the third game which ended in a 3-3 deadlock.

Tuesday night they scored their first victory over the Dutchmen when Lennie Speck slammed home the winning marker 56 seconds before the end of the first overtime period to give the Wolves a 5-4 victory.

Unlike the first three games, the team that scored the first goal won. In the first two contests Sudbury notched the games' first goals. In the third game, Kitchener scored first but were unable to win. Tuesday night Duro Rondina put the Wolves ahead 1-0 three minutes before the end of the first period.

MAKE IT UP

Kitchener snatched the edge away in the second when Grieg Hicks, brought up from the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A ranks, and Bobby Schnurr tallied. Hicks poked in the rebound off Don Rope's long shot at the eight-minute mark of the second. Schnurr sank a 15-footer 10 minutes later to give the Dutchies a 2-1 lead. But Andy Milne tied it up 22 seconds later when he pushed the puck through defenceman Harry Psutka's legs, went around to regain it, and shot a hard drive past Keith Woodall, Kitchener goaltenders.

Sudbury went ahead with two quick goals by Mauno Kauppi and Rondina's second of the night. The pair fired counters in the space of one minute.

Howie Lee's two blue-line shots, one at eight minutes, the other at 17:35, once again deadlocked the score and sent the game into overtime. It appeared to be another tie game until Roly McLenahan trapped a blue-line shot by Jack McKenzie, raced the length of the ice, and fired a hard shot at Woodall. The Kitchener goaltender stopped the drive but Speck batted in the rebound.

The first goal was actually scored by Kitchener when Charlie Brooker clicked at the 14-minute mark of the first. Referee Gus Plager disallowed the goal, saying McKenzie was in the crease. McKenzie argued so violently that Plager tagged him with a 10-minute misconduct penalty.

The series continues with the fifth game here tonight.

GIVES WEST THE CREDIT

EDMONTON (CP) — Walter Sprague of Edmonton, president of the Western Interprovincial Football Union, lashed back Tuesday at eastern critics who claim some western executives approach the game with "a cocky, do-it-our-way-or-else" attitude.

Sprague said that "all the new rule changes that have made football what it is today in Canada have come out of the west. Without these changes, we'd still be playing football the way it was played 20 years ago."

The WIFU chief confirmed a statement by Toronto sports writer Hal Walker that his league issued an ultimatum that if the WIFU didn't get voting control along with the east's Big Four it would pull out of the Canadian Rugby Union and operate independently.

But he said neither Walker nor himself could prove that the Big Four would not have seceded and that this would have killed the Grey Cup final.

"The whole deal was cooking up at two meetings between Big Four and WIFU representatives long before the CRU annual meeting here last week," Sprague said. "All I know is the agreement was that if the two big unions hadn't got voting control, the west was going to run its own show and challenge the eastern champion for the Dominion title. The east agreed to do the same thing. But I can't prove whether, when the chips were actually down at the CRU meeting, the east would have seceded."

'SPIEL SEMI-FINALS

MIDLAND (CP)—Two Midland rinks and one each from Kitchener and Lindsay reached the semi-finals of the main event of the Midland Curling Club's mixed bonspiel. The Midland rinks, skipped by Dr. Jim Small and Ernie Nicholson, meet in one semi-final. Ty Schantz of Kitchener and Jack Curtis of Lindsay meet in the other semi-final.

CRU PRESIDENT — Norm Perry of Sarnia, a former mayor of the Ontario city and a one-time football great, has been elected president of the Canadian Rugby Union at the annual meeting held in Edmonton. He succeeds Art Chipman of Winnipeg.

Winnipeg All-Stars Head For Toronto

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg's Little NHL all-stars, 19 strong, will leave Thursday for Toronto and the first all-Canadian Little NHL final series with Midland, champions of Eastern Canada.

The Midland youngsters defeated St. Catharines 6-1 Saturday to win the right to meet the Manitobans in a best-of-three final opening Monday at Toronto. The balance of the series will be played in Midland.

The Little NHL program originated in the west five seasons ago and has mushroomed throughout Ontario. Gordon Alcott of Toronto is national director.

The Winnipeg lads and their Midland rivals, all under 14 years of age, represent the pick of miniature NHL leagues in their respective centres.

Hawks Pleased At Comeback Over Montreal

CHICAGO (CP)—There was little talking in Montreal Canadiens' dressing room following Tuesday night's second straight upset by the underdog Chicago Black Hawks.

Coach Dick Irvin, in summing up the reaction of himself and his hockey squad at finding themselves in a 2-2 tie in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series said:

"There's nothing to say. The Hawks won the game."

The players, hurrying to catch a train home for the fifth game of the series Thursday, were equally taciturn.

TERRIFIC GAME

Bert Olmstead, who scored the Canadiens' only goal, said Al Rollins played a terrific game in the Chicago nets, adding:

"He's been good all through the series and he was really hot tonight."

In the Chicago dressing room, the Hawks said they were pleased but not surprised with their unexpected comeback and said they were determined to win the series.

Said coach Sid Abel:

"It was a good tough game—the best of the series.

"We tried defensive hockey before in the series and it didn't get us anywhere. We had a 3-1 lead in Montreal, you'll remember and lost it.

"So we're out there playing strictly offensive hockey from here on out."

Train Strikes Car Man Dies Of Injuries

HAMILTON (CP) — Glen Hubert Allen, 29, Hamilton, died in the General hospital early today, from injuries suffered when his car was struck by a Canadian National Railways freight train at the Parkdale Avenue crossing shortly after midnight.

Eyewitnesses to the tragedy said Allen's car had apparently stalled on the tracks. He managed to get out of the vehicle, but was caught by the front end of the train before he could clear the tracks.

Police said the car was driven nearly 100 feet from the point of impact.

Police are seeking a man seen running from the crash scene. They believe he may have been a passenger in the car.

Some Confusion

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The new police manual forbids policemen from accepting or soliciting brides. Chief of police Charles P. Thomas hastily explained the prohibition will be eliminated and the word "bribes" will be substituted for "brides."

GARBAGE COLLECTION

There will be no collection of garbage on Good Friday

Friday's collection will be made on Saturday, April 4th, as well as the regular Saturday collection.

DO YOU OWN A CAR?

If you own a car, we would like to tell you about a discovery.

About five years ago, the Manager of Bardahl Manufacturing Corporation had been driving a '39 model car. Noticing a leak in the radiator he took the car to a garage for repairs. At the time the Bardahl Manager had been working on a rust preventative for the cooling system. When he received his car back, he put some of this into his radiator. After driving the car for several weeks he noticed the radiator still leaked. Returning the car to the garage he reported the trouble. Later that day the garage operator phoned to ask Mr. Tennant what on earth he had put in the radiator. The garage owner went on to explain that when he drained the radiator the water was so thick with dirt it would hardly pour. The rust preventative prepared by Mr. Tennant had removed rust, scale and dirt untouched by the popular brand of chemical cleaner used by the garage owner.

The garage owner immediately placed an order for their own use. Since then hundreds of thousands of motorists across Canada and the United States have tried this Bardahl Rad Conditioner.

If you own a car you should try it, for if your car is old you'll be positively amazed at the dirt, rust and scale it will remove; if your car is new, Bardahl will keep the radiator in new, tip-top condition.

Bardahl keeps radiators clean . . . eliminates rust formation which can insulate a motor causing harmful overheating, and it also lubricates and stops squeaky water pumps. And when you think most of us spend about $25.00 every year washing our cars and yet neglect a more important part of the car—that is, the radiator—well, it's really worth it to buy a can of Bardahl Rad Conditioner at 80c.

Strike Vote Approved By 4,000 Quebec Workmen

QUEBEC (CP)—Nearly 4,000 Quebec province pulp and paper workers have voted to strike if necessary to back their demands for a reduced work week without loss of pay.

The workers belong to Catholic unions affiliated with the Catholic Federation of Pulp and Paper Workers (CCL) which has a total membership of 8,000 all involved in the demand for a work week reduction from 48 to 40 hours.

In the last five days, 3,375 Catholic union members employed at six plants of Consolidated Paper Company and Price Brothers and Company Limited in the St. Maurice valley and Saguenay districts have approved a strike plan to back their negotiators.

PLANTS INVOLVED

The plants involved are the Shawinigan, Grand'Mere and Port Alfred plants of Consolidated and the Kenogami, Riverbend and Jonquiere plants of Price Brothers.

The workers' basic pay is $1.25 hourly for a 48-hour week. Federation negotiators want a 40-hour week without loss of pay. Consolidated has offered to pay $1.38 hourly for a 44-hour week or $1.41 for a 40-hour week.

Union demands, recommended by arbitration boards, would involve basic pay of $1.50 hourly for the 40-hour week.

Canadian Actor To Play Cardinal Wolsey In Coronation Production

SANDWICH, England (Reuters)—Alexander Knox, 45-year-old Canadian actor, has been picked to play Cardinal Wolsey by the Old Vic.

Knox, from Strathroy, Ont., will play the role in a Coronation production of Shakespeare's 'King Henry VIII" opening in London in May.

For the last few months Knox has been living with his wife, film star Doris Nolan, and their five-year-old son Andrew in Sandwich, but now they are moving to London to be ready for Old Vic rehearsals.

The Coronation production will be Knox's first return to the Old Vic for 15 years. When he was last there in 1938 he was understudy to Laurence Olivier and Emlyn Williams.

"I am very glad to be going back to the Old Vic," Knox said Tuesday. "The last time I played in 'Midsummer Night's Dream' before Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret. The new Queen was quite a little one then.

"Cardinal Wolsey was Henry Irving's old part and I am delighted with it. It is one of the Shakespearean parts I can do."

Knox last played Shakespeare when he appeared with Laurence Olivier in "Romeo and Juliet" in New York in 1939. For five years he broke with the stage to write detective novels, and for five years he was in Hollywood—"It was a relief to get out of it," he said.

A year ago he came back to England to appear on the West End stage and recently he has been writing a play.

"I went down to Sandwich to finish the play because I wanted to get away from London," he said. "I was going to too many parties."

Knox's new play—he wrote the play "Old Master" in 1939—is a comedy with a Canadian background set in Northern Ontario.

With his wife, who appeared on Broadway in "The Closing Door" three years ago, Knox hopes to visit Canada in the autumn.

Approve Resolution That Act Be Changed

TORONTO (CP) — The Industrial Promotion Conference Tuesday approved a resolution that part of the Municipal Act be repealed or amended to allow fixed assessments for the establishment of branch plants.

The section prohibits the granting of fixed assessments to Ontario industries moving from one place to another in the province or setting up new branch plants.

Delegates from 125 municipalities also said smaller municipalities, especially those near the Quebec border, have strong competition to contend with and the section of the act providing that capital expenditures must be approved by the municipal board and that permission will not be given for the erection of industrial buildings should be re-examined.

4th PETERBOROUGH (SACRED HEART) WOLF CUB PACK

During Red Flower we practised songs for our father and son banquet which will be held April 14 this year. If there are two brothers in the pack, or one in the troop and one in the pack, the father should go with one of his sons, and an uncle, grandfather, older brother, or some other male adult should go with the other lad.

This week the Red Six once again won the pennant for the month of February, but not by very much. This Six are: Red Brother, Peter De Noble; Jimmy Collins, Billy Hatton, Jim Devlin and Ron McCarthy.

5th PETERBOROUGH

All Saints Pack welcomed two new assistants in Ron Cameron hereinafter to be known as Wontolla and Jerry Witienberg who jungle name is white elk. Instruction period found some of the Cubs under Mr. Perks for signalling while Wontolla took Eric Carre, Norm Muffet, Frank Howard, Fred Carveth, Larry O'Connor, Jack Rogers and Doug Garner in second star work, the new Chums being under Kim.

Our two new leaders took over the book balancing relay pointing out its aim. The Yellow Six came through to win the pennant for most points earned during the evening. Bob Pulford received his collector's badge; Ken Curvin, the artist badge; Raymond Conners, the swimmers'. Service stars were awarded as follows: First-year star, Murray Kidd; second-year star, Eric Carre, Fred Carveth, Larry O'Connor, Bruce Jackson, Doug Garner. Then the Wolf patrol came along to win the second game of the evening known as "Scout Law," Jack Morten passed signalling tests and Garry Hughes passed his tenderfoot first aid. A senior patrol has been started in the troop made up of Thomas Krogh, Lee Barry, Jack Morten and Doug Livingstone. We then carried out a series of practices on knotting, semaphore signalling and book balancing relay in readiness for field day. The reds and blues won in the last named relay. In signalling the pack read simple words by Aleka and Franklyn Montgomery.

The Wolf pathol is leading in the troop through points won in patrol corner activities and games. The tests on silence gave the boys a real understanding of the meaning of alert.

8TH PETERBOROUGH

Seven Young People Unable To Live Together On Ketch

OTTAWA (CP)—Seven young people, six of them Canadians, who started from England on a round-the-world cruise in a 72-foot ketch have called off the venture on the shore of the Mediterranean.

The crew of the good ship Memory called it quits after reaching Monte Carlo on the French Riviera.

Neither storm nor shipwreck stopped what was to have been a two-year voyage. The reason was given by Bruce Kirby, 23-year-old reporter on leave-of-absence from the Ottawa Journal, who chronicled the travels since the start.

"The ship could take it and the crew was capable of handling the ship," he wrote. "But the crew was not capable of living together in harmony in the confinement of a 72-foot yacht.

"It was the same old story which is enacted so many times in an undertaking such as ours."

SWERVED AT GIBRALTAR

Late last year the Memory reached Gibraltar, planned as the jumping-off point for a trans-Atlantic crossing on the globe-girdling expedition. Instead the crew turned her bow into the Mediterranean, lingered long at such points as Algiers, Capri, Naples and Rome, and finally reached Monte Carlo.

Besides Kirby, the crew consisted of 30-year-old Cameron Rougvie and his wife, Mariann, Don Burwash, 20, and Eddie Hughes, 22, all of Ottawa, 29-year-old Kelly Brownson of Eldorado, Ont., and Ralph Menhenick, 28, of Hamble, England.

It was decided at Monte Carlo to sell or charter the Memory, which had taken them through at least two severe Mediterranean storms.

Kirby's last story of the trip praised Mrs. Rougvie.

"We will miss Mariann's cooking and will always remember her courage at sea," he wrote. "It always amazed us the way she would cook a big breakfast in that heaving galley, having to go on deck for fresh air frequently to keep from being sick, serving a meal and then being unable to eat anything herself."

SEVENTH-FLOOR RESCUE.—Four elderly men and women stand on the windy, smoke-swept seventh-floor of the Strand Hotel in Atlantic City, N.J., awaiting rescue after they were trapped when the boardwalk hotel was swept by fire. The four were brought down ladders by firemen after more than an hour on the three-foot ledge. Damage was estimated at $650,000 in the fire, which destroyed the hotel.

Colonization Of Irrigated Lands Responsibility Of Government

EDMONTON (CP)—The colonization branch of the Alberta government is enforcing strict selection policies to ensure the best type of settlers for farming lands opened by the government through irrigation.

Colonization of irrigated lands is one of the major responsibilities the Alberta government assumed when it agreed to participate with the federal government in the St. Mary and Milk rivers development. This development is the first of three big irrigation projects which may be undertaken on a federal-provincial basis.

8,000 ACRES IIN 1951

In 1951, irrigation water was available for 8,000 acres of land in the St. Mary river development. Forty-seven veterans and five other applicants were examined for their suitability as irrigation farmers. Single men and married men and their wives were carefully examined and rated for age, health, agricultural experience, education, capital resources, personality and character, service record and so on. Before April of that year, 14 quarter-sections were allotted to veterans and one quarter-section to a non-veteran.

This year, seven veterans and three other applicants have been examined. Land has been allotted to eight veterans and five others. Many applicants have been approved but have not yet been given land because water is not available.

60,000 ACRES PREPARED

Upon the completion of the work now under construction, an area of about 60,000 acres will be ready for settlement. More settlers will then be established on the land.

A provincial government publication says:

"Great dams can be built to store water and miles of canals constructed to convey this water through the dry land but all these engineering works would be mere monuments to the energy of man without the achievement of irrigation's aim—the establishment of productive farms worked by determined settlers with a faith in their future."

by Peter Metcalfe, who brought a note to say he had fulfilled the requirements for his house orderly badge. Edgar Scrutton passed two tests also by note from home —thrift and folding clothes. It was party night in the Troop following a series of study nights on ambulance and first-aid under Harry Ferguson, assited by Chas. Spearin, the final night being March 18 when Dr. Leslie Calvert tested the knowledge of 28 members of the troop. Results later. This week we start back on our regular programs in which we hope to have the patrol leaders and troop leader doing most of the work in the troop, with Scouter Thomson and Fred Barnard, who is at present looking in on the Scouts working behind the scenes. We have 30 boys actively engaged in scouting, and names of the leaders are as follows: Troop Leader, Ted Spearin; Patrol Leaders, Lion Patrol Peter Chown, Eagle Patrol, Warren Kennedy, Wolf Patrol Ron Cooper, Beaver Patrol Bill Hendry. George Wheeler is a new member in the troop, and was attached to the Eagle Patrol.

KIBBLEWHITE ROVER SCOUTS

Monday night was a "free night" for the Crew, with the fellows playing chess, table tennis, reading, listening to the radio, working on the Den, or just plain talking. Bob Leach was welcomed into the Crew as a candidate. Bob is troop leader of the 5th Peterborough Troop. The Crew also had the honor of playing hosts to the 4th Peterborough Crew, or at least a prospective 4th Peterborough Crew, in the persons of Peter Dominik and Bob McCoy. We wish the 4th Peterborough every success in the formation of their Crew. The Crew is still on the lookout for odd jobs to help send Peterborough's representative to the World Rover Moot this summer at Kandersteg, Switzeland.

Willing To Lose Profit To Solve Row

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier E. C. Manning said Tuesday night that the Alberta government would be happy to lose its $13,000,000 annual liquor profit if it meant solving the liquor problem.

The premier made the statement in the legislature while members were studying in committee the province's proposed new liquor act.

At a three-hour evening sitting the House progressed more than half way through the 70-page bill which makes no drastic changes from the present law.

Mr. Manning commented after Hugh John MacDonald (L-Calgary) was discussing the practice in Alberta of selling watered liquor. Mr. MacDonald wondered what the reason was for watering it now that the wartime shortage doesn't exist.

MADE AGREEMENT

The premier explained that after the wartime federal regulations had b been rescinded, the liquor commissioners of all provinces agreed to continue the adulteration. Attorney-General Lucien Maynard said profit would be cut if liquor was sold at full strength.

Mr. MacDonald suggested that profits be cut if it would lead to reduction of abuses in the sale of liquor.

The attorney-general told the House the Alberta liquor control board doesn't water its liquor. It was obtained in the strength at which it was sold.

Large Hailstones

LONOKE, Ark. (AP) — Hailstones as large as a softball and weighing from one-half to three pounds pounded this central Arkansas city yesterday. No one was injured.

"HE LOVED KIDS"—That's the way Mrs. Lucille Wagner, above, described husband Charles "The Kid" Wagner, believed the victim of a gangland killing. "My husband took a man's life; somebody took his life; and whoever killed Charlie will get the same one day," said the pregnant young wife who believes, like police, that Wagner was the victim of a revenge killing.

Winter Damage To Crops Reported Light

March trailed off into oblivion leaving a cheering answer to the seasonal question: what did the winter do to the fall wheat and pastures?

From all over the province comes the same refrain as reflected through the weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Evidence of damage in the fields that are beginning to show the first greens of spring is notably light. From all accounts any apprehension in that quarter may be dismissed, and all hands get on with the work.

Halton county says: Winter wheat and clovers have come through well and to date are in good condition.

Wellington: "As yet there has been very little damage reported from heaving and destroying wheat and new seedlings. . .Welland: "Fall wheat appears to be in excellent condition" . . . Lambton: "Considering a winter with practically no snow, the fall wheat fields are looking well."

Leeds, in the east—Hay and pasture meadows, fall wheat and fall rye appear to have come through the winter in good condition.

This week's review indicates that dairy cattle prices have made no appreciable gain in the restored advantage of a virtually free market in the U.S.

Another top bit of news is pointed up in the Peel note — "Prices for sows have skyrocketed."

Dundas: "Farmers seem to be heading back into hogs as fast as they can." . . .Wellington: "Weanling pigs and bred sows are in keen demand and prices have been strong." . . .Lincoln: "Weanling pigs have been selling from $12 to $15 apiece at local auctions."

Farmers who consistently make a business of raising hogs may have got rid of an odd sow or two, depending on their swine establishment, during the winter, but for the most part they refused to get excited about the uncertainties of the new year. On the other hand, the in-and-outers, the fair weather breeders herded nearly everything to the packing plants. Several months ago the weanling carried hardly any price. Nobody wanted them.

The reverse side of the $15 price for weanlings is the remembered reports of the high number of unborn pigs that was noted by packing house employees. That was during the later phase of winter. The only predictions that were fulfilled were to the effect that it was a good time for the regular breeders to ignore those who were getting out.

MARKET STEADY

Almost over night those producers saw the market hold steady when the control price sagged, and have recently been getting 29½ to 30c for No. 1 grade A.

Throughout the province the price of pigs has climbed back into prominence. A beef cattle sale in Haldimand reports from last Thursday: prices were down considerably from a year ago. The average for the whole sale was $271.81 with the average for bulls $287 and females $265.

Lambton says: "American buyers have been in the country looking for registered Yorkshire gilts."

Seed grain is reported scarce in some parts of the county, and maple syrup season is just about ended on light run of sap. In several counties the quantity of syrup produced was said to be better than average, but generally it has been rather disappointing.

Says Kerosene Never Used In Hydrants

An official of the Ontario Fire Marshal's Department said Tuesday he had never before heard of anyone putting kerosene in a hydrant in his 37 years in the business.

E. F. Bevis, chief of the fire services division and director of standardization was referring to the incident here Sunday night when a minor explosion burned four firemen.

When the hydrant was turned on during a fire at Legon's greenhouse on Sophia St., the kerosene shot through a fog nozzle and produced an exploding ball of flame.

General Manager W. Howard Powell said the defective hydrant was scheduled for replacement but utilities workmen were waiting until the frost was out of the ground as it would be necessary to dig down as far as the main. Meanwhile some coal oil had been put in it.

"I don't know why they would use kerosene," Mr. Bevis said. "In Toronto and many other cities they use a heating plant to thaw out a hydrant and dry out the valve.

"But it's really a matter of service and maintenance to keep hydrants from freezing," Mr. Bevis added. "I certainly don't think kerosene is a very common practice and I'm certainly surprised to hear of it being done in Peterborough."

PUC officials announced Tuesday that in future a weak solution of ethelyn glycol, a non-inflamable anti-freeze, would be placed in defective hydrants during the winter.

Damage Set At $65 As Two Cars Collide

Damage estimated at $65 resulted in a two car accident Tuesday on Water St., just south of Charlotte St. Harold Foss of Norwood and Edward Bland of Millbrook were the drivers involved.

Foss was driving north on Water when, turning to the curb to avoid a truck his vehicle collided with Bland's which was parked at the curbside.

Damage to Bland's car was estimated at $20 and to Foss', $45. PC Harold Andrew investigated.

Short Visits

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia should set another record in tourist traffic this year, according to Harry Duker, president of the B.C. Automobile Association. But he's worried by the recent tendency of visitors to stay for shorter periods. Duker said the best way to make them stay longer is for everyone to make visitors welcome.

NEW ENGLAND TIDE — An unidentified gondolier in Saco, Me., anchors before some of the homes that felt flood waters as the Saco River answered heavy spring rains. Elsewhere in New England, flood waters receded to leave two dead, uncounted property damage and 3,000 homeless. Northeastern America had suffered her wettest March in decades.

Secrecy Growing In Civic Affairs Saskatoon Mayor

SASKATOON (CP)—Mayor J. S. Mills of Saskatoon has few kind words for what he says is a growing tendency among civic governments to keep public matters secret.

"The more publicity you have the better, as a general rule," Mayor Mills said. "Then you have a better informed electorate and better conduct of public affairs.

"Who should get the news first, the people or their representatives?

"I figure that in most cases the people should get it first. That's my angle on publicity."

Mayor Mills said it seems to be a human weakness that once a person gets into public office, he wants to keep everything quiet.

"But I'm absolutely convinced that the people should know about things just as soon as possible in the great majority of cases."

Mayor Mills lists three main reasons why public officials are averse to publicity:

1. They are uncertain or ashamed of their own actions because they are done in opposition to their consciences or for expediency's sake.

2. Some men in public life don't realize the importance of publicity in a democracy. "Unless the voter is fully informed, voting can be a very dangerous thing."

3. Some have a "false dignity" and want to keep information secret for a while before they let the people know about it.

Some Negligence On Both Sides

Twin charges of careless driving laid against J. D. Erskine of Bolsover and Charles Kempt of Lang were dismissed in Magistrate's Court Tuesday, the one against Erskine after crown evidence had been heard and that against Kemp, when no evidence was offered.

The accident occurred on Highway 7 on March 7, involving Erskine's car and Kempt's truck.

"I think," Magistrate W. R. Philp declared, "that the accident has occurred with the same slight negligence on the part of both. Erskine certainly can't be blamed for it," he concluded, after hearing the crown evidence against the Bolsover man.

The second charge against Kemp was also dismissed when the crown offered no evidence.

One Of Last "Old" Indians Dies In North Saskatchewan

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP)—Night Traveller, one of the last of the "old type" Indians, is dead. He wore long braids and a bright red kerchief around his head and walked with an air of dignity.

Night Traveller was a boy of 10 when the Crees made their peace with the Crown at Fort Carlton on the North Saskatchewan river, and to the end he place his faith in Queen Victoria's word. He never considered the revised Indian Act as law.

At the close of each tribal meeting at the Little Pine reserve, Night Traveller would intone in Cree: "As long as the sun shines and the river flows, the promises of the Great White Queen to her Indian children will never be broken."

As a boy, Night Traveller was made to kill a buffalo by his father. At 18 he was a brave of the tribe and a sure shot. In the fighting at Cut Knife hill May 2, 1885, Night Traveller shouldered a rifle in defence of the Indians' way of life.

It is believed that Night Traveller may have left some of the legends of the Battle River Crees on record in syllabics, the code invented a century ago by a Methodist missionary which gave the Indians their first written language other than sign writing. The legends hitherto had been handed down only by word of mouth.

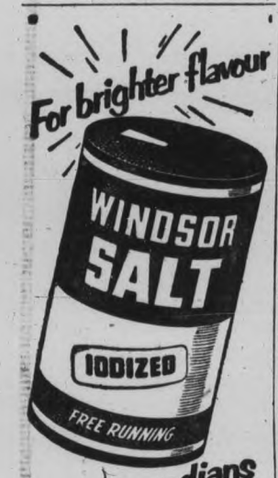
Next-Of-Kin Of 20,000 Fliers Invited To Shrine Dedication

LONDON (CP)—Next-of-kin of more than 20,000 Commonwealth airmen who died in the Second World War without a known grave, will be invited to attend the dedication of a shrine being erected to their memory at famous Runnymede on the banks of the river Thames.

The memorial will be unveiled by the Queen Oct. 17.

Spokesmen for the Imperial War Graves Commission said invitations are going out to the immediate relatives of all those commemorated at Runnymede, including some 3,000 Canadians. The invitation, however, does not provide for any financial assistance towards travelling costs although reduced fares will be available on British railways.



Designed by 69-year-old Edward Maufe, one of England's leading architects, the memorial stands on the edge of a wooded hill overlooking the Thames above the meadow of Runnymede, where Britain's charter of rights, the Magna Carta, was granted by King John in 1215.

CONSISTS OF SHRINE

The monument consists of a shrine, enclosed by curving cloisters with the names of the missing airmen inscribed on the stone casings of a series of narrow windows.

In the centre of the cloister rests the Stone of Remembrance. Above the arched entrance is a stone eagle with the RAF motto and the inscription: "In this cloister are recorded the names of 20,456 airmen who have no known grave. They died for freedom in raid and sortie over the British Isles and the lands and seas of Northern and Western Europe."

Above the arched opening to the shrine are sculptured figures representing justice, victory and courage. Surmounting the shrine's turret is an air force crown with a star above and in the stained glass of the great window of the memorial, two angels are pictured holding a scroll with verses from the psalms in the Book of Common Prayer.

Films With Depth To Be Shown 1st Time In City

Peterborough will have its first view this week of one of the types of three dimensional films that come close to making film looking like real life.

Citizens will see it through glasses. The type appearing in the city first is known as Natural Vision and must be viewed through polaroid glasses to be seen properly.

Taking the film for the Natural Vision 3D process copies the method of actual human sight. The picture is taken with two cameras aimed at the same scene just as a person's two eyes view a scene. Each eye gets a slightly different view of the subject and these two views are transmitted to the brain where they register as one, but with the impression of depth.

In showing the picture the two films that are taken are projected at the same time on the movie house screen so that two slightly different views of each scene are superimposed on the screen—a special silver painted screen with greater reflection power.

GLASSES TURN THE TRICK

The polaroid glasses provided by the theatre have two differently shaped lenses. One lense passes through the image reflected by the screen from one projector but blanks out the other image. The other lense in the glasses passes the second image through to the eye, and blanks out the first. Thus each eye receives a slightly different view of the same scene, just as it does in looking at a real object. And the net result is that the eyes see depth or the third dimension.

The two projectors are, of course, synchronized so that there is no mixup in the scenes projected. Ordinarily a theatre's two projectors are used one at a time to provide an uninterrupted film. With both projectors being used at once, there has to be a five-minute interval to give the operators time to change reels. The complete film that is being shown this week lasts 85 minutes.

New Phone Books Issued To Large District

Besides Peterborough, the book also contains listings for subscribers in Lindsay, Beaverton, Bobcaygeon, Cannington, Coboconk, Fenelon Falls, Kirkfield, Sturgeon Point, Woodville, Campbellford, Hastings, Havelock, Norwood, Omemee and surrounding territory.

Senate Gives Assent To Netherlands

OTTAWA (CP)—A bill incorporating a Netherlands-controlled bank was given royal assent Tuesday in the Senate, paving the way for chartering an 11th bank in Canada.

The measure incorporating the Mercantile Bank of Canada was among 112 bills given royal assent by Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret, deputy governor-general. Ninety-six divorce bills were included.

The newly-incorporated bank still must obtain approval of the treasury board before it can begin operations. This step involves posting a $250,000 guarantee with the receiver general and proof that provisions of the bank act have been met.

Working Hours Unchanged In Manitoba

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Manitoba working hours remain unchanged: a maximum of 48 hours a week for men and 44 hours for women.

The Manitoba legislature Tuesday defeated a private member's bill to reduce the maximum to 40 hours a week for both men and women. It also called for payment of double time instead of the time and one-half now in effect, for work during statutory holidays where no compensating time off is given. Caretakers living in blocks would have had their work hours cut from 10 to eight hours a day.

The bill, an amendment to the Hours and Conditions of Work Act, was introduced by Donovan Swailes (CCF—Winnipeg South). Members voted 37 to 8 against it.

The Alberta House defeated a motion sponsored by N. W. Dushenski (CCF—Willingdon) urging a dominion-provincial conference on the possibility of national marketing of agricultural products.

Premier Manning and Liberal leader J. Harper Prowse clashed on economic points, although both opposed the motion.

The premier said extension of national credit to customer countries offers the greatest advantages as a means of stimulating or creating foreign markets.

"Dangerous nonsense," Mr. Prowse said.

Saskatchewan members will debate a resolution introduced Tuesday asking the government to permit farmers to obtain a royalty on surface-rights land if oil is found.

A. H. McDonald (L—Moosomin), who introduced the resolution, asked for a policy allowing individual owners to receive one-fifth of the royalty paid.

Fight At Fiesta

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP)—A fiesta in the nearby village of San Diego broke up in a gun fight early Tuesday. Six men were killed and eight persons, mostly women, were wounded. Police said none of the survivors could tell what started the fighting.

Communist Donation

LONDON (AP) — Communist China Tuesday donated £15,000 to Britain's national flood relief fund. Russia recently made a substantial contribution to the fund.

Sees U.S. Financial Squeeze On Northern Ontario Mills

TORONTO (CP)—A government member of the legislature said Tuesday the United States government's policy of financing paper mill construction is putting a financial squeeze on Northern Ontario paper mills.

Clare Mapledoram (PC — Fort William) told the legislature's lands and forests committee that paper mills in the northern United States are bidding Ontario pulpwood prices up to heights which Northern Ontario mills can barely afford to pay.

The American mills were able to pay $40 a cord for pulpwood, because many of them were financed by long-term U.S. government loans at low interest rates. Northern Ontario mills, which had to depend on the private money market for high interest-rate loans, were finding it difficult to pay $30 to $35 for pulpwood cut "on their own doorsteps."

The differential between the Northern Ontario and U.S. rates was due to shipping charges, he said.

MORE DIFFICULTY

Mr. Mapledoram predicted that the U.S. government financing policy would bring additional difficulty to Northern Ontario paper mills. Mills constructed on the long-term loans in recent years in the southern U.S. were competing with increasing success in U.S. market with Canadian newsprint.

The southern mills, he said, could buy almost infinite quantities of southern pine pulpwood at $14 to $16 a cord.

F. A. MacDougall, deputy minister of lands and forests, said the government's wood export quota policy is its solution to a problem which affects wood exporters, pulp and paper manufacturers and the public as well.

He said present wood export quotas were instituted in 1948 on declining scales so that by 1958 the export of raw wood from Ontario would be banned. This declining quota system had been set up to provide protection for pulp and paper manufacturers and, at the same time, to allow wood exporters time to divert their facilities elsewhere.

CONSUMPTION DOWN

However, Mr. MacDougall said, it was possible that by 1958 Ontario's wood consumption would not be sufficient to use all the province's mature wood. If that happened, consideration would be given to allowing the continued export of wood to the U.S.

"After all," he said, "we have a responsibility to the people of Ontario not to allow wood to ripen and die and not be used."

The Ontario Farmers' Union, with 2,500 members in Western Ontario, presented a brief to the agriculture department claiming there is a loophole in the government's amendment last week of the Edible Oils Products Act.

The brief said the amendment would allow the use of milk solids other than milk fat in the manufacture of edible oils products which resemble dairy products. It called for a specific ban on the use of milk solids in such manufacture.

In its present form, the act would prohibit the sale of whipping cream, sherbet and similar products to which any fat other than milk fat has been added.

The brief was presented by Frank Mills, Feversham; John Hutchinson, Markdale; Walter Miller, Tara, and Richard Doran, Meaford. Agriculture department officials made no comment.

"I began to suffer with a dull, continuous ache from my hip down my leg", writes Mr. Geo. F. MacGregor, 1604 E. 8th Ave., Vancouver. "The steady pain gave me no rest day or night. Union Won't Try Further For Settlement

WALLACEBURG, Ont. (CP)—The union representing 100 striking workers of the National Pressure Cooker Company here will take no more steps to get a settlement, plant union representative Art Last said Tuesday.

He said the next move is up to the company. The workers, members of the United Automobile Workers (CIO-CCL), struck March 23 after a breakdown in negotiations over wages, union security, relief periods in the company foundry, and hospital insurance.

Printed Hansard Now Suggested

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario will again have a printed Hansard if a recommendation of the legislature's printing committee is accepted.

The committee recommended Tuesday that a "limited" quantity of copies of House debates be printed daily next year and that some copies be bound for the end of the session.

Hansard in Ontario started in 1944 and for three years mimeographed copies were distributed to members. In 1947, '48 and '49 the Ontario Hansard was printed but in 1950 it was decided to return to mimeographing. Recently, there have been complaints about the bulk of mimeographed copies.

Figures submitted to the committe showed it will cost about $26,000 a year to have a printed second.

Conversion Next Year

TORONTO (CP) — A $891,000 transformer station will be installed on Toronto's waterfront and additional transformer facilities added to six other stations to expand 60-cycle facilities in the area, hydro commissioner Robert H. Saunders announced Tuesday. He said the changeover from 25- to 60-cycle for householders within the city will begin late in 1954.

Killed By Car

Trade Fair In Toronto Proves International Get-Together

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Once a year Canada provides an international get-together.

The meeting place is the Canadian International Trade Fair, held annually since 1948 at the Canadian National Exhibition buildings in Toronto. This year the dates are June 1-12 inclusive.

To Canadian visitors, it is a sort of "quick trip around the world," where the exotic is mixed with the practical, and strange costumes brighten the aisles of commerce.

C. C. Hoffman, administrator of the fair, wondered at a press conference, however, whether "we are taking advantage of this opportunity to create thousands of goodwill ambassadors for Canada?"

WANT QUIET ATMOSPHERE

The fair is primarily a place where exhibitors from about 30 countries show their goods to buyers from about 60 countries. Both exhibitors and buyers wish to have the chance to do business quietly. Accordingly the general public is admitted only on three days (two Wednesdays and a Saturday).

However, anyone with a legitimate interest in such a gathering finds no difficulty in getting permission to go in.

Probably about 45,000 people will see the show this year. In Canada, special trains will bring parties from the Maritime provinces and British Columbia, and special groups will attend from American cities, including New York.

SET RECORD

The fair this year started with an objective of 220,000 square feet of space, and now has reached 258,000 square feet, a record. More than half this will be occupied by Canadian exhibits, so that both an international and domestic show of goods is provided.

Countries so far listed as exhibitors, with several more expected, are, in addition to Canada, Britain and the United States:

Austria, Belgium, Colombia, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Guatemala, Holland, Hong Kong, India, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Norway, Peru, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland.

Federal Budget Criticized By Candidates

OTTAWA (C)—Three women candidates for the Progressive Conservatives in the next federal election Tuesday night criticized the federal government's budget and financial policies.

Their speeches were prepared for broadcast over the trans-Canada network in the CBC series "The Nation's Business." The candidates were introduced by Mrs. Ellen Fairclough (PC—Hamilton West), only woman member of the Commons.

Lorraine Johnston, candidate in Vancouver South, said the present government has refused Progressive Conservative demands for a federal-provincial conference to deal with the problem of overlapping taxation and insufficient local revenue.

"Until such a step is taken to put the tax structure on a sound basis there can be no let-up in the ever-increasing burden of taxation on the Canadian citizen. . . ."

HEARTLESS BUDGET

Elizabeth Janzen, candidate in the Ontario constituency of Waterloo North, said the government's 1953 budget "must surely be one of the most heartless in history."

"In spite of all the claims and pretences of tax relief, it is a fact that 2,000,000 people get no income tax relief whatever, and 2,250,000 get less than three dollars for the calendar year 1953."

Sybil Bennett, candidate in the Ontario constituency of Halton, said a Progressive Conservative government would pledge itself to reduce taxes while maintaining defence and social security programs and other essential services.

This could be done, said Miss Bennett, by "elimination of waste and extravagance and wild spending. . . ."

Flood Toll 1,783

AMSTERDAM (AP)—The Dutch Red Cross Tuesday set the figure for dead and missing in the disastrous February flood at 1,783. This includes 633 persons still listed as missing and believed drowned.

Not Optimistic Taxes To Be Cut

LONDON (CP)—What price income-tax relief in the forth-coming British budget?

A well-known London bookmaker (Douglas Stuart) lists these for the budget that Treasury Chief R. A. Butler will bring down early in April:

25-1 against a cut in income tax.

7-1 against a cut in sales tax.

25-1 against a cut in gasoline tax.

33-1 against a cut in beer or tobacco taxes.

The hitch: the bookmaker will not lay those odds. It's all theatrical as the company never takes bets on the budget.

Water Supply Doubled In Great Lerma Project

By JEAN STENTON

MEXICO CITY. — Since 1951 for the first time since the days of the Aztec emperors when the city of Mexico (Tenochtitlan) had open flumes carrying sparkling water to each family, the Mexican capital has had a more adequate potable water system.

From that day 400 years ago when the white conqueror took control until 1951 there had been a losing battle to supply the mountain-high metropolis with water. In recent years prior to this, city water was not only undrinkable but rarely coursed through the mains for more than 2 hours a day.

All this changed with the Lerma water project which ex-president Aleman brought to completion and which practically doubled the capital's water supply.

Tlaloc, god of rain, occupies a place of honor in the project. His figure of volcanic rock and colorful tiles rests on a big fountain outside the distribution chambers. Diego Rivera, famous Mexican artist, spent a year decorating the chambers. Waterproof paint keeps the underwater murals in excellent condition in the big glass distribution tank.

LONG TUNNEL

It was necessary to drill a nine-mile-long tunnel through hard rock of the mountain 14,000 feet high in order to reverse the normal flow of nature into the Pacific and turn it to Mexico City which is on the gulf watershed.

The now adequate water supply, however, is only one major step in the solution of the sanitation problems of Mexico City. Although the Lerma tunnel brings potable mountain water to the capital, Mexico Ctiy's water supplies are not yet pure. That is the fault of the city's own water distribution system and not of the Lerma water project.

The black waters of the swampy and underground terrain here continue to permeate the city's distribution system. New cheap concrete pipes recently laid have not been the solution for the new pressure seems to have ruptured them. In hotels, cafes, etc., every day huge jars of purified water are brought from special firms. There is a jug in every hotel room which is filled daily with drinking water. Tap water is not used for anything but washing.

This Lerma water, pure when it reaches the capital's distribution chamber is the first adequate potable water supply since the Aztecs. When Cortes came to the area about 1521, he found a system of pure water. The Aztec engineers had diverted water from mountain springs to the area of their dwellings where it ran into troughs.

ENGINEERING FEAT

Tapping the pure water of the Lerma River which tumbles southward toward the Valley of Mexico and the Pacific coast was an engineering feat which employed 6,000 people. The water relay system comprises 17 tunnels. The principal tunnel is by far the longest built in Mexico. Built about 8,500 feet above sea level, it connect the Toluca valley and the Mexico City valley.

The entire project operates by gravity (Mexico City is about 7,600 feet), spilling down a series of wide steps as it tunnels out beneath 14,000-foot mountains. Water falls of some 1,000 feet between the origin of the aqueduct and Mexico City generate about 16,000 horsepower in electrical energy.

THIS HUGE FIGURE in mosaic work is at the Lerma Water Works in Mexico City. It represents the Aztec deity Tlaloc, god of water, fertility and abundance. This work was executed by the famous painted Diego Rivera as well as the murals inside the building in the background. —(American Airlines Photo)

THE OTONABEE RIVER RUNS FREE these days as spring freshet waters rush through control locks that have had most of their stop logs removed. The flow is only half as fast this spring as in former normal runoffs, according to engineers of the Trent Canal system. The photo above at Lock 19 is a familiar and popular spot at the south end of the city below the Locks Brdige. On May 1, and after, the dam will be black with pickerel fishermen. Some of the best fishing luck is to be had at this spot.—(Examiner Staff Photo)

Merton Plunkett Recalls Gay Days Dumbell Troupe

From a window in the Empress Hotel, Merton Plunkett gazed at the swarm of cars on the city parking lot and recalled when the property was once the Peterborough market. Whenever the Dumbells, the famous entertainment troupe which he organized during the First World War, visited Peterborough, Mr. Plunkett used to visit the market and buy something to take home to his mother in Orillia.

It was in Orillia that the five Plunkett boys, Fred, Al, Merton, Morley and Syd, were brought up and their mother used to tell them of the days when, as Margaret Kerr of Otonabee township, she used to come to market in Peterborough to sell butter, eggs and fowl.

Merton returned to Peterborough Tuesday when he heard of Morley's sudden death at his home at 1298 Monaghan Rd. at the age of 58.

Of the other boys, Fred died 17 years ago, Syd lives in California and Al in Toronto. The last get-together was when the Dumbells visited Edmonton during one of their Canadian tours and they sang as a quintet in an Edmonton church.

ALL SINGERS

Although only Merton, Morley and Al wound up in the Dumbells troupe, all the Plunkett boys were singers—a gift they probably inherited from their father who, although he was not a professional vocalist, used to sing at social gatherings in Orillia.

One of Mr. Plunkett's favorite songs was "Buttermilk Pail," and Merton tried unsuccessfully to remember the words Tuesday afternoon as he mused on his family history. A few words came but he had to hum the rest of the tune.

"Father used to know seven or eight verses," Merton said quietly.

It was Merton who was the real showman of the family. He used to put on musical reviews in the Sunday school hall of St. Paul's Methodist Church but they grew in popularity until the opera house had to be booked for their performance. He also put on minstrel shows for the YMCA with his brother Morley and then he went to Toronto to study music.

THREE ENLIST

It almost looked as though Merton's musical career was going to be brought to a close when the First World War broke out shortly after his arrival in Toronto and he enlisted with Al and Morley. But the YMCA had its eye on him and sent him overseas as entertainment director for the 3rd Division.

At that time, almost every unit was forming a concert party from its own ranks and Merton learned that the British were granting their own troops, who were doing the same thing, permission for 12 men from each division who had talent and had seen service to be used solely as entertainers.

ROLL INTO MONS

Merton saw the need for a similar scheme in the 3rd division and went to General Lipset, the divisional commander, for permission to form a full-time concert party.

And that was how the Dumbells got started.

Their first performance was at Gouys-servins in 1917. The entire cost of production of every subsequent performance was paid for by the YMCA.

Outboard Marine Plans Building For Assembly Line

The Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co. plans to begin construction this summer of an addition to its plant at the northwest corner of Romaine St. and Monaghan Rd., President Clarence B. Neal announced today.

Although plans are not yet complete, it is expected that the one-storey building will be made of concrete and glass with a flat monitor-type roof, similar to the rear wing of the present building. With floor space of approximately 40,000 square feet, the addition will cover the property at present used as a parking lot.

Reason for the new addition is the general increase in the company's production of outboard motors and the addition of facilities for producing "Lawn-Boy" power lawnmowers, recently added to their list of products, Mr. Neal said.

The additional space will allow for consolidating and re-arranging present operations, including a double assembly line instead of the single one used at the present time. Thus the company will be able to assemble two models at the same time instead of one.

Normal growth of the company plus the addition of the lawnmower assembly line have forced the company to use up storage and shipping space which the addition will allow to be returned to normal use.

The company, which expects present expansion to continue, has recently spent considerable money on equipment, including the purchase of larger aluminum pressure die-casting machines for the outboard motor department. Some aluminum die-castings are at present imported, but the addition to the plant and the new machinery will make it less dependent on other firms.

TLC Proposes Start On Centre "Or Forget It"

Either begin work on the Memorial Centre this year or forget about it.

The Peterborough Trades and Labor Council (TLC-AFL) have made this blunt suggestion to J. A. Jebson, chairman of the Memorial Centre Committee.

A letter dated March 30 to Mr. Jebson says that the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council, representative trade union body for 13 locals in Peterborough, "are fully aware of the difficulties that usually beset those responsible for so large a public trust but we also believe that after waiting nine years the Memorial Centre must be erected soon or the fund must dissolve".

They suggest a sod-turning ceremony on Coronation Day.

ALTERNATIVE

If the committee feel the project cannot go ahead then the money collected should be sent back to those people who gave it, a resolution from the labor council states.

Following is the text of the resolution, passed unanimously by the membership:

"Be it resolved that it is the expressed opinion of this (labor) council that the Memorial Centre should be built this Coronation year and the sod turned on Coronation Day;

"And be it further resolved that if the Memorial Centre Committee is not prepared to go ahead this year it is the belief of the membership of this council that the project should be abandoned and the funds that were collected returned to the donors, as the Centre will have lost all significance as a war memorial."

The Trades and Labor Council also proposed that they be represented on the Memorial Centre Committee along with the Peterborough and District Labor Council (CIO-CCL).

TLC SPEAKER

Guest speaker at the April meeting of the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council (TLC-AFL) tonight at 8 o'clock will be Daniel Dean of Toronto, business agent for the International Association of Machinists. The meeting will be in the public library. Thirteen unions are affiliated with the labor council.

Legion Aids Flight Of Mercy

Fly Three Children From Newfoundland To Ailing Father

A father who has about one chance in a hundred to live through an operation in Toronto this week saw his three children Monday for the first time since November.

Peterborough's Branch 52 of the Canadian Legion helped pay the cost of flying the three from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Toronto. A Legion branch in St. John's is also paying a part of the cost.

The father, Charles Pearce, is a veteran of the Imperial Army with which he served in the Second World War. He has been in Toronto's Sunnybrook Hospital since November 8, stricken with a disease of the heart.

Monday night the three children —Lorraine 11, Arlene 7, and Charles Jr. 6—landed in Toronto and were rushed to their father's bedside.

Their mother, a daughter of Mrs. Fred Bursey of 35 Stewart Place, has been in Toronto since February.

A faint glimmer of hope was given the Pearce family on Tuesday, a day after Mr. Pearce greeted his children. Officials of the hospital say there is hope he will come through the operation and recover.

The children and Mrs. Pearce will come to Peterborough Friday to stay with Mrs. Bursey and await news of the operation's result.

Mr. Pearce's ailment has made it impossible for him to work since 1945, shortly after his discharge from the army.

Nets Allowed Catching Smelt

Smelts are being taken at the mouths of Lake Ontario streams in Northumberland and Durham Counties but the greater part of the run is not expected for some days yet.

The Department of Lands and Forests have issued the following rules and regulations for the guidance of smelt fishermen.

Smelt may be taken in the waters of Lake Ontario only at the mouths of streams adjacent to the Counties of Northumberland and Durham. Fishermen may not go upstream until May 1.

USING DIP NET

A resident of Ontario may use a dip net not larger than three feet square either day or night during the months of March, April and May, for the taking of smelt for personal use without license. They may also use a dip net to six feet square between sunrise and sunset only, without a license. Fish taken by both methods may be only for personal use and may not be sold or bartered.

A seine net 30 feet long by six feet deep may be used in the above locations during the same time limit for the payment of a license fee of $1. Licences may be purchased from the issuers.

RECEIPTS DOWN

Peterborough customs receipts were down slightly during March as compared with last year. This year's monthly figures were $666,322.28 and for last year, $674,206.30.

BURWELL MOORE of 634 Weller St., who died on Tuesday, was the last manager in Peterborough of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company.

Seek Four Writs Against Hatton Residents

Court action will be taken by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to evict four Hatton property tenants who hadn't made arrangements to vacate their homes by the Tuesday deadline, W. L. A. Pope, assistant regional supervisor for Ontario, said today.

Mr. Pope said that a writ of possession has already been obtained through court action against one tenant. Possession of that house was granted the corporation recently and it will take possession on May 1.

Mr. Pope said that the first notice notifying all tenants that leases would expire December 31, 1952, were sent out last summer. Seventy of the 126 tenants vacated during that six-month period.

Then an extended lease was granted the remaining 56 tenants until March 31. By then only five had failed to either purchase their homes or make housing arrangements. Since one writ of possession has been obtained, action will be taken against the other four.

CO-OPERATION GOOD

"The co-operation of the tenants, for the most part, has been excellent," said Mr. Pope. "They realized that we were under an obligation to the city of Peterborough and must clear that site in order to carry out our agreement with the city."

He added that the corporation had no alternative but to proceed against the five tenants for posession, explaining that "we must proceed in order to gain possession of the houses and keep the agreement."

Mr. Pope said that the corporation has instructed its solicitors, Carley and Standish of Peterborough, to proceed against the four remaining tenants.

At present there are still about 40 homes on the Hatton property. These are in various stages of being moved.

Mr. Pope explained that if the tenants bought the houses, they were required to move the buildings within two months of purchase. This means that all the houses will be moved off the property by at least May 31.

New Building Declines First Quarter

Building Permits Total $384,140, $556,560 Year Ago

For the first quarter of the year, Peterborough's building permits represent new property value of $384,140 as compared with $556,560 for the corresponding three months last year.

One of the items in the March permits is a $5,000 job of tearing down instead of building up. It was issued to the Cooper Wreckers of Dundas who are taking apart the five-store building at the northwest corner of George and Charlotte St., at a pace that surprises the young generation and somewhat dismays the elders. To them, it is modernization and improvement, but it is also the demolition and evanishment of an old familiar corner look.

That permit carries a $5,000 tag. Other major items in the March permits were: the new Public School on Cameron St. east, $65,250, and another $40,000 apartment building in the group that is being built on Clonsilla Ave. by Miller Construction Co.

The March permits as reported from the office of City Engineer Chalmers were: six garages, $2,400; 10 houses, $80,000; and 34 miscellaneous permits, $122,840; total, 50 permits for $205,240. And for the period from Jan. 1 to March 31 the total was $384,140.

Permits for March last year were: three garages, $1,250; five dwellings, $40,300; and 30 miscellaneous permits, $211,380. Total permits and values for the first quarter of last year were $556,560.

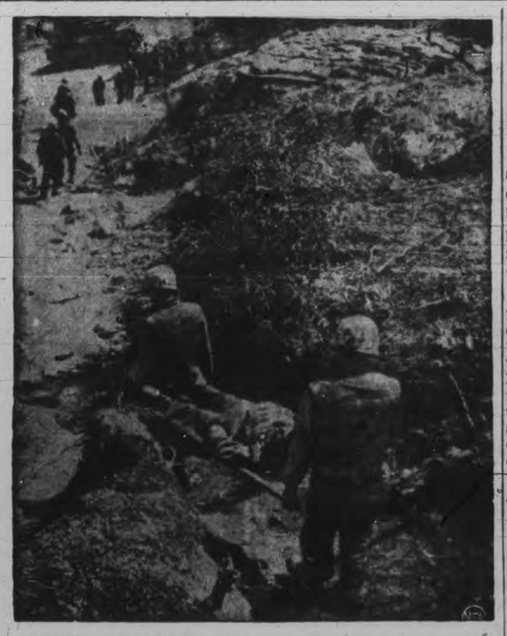
McCormack Asks Time Limit On Truce Talks

WASHINGTON (AP)—Representative John McCormack (Dem. Mass.) today called for a time limit on any future Korean truce negotiations, while other key congressmen continued to eye Communist peace overtures skeptically.

Republican leaders in the House of Representatives said their legislative program to continue the military buildup of the Western world would not be slowed by any new truce talks or even a Korean solution.



There was little apparent confidence on Capitol Hill that any lasting peace would result from Red Chinese premier Chou En-lai's seeming offer to give some ground on the disputed question of exchanging war prisoners, by letting prisoners who refused to return home go to a neutral country.

STRONG SPEECH

Instead, Representative John Lyle (Dem. Tex.), in a strongly-worded speech, asked Congress to adopt a resolution that would "spell out a positive request for military victory."

McCormack, assistant Democratic leader, told an interviewer that while Communist offers "should be viewed with caution, if not skepticism," he could see "no reason why our country should not explore" the Peiping proposal, "with the view to a quick and favorable conclusion, not permitting long drawn-out negotiations."

Republican leaders who requested anonymity said that even a truce in Korea would leave a major question mark over Communist intentions in the rest of the world. They said the military buildup could not be slowed while this doubt continues.

Queen Will Give First Coins To 54 Of Her Loyal Subjects

By ANNE KRAMER

LONDON (AP) — The Queen personally will hand the first coins of the realm to bear her effigy to 54 loyal subjects tomorrow.

Twenty-seven old men and 27 old women each will receive silver pence worth two shillings, three pence (31 cents) from the Queen as a part of their gifts at a Maundy Thursday service at St. Paul's Cathedral.

Since 1754 it has been a custom for the British sovereign to give money on Maundy Thursday, the Thursday before Easter, to as many poor of both sexes as there are years in the sovereign's age.

This year, because they are the first Elizabethan coins, the Maundy money will be worth double or more than the usual collectors' price.

COINS BEING STRUCK

The new coins are now being struck at the royal mint but none so far have been issued to the public. Sets in red leather cases stamped with the royal arms in gold have been sent to the Queen.

Immediately after the death of George VI, the busy men who kept England's coinage up to date, invited artists to submit suitable designs. Traditionally, the British dependencies always have used a crowned head. Today, however, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Southern Rhodesia and Ceylon, like Britain herself, are using the uncrowned head.

The design must conform to certain requirements. It must wear well in circulation. It must be capable of being mass produced by high speed modern machinery But above all it must be traditional, which means it must have shields, swords, sceptres and crowns

For six months the royal mint advisory committee presided over by the Duke of Edinburgh, consulted earnestly. Last Jan. 1, a royal proclamation announced the final choice.

Mrs. Mary Gillich, a 71-year-old artist of Chelsea, London, submitted the winning design of the uncrowned head of the Queen to be used on all coinage in the United Kingdom and the Dominions.

Cecil Thomas, a sculptor and engraver, had the best design for a crowned head of the Queen to be used on coinage in the dependencies.

Mrs. Gillich stressed the youthful charm of the Queen. It took 60 mold and plaster casts to make this happy portrait.

SURPRISING DEVIATIONS

There were some surprising deviations from tradition in the new designs. The new three-penny piece has a coronated and chained portcullis—the badge of Henry VIII—instead of the usual thrift flowers and leaves. The leek, the emblem of Wales, makes its first joint appearance with the Tudor rose, thistles and shamrock on the reverse of the florin (two shilling piece worth 28 cents) and the sixpence.

On the new coins the Queen's head is turned to the right, maintaining the tradition that the head of each new monarch must face the opposite direction to his predecessor. This custom has been preserved since the reign of Charles II who insisted he should "turn his back on Cromwell."

Mary Ann Cowain

Miss Cowain was born in Marmora, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Cowain. Her death occurred March 23 in Blind River hospital following a brief illness.

She began her teaching career at Moneymore and then was teacher at Cannifton public school for five years and later its principal for a further 25 years. After leaving Cannifton she taught for a few years at Flinton before going to Massey, Ont., four years ago. She is survived by one brother, Hudson of British Columbia.

Wants Canada's Interests First In Gas Deal

OTTAWA (CP)—George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said Tuesday that the interests of Canada should get first consideration in the use of natural gas and other resources.

But, he said in the Commons, his party has never said that there should be no export to the United States where such export would be consistent with the self-interest of Canadians.

Mr. Drew said he believes economic factors must be considered in supplying western gas to eastern consumers.

He spoke after Carl Nickle (PC—Calgary West) said that an all-Canadian pipeline from Alberta would be more costly and result in higher gas costs to eastern consumers than one constructed partly through United States territory. Mr. Nickle emphasized he spoke for himself and not for his party.

DETAILED STUDY

The discussion came during clause-by-clause consideration of a bill to incorporate Mid-Continent Pipelines Limited. The company plans to build a line from Alberta to points in Eastern Canada.

An all-Canadian route north of the Great Lakes, said Mr. Nickle, would be some $67,000,000 more costly than a southern route. The terrain of the 800 miles between Manitoba and Sudbury alone would raise the cost of construction 100 to 150 per cent over parts of the route and this extra cost must be borne by the producer and consumer.

The bill was still being considered at the expiration of the hour given to consideration of private legislation.

Want Changes In Code Dropped

OTTAWA (CP)—The Red-tinged International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, Canadian section, urged Tuesday that certain proposed changes in Canada's Criminal Code be eliminated because, it said, they would imperil the rights of labor and of free speech.

Lukin Robinson of Sudbury, research director for the Canadian section, told the Commons committee studying a bulky revision of the code, that there are changes in the bill which could be used to brand labor strikes as sabotage, criminal breaches of contract or mischief and in each case make them punishable by law.

He argued that free speech is threatened by revisions of sections on treason and sedition. He said the government is proposing to bring into effect restrictions on free speech which would be parallel to "odious" legislation in the United States.

This was being done by indirection, by not advertising what is being done.

Communist Dictatorship Just Around Corner In India

NEW DELHI (AP)—The man who drafted India's three-year-old constitution claims democracy is not working in India.

Communist dictatorship "seems just around the corner" to Dr. B. R. Ambedkar, former law minister in Prime Minister Nehru's cabinet and a leading spokesman of India's 60,000,000 "untouchables."

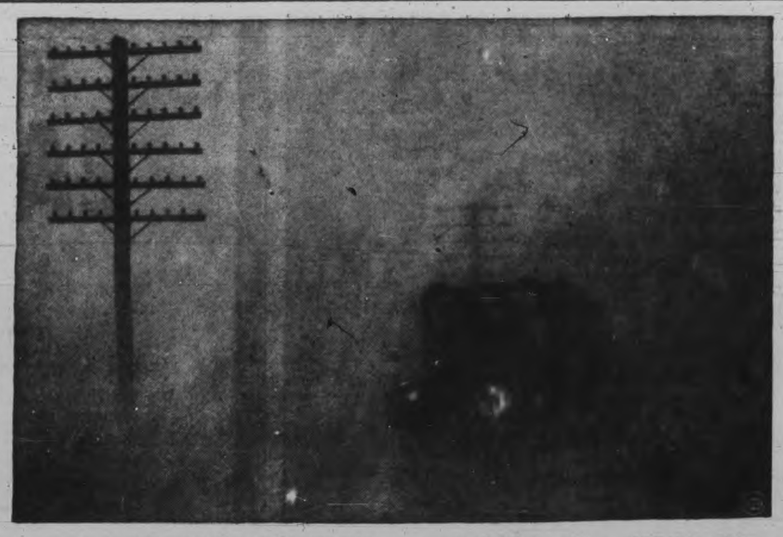
In an interview he said "this caste government in India is literally driving the untouchables and 50,000,000 aboriginal tribesmen into the arms of communism."

There is talk in the capital that Ambedkar is poised for a major switch in his political line. He said he has not yet decided what to advise his folowers, "but generally speaking I am convinced communism will be the only way out for us and probably for all India."

"If the Pandit (Nehru) isn't going to prevent communism and if America won't persuade him to do something for my untouchables, then what else can I tell them?

"Americans are a happy people. They can talk about democracy. We can only weep about it."

Ambedkar, 60-year-old bitter critic of Nehru, stalked out of the government in the fall of 1951 with high hopes for his scheduled Castes Federation in the Indian general elections.



He charged that Nehru's Congress party had done nothing to improve the lot of the outcasts, whom he described as "worse off than under the British."

Only two scheduled Castes Federation deputies won election to the Parliament and a handful more in state legislatures. Ambedkar himself failed to win a seat in the Lower Chamber. Later he received Nehru's approval for a seat in the non-elective Upper Chamber where he occasionally comes to glower at Congress benches.

Nehru partisans say Ambedkar's virtually total flop in the 1951 elections has embittered him and led him to desperation.

"In America, democracy is good," he ruefully observed. "In England it's good. But I don't like Americans insisting that democracy is good for the world. The world may be in different conditions."

"Whether you like Russia or not, you cannot do without collective farms and many other aspects of their system in this country."

JUST HOPEFULLY RECOVERING from the effects of last year's drought, Kansas wheat farmers see their hopes dust-blasted by the 60-mile-an-hour winds that whipped up hundreds of tons of precious top soil. Greening fields were turned into sand dunes. Rich top soil mounded up around field obstables. It filled ditches. Young wheat stalks, two or three inches high, were cut off at the ground by the wind-driven dust. The thick haze that almost obscures telegraph poles and an oncoming truck is precious top soil blow off wheat fields near Topeka by winds that reached 71 miles an hour in that area.

Merton Plunkett Recalls Great Days

One day in 1918 the Dumbells rolled into Mons on the heels of the retreating Germans and that night they presented a performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "HMS Pinafore" in the theatre where a German company had performed only two nights before.

That production was memorable for a number of reasons. It was the only operetta the Dumbells ever put on. It had an all-male cast with 60 members on stage and 40 in the orchestra.

Then, the war ended.

The Dumbells stays on in Mons and gave 28 performances of "Pinafore." The show was such a hit with the troops that Gen. Lipsett suggested the troupe should have a leave, adding "if I thought you could play a theatre in London, I would extend your leave."

Merton hurried to London so full of confidence that he went to see the booking agent of the Coliseum, one of the biggest theatres going. But he only got as far as the agent's secretary. London audiences weren't supposed to be interested in soldier shows.

SMASH HIT

Finally, Merton obtained a week at the Beaver Hut, the Canadian forces' club in London, where the show was such a hit that it was immediately engaged for the Victoria Palace.

One day during a performance, Merton received word that the booking agent of the Coliseum wanted to have a talk with him. He had changed his mind about soldier shows and the upshot was that Merton was able to take advantage of Gen. Lipsett's promise of an extension of the Dumbells' leave period.

The agent took all the acts he had previously engaged out of the Coliseum with the exception of the Diaghilev ballet which was scheduled to appear immediately after the Dumbells on the program. But the Dumbells were such a smash hit that the ballet troupe asked to be put at the first of the program in order that their performance would not fall too flat with the audience.

When the troupe broke up to return to their homes in various parts of Canada, Merton stayed on in England, where he organized 28 concert parties, with all expenses paid by the YMCA.

But before the Dumbells returned to Canada they had agreed to put on shows in Canada. They were waiting for Merton when he got home.

The Canadian show was organized at the Plunketts' summer cottage in Orillia and then Merton went to Toronto to arrange bookngs with the impresario, Ambrose Small, who later created a sensation when he walked out of his Rosedale home one day and was never heard of again.

ONTARIO TOUR

Merton had in mind a tour of towns the size of Orillia but Small suggested the Dumbells prepare a show which could be presented in London, Ontario. If the show went over in London, Small promised to book it into Toronto's old Grand Theatre.

The show was a smash hit and for 16 weeks it played to capacity audiences in Toronto.

When Small disappeared, Merton decided to make bookings for a trans-Canada tour and then began the famous Canadian career of the Dumbells who still hold the record for attendance at every theatre in Canada.

The show stayed together from 1919 to 1932 and was the only successful Canadian show ever to have a 12 weeks' run on Broadway. It also played the United States border cities, such as Buffalo, Rochester and Detroit.

OLD STARS

In addition to the three Plunkett brothers, the show included such stars as Red Newman, who is remembered for his characterization of a flea-harried infantryman and his singing of "Oh, It's A Lovely War," Ross Hamilton as Marjorie, the belle olf the Dumbells, Pat Rafferty and Jack McLaren.

During the summer, when the Dumbells were not touring, Merton operated the El Fresco open-air theatre at Suhnyside with Morley acting as manager. The Dumbells were used for the star turn but a girls' chorus line was added.

When the Dumbells gave their final performance at Toronto's Victoria Theatre in 1932, Al was the only one of the brothers to continue in the entertainment business. He played in Montreal and Buffalo night clubs and ran an amateur show in Montreal. Morley came to Peterborough 16 years ago and remained until his death with the exception of a short while in Trenton.

BACK TO OLD JOBS

When the Second World War broke out, the three Plunkett brothers who had been members of the Dumbell troupe returned once more to the job they knew best—entertaining the troops.

Al enlisted with the RCAF but had to quit when his health gave out. Morley and Merton were both auxiliary services officers for the Canadian Legion. Morley served in Kingston where he was in charge of entertainment for the troops stationed there.

In 1939 Merton went to England in charge of entertainment for the 1st Division. He was injured in a motor accident two years later and had to return to Canada.

When the Army Show was being formed, Merton Plunkett was called in for advice. When he learned of the size of the extravaganza that was being prepared, he gasped in amazement.

"Why the old Dumbells used to perform in village halls and barns," he remonstrated. "How are you going to pack a show like this around among the troops?"

Subsequently, the directors of the Army Show took his advice and when they reached the continent the cast was split into a number of smaller concert parties.

Spain Reforms Education In High Schools

MADRID (Reuters) — Spain is drastically revising its high school system to bring it into line with 20th century education.

One of the major innovations is a physical education and sports program, which until now has been almost completely absent from Spanish schools.

The reforms were set forth in a bill passed this week by the Cortes, Spain's corporate-style, one-chamber congress. The bill followed the lines drawn up in a conference between Gen. Francisco Franco's government and Roman Catholic leaders in Spain. The Cortes made few changes in the original pact.

The Catholic church won a major victory on one point. Government inspectors will not visit their schools—the church will name its own inspectors, whose appointments will be confirmed by Franco's minister of education.

The church also won a point on co-education. The new law forbids mixed education on secondary schools. At present boys and girls are segregated only in elementary schools.

But the church gave way on one point. Children in Catholic or any other private schools must be examined by government panels.

Church leaders — particularly those of religious orders — had wanted Catholic schools to retain the right to hold their own examinations.

One aim in the law was to put an end to 19th century methods under which, critics of the system said, children acquired prodigious memories in learning everything by rote but could not think things out for themselves.

Allied with this is the provision to introduce more recreation and spots into the austere high schools. Many Spanish children never have time to play, and underdeveloped bodies have caused great concern among health authorities.

Lately Spaniards have shown a fantastically eager interest in soccer and other sports. But health authorities say they have thrown themselves into competitions without proper bodily build-up.

The new law also sets up higher teaching standards in church and other private schools. Each high school must have a minimum of qualified teachers. At present about half the teachers in private schools have had no formal qualification for their jobs.

REMOVE ALL WAX

Before refinishing a floor, remove every trace of wax with turpentine, naphtha or benzine. No electrical appliances should be operated near the area where any of these agents are used and there should be adequate ventilation. Self-polishing-type wax can be removed with soap and very hot water. Test small area to be sure all wax is removed before doing refinishing.

NEW MOON SHAPED

LONDON, Eng.—A large hat the shape of a new moon on its face was used by Michael at Lachasse as accompaniment to his new "Jersey Lily" line. The low square neck with tiny straight cap sleeves is filled in with an organza boa. This accessory is reported to be a best-seller in the United States. Worn with long fabric gloves it contributes to a nostalgic line which has won favor with American buyers.

KEEP BRIGHT LONGER

After cleaning door knobs, hinge and other hadware, apply a thin coat of fresh white shellac to keep them bright longer.

BLACK AND WHITE COMBINE to give a touch of sophistication to this "after five" dress. A slim sheath of black velvet has a bodice of sc[illegible] white cotton lace matching the pointed collar and wide cuffs of the cutaway bolero.

MINIMIZES CLEANING

Floor covering of asphalt tile or linoleum minimizes cleaning chores. One or two cotton rugs will make most attractive additions. If the rugs are small they can be washed without any difficulty.

BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

Do you gasp, wheeze and fight for breath, so you can't get proper sleep? Templeton's RAZ-MAH capsules help you to breathe easily, relieved of wheezing and gasping. They loosen tight-packed phlegm in bronchial tubes, so it comes away easily. Sleep and work in comfort, take RAZ-MAH today. 65c, $1.35 at druggists. B-55

FLUSH DRAIN

Drain in kitchen sink should be kept clear by flushing with very hot water after every dishwashing. If it should get stopped up with grease, pour potash into the drain. It makes soft soap of the material which then goes down with hot water. Avoid caustic soda because it makes hard soap.

GREAT-GRANDPARENTS of 11 and grandparents of 26, Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Dinsdale of 186 Rubidge St. celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary Saturday at their home where they received relatives and friends. Married in St. Andrew's Church in 1903 they have lived in this district all their lives.—(Examiner Staff Photo)

Mr. and Mrs. J. Dinsdale Celebrate 50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Dinsdale, of 186 Rubidge St., grandparents of 26 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Saturday at their home.

Mrs. Dinsdale, the former Mary MacIntyre, daughter of the late Archie and Jane MacIntyre was born and educated in Keene. Following their marriage by the late Rev. Potter in St. Andrew's United Church they moved to Peterborough, where Mr. Dinsdale started to work for the CNR as a baggageman and travelled between Belleville and Toronto for 18 years.

In 1921 Mr. Dinsdale left the CNR and joined the staff of the CGE, where he was employed for 29 years as a glazier and retired in 1950. Both Mr. and Mrs. Dinsdale are members of the Knox United Church and have lived in this district all their lives.

The Dinsdales have four daughters: Mrs. Gordon Nichols (Irene) of Toronto, Mrs. William Clarke of Peterborough, Mrs. Charles McLean also of Peterborough, Mrs. Arthur Henderson (Dorothy) of Burleigh Falls and one son Carl, of Peterborough, and 26 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Dinsdale were married 50 years ago today, but actually celebrated their anniversary Saturday at their home, where they received relatives and friends, and are celebrating in a small way this evening.

Spring Time To Dress Up Your Home And Garden

Spring, now no longer a promise, but a sparkling reality is definitely here, when the first robin appears . . . the first crocus buds, and the tiniest blossoms peer from stark limbed trees.

Look around you . . . your house probably seems drab and dull, as though as gray shade has been pulled down over its gay interior.

Now is the time a wave a magic wand over the four walls of your home, and, with very little encouragement, you can entice spring indoors!

The recipe is simple: take a dash of imagination and mix well with quantities of elbow grease!

Color will serve you well . . . from floor to ceiling, lovely decorator's colors paint a new and brighter picture. The newest paints are beautiful and you can use them without further mixing. Gone are the tedious days of mixing a little red . . . a little blue . . . or perhaps a touch of burnt sienna? You actually see the colors you desire . . . and, best of all, they dry just as lovely as they are shown on the painter's sample card.

NEW SLIP-COVERS

Second only to colorful paints are new slip-covers — spring-minded in mood, budget-minded in price.

For the woman who can only gaze in numb despair at a needle, there are ready-made, handsome slip-covers, designed to fit practically any sofa or chair. Gay and colorful, they are carried in all better stores, and lift the weariest furniture right out of its winter doldrums.

And, beautiful fabrics that are actually springtime by the yard, come in bonbon colors, in gay plaids, in bold stripes, in flower-prints, in cottons and rayons—all to purchase inexpensively with a wise eye to coordinated planning of colorful rooms.

These fabrics are a happy choice for the woman who is handy with a needle and master of the sewing machine. Now, prettiest spring fabrics, have a rare affinity to soap and water, and are impervious to sunlight, keeping their crisp, bright air through many seasons to come.

REBUILDING, REPAIRING

And, for the head of the household who knows which end of the hammer to use, spring is for rebuilding and repairing. It is a time to create things—like making crates or refinishing an old table so that it glows with new life.

The yard comes in for a spring look too. The smell of the rich earth . . . the warmth of the sun . . . the good physical tiredness that comes from working outdoors all contribute to health and happiness.

Amateur gardeners bloom everywhere in the spring. Seeds and bulbs now are so wonderful, so full of zip and vitamins, they defy even the rankest beginner to daunt their will to survive!

It's fun and heart-lifting to work on your own home. Seeing it become new, fresh and beautiful, is the best spring tonic in the world.

Glass Curtains Said Useful – No Longer Indispensable

By FRANCES JAMES

While having tea with friends the other day, the subject of glass curtains came in for a good round of discussion. There were many points of view expressed. Some of my friends maintained their rooms loked bare, unfinished and looked like house cleaning time without glass curtains. Others stoutly maintained they were so much happier with their rooms, now that the glass curtains were down. And, of course, the washing and ironing problem was thoroughly aired.

It's an interesting subject and one on which most every homemaker has definite ideas. Some of us like them, others do not like them. Whichever school of thought you belong to, you will have your own reasons.

It is interesting to go back into the history of decorating and find some of the original reasons for using glass curtains. Glass curtains were commonly used in homes 50 and 60 years ago. Why? Well, there were several plausable reasons: Tho first and most important was to keep out direct sunshine and fresh air. Strong sun was disastrous to perishable dyes used in wallpapers, rugs and fabrics. The glass curtain helped to protect colors from fading. It was thought that the cool night air was injurious to health, so the heavier the curtaining the better.

THE SUGAR SCOOP BONNET is in domino straw in navy and white with a brush of red placed at one side for contrast. The hat is made in Canada for wear in the early spring.

The second reason for glass curtains was due to a family way of living. The family wished privacy, had no interest in living with the great out-of-doors brought into the living-room, and they built and decorated their homes to obscure the elements.

IDEAS CHANGE

Today many of these facts and ideas have changed. First of all, the new wallpapers are sunfast. They do not fade in strong sunlight. Pictures can be moved without fear of leaving a mark on the wallpaper. Fabric and rug which are as fade-proof as dyes can be. Glass curtains are no longer required to cut the strong manufacturers now use vat dyes sunlight from our rooms. And today doctors tell us fresh air is healthy, so we need not heavily curtain our windows to keep it out.

The modern idea is to live as much out of doors as in, as witnessed by the number of picture windows, glass walls and open designed one-storey homes. We don't strive today to keep nature out, but prefer to live as much out of door as in. This is another good reason for abolishing the glass curtain.

BUT, and this is a fact frequently forgotten by those who slavishly follow the latest decorating fads regardless of suitability, many of us have windows both large and small, which face on brick walls and undesirable scenes. Many homes face the street where passers-by can easily see in, if the windows are not covered. For these reasons, many homemakers prefer to use glass curtains.

If your home requires them, looks better with them, then regardless of fads and fashions join the throng of homemakers who use glass curtains and like them.

DOROTHY DIX:

Widowed Mother Hesitates To Write College Graduate

DEAR MISS DIX: First, I am 44 years old, have been married 20 years, but am now a widow, and have two grown children.

I was forced to leave school in the third grade, so have practically no education. Consequently, I have an inferiority complex. Still, I love to associate with educated people and find them much more stimulating company than people whose schooling is on a level with my own. Some day I'd like to remarry, but know I would never be satisfied with anyone who wasn't educated. I maintain a well-ordered house, am a church member, careful of my appearance, and am now clerking in a store. I have met a very nice man, a college graduate, who seems to like me, too. When he travels, which is part of his business, I am afraid to write him because my letters are so poorly composed. I'm too embarrassed to go to school in this town where everyone knows me.

MRS. M. M.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You need someone to give you a good shake and get some of the inferiority out of your system. Listen to your son, who has given you very sound advice on the subject.

AN ENCOURAGING WORD

The idea that you write poor letters is ridiculous. The one I received would have done credit to anyone of much higher schooling, and your handwriting is neat and legible. There's no mark of illiteracy about any part of your letter, or of the personality it reflects.

You are right in aspiring high in friendships; your discrimination in choosing friends could be flattering to those you choose.

If you feel you need more schooling—and everyone can use more—don't hesitate because your search for knowledge would make you conscpicous. Here again, your actions will win the esteem of the people you know. Why not try schools, such as those conducted by the Y.W.C.A., where you can attend intensive courses in English or any other subject you wish? My suggestions would be for courses in the appreciation of literature, art or music. They'll provide background material that will put you at ease in any conversation.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Have you any idea how I could go about getting a job in radio, singing hillbilly songs? I am very good at this type of singing. I'm 20, with average looks, but a good personality.

T. Y.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: With hillbilly songs so popular, someone should be willing to listen to you, at least. Write the radio stations that specialize in this type of music, or write to the directors of your favorite hillbilly programs, asking for an audition.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Last summer I was going with a very nice boy, but through a series of misunderstandings, too complicated to enter into here, we broke up. He says, "hello," when he sees me, but never asks me out. I was thinking of asking him to my sophomore hop (he's a junior). However a senior at our school has been quite interested in me and has asked me to every dance or affair in school. I've gone to them all, now he has asked me to the senior prom. I've accepted, but I don't like him. I suppose I should ask him to our sophomore hop, but I don't want to.

JOANNE

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You are a very ungracious young lady to accept so many nice dates from the senior, then begrudge him the one opportunity you have to repay his invitations. If you don't care for him, in all fairness you should not go out with him, especially on important occasions. If you don't ask him to your dance, you may be sure his feelings will be hurt, and he will probably never ask you anywhere again. Does the prospect please you? If so, the greater kindness would be to let him down now before he becomes too fond of you.

THE TUCKED BOSOM is news and there is added a double collar with fine embroidery. The plain push-up sleeves on this blouse end in points.

Congregation Missionaries

St. James YPU meeting Tuesday evening was highlighted by the showing of colored slides with commentary by Miss Jean Hammond on her trip to Trinidad and Bermuda at Christmas time. Of particular interest were those showing Misses Connie Wagar and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kitney and family who have gone from St. James' congregation as missionaries to Trinidad. Two minutes silence was observed in memory of the late Queen Mary. Miss Muriel Hall had an interesting reading on brotherhood. The meeting opened with a recreation period led by Dan McClennaghan, followed with a worship service and closed with a sing-song led by Ron Davis and refreshments.

✧ ✧ ✧

Children's Theatre Party

About 30 grls and boys of the YWCA Children's Theatre enjoyed a season-closing party Tuesday after school at the Y. A great deal of merriment marked this event. The entertainment highlight was when some of the young players and their friends presented an amusing play, "The Dragon Who Liked Cake." The program commenced with refreshments being served by Mrs. Hugh Waddell and Mrs. J. M. King. Mothers of the players presented Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell with two volumes of plays as mark of appreciation of their work with the theatre the past season. Miranda Davies and Rosalind Ross, who will not be with the theatre this fall and who will be greatly missed, each received a small parting gift from fellow players. Games of a dramatic nature were played for the balance of the party time.

The program opened with a lively sing song led by Mrs. B. S. Morwood. Quartettes and a piano duet by CGIT members were much enjoyed as were the solos rendered by Mrs. W. Hepburn. Brownies Presentations

First St. Andrew's Brownies Pack had an interesting ceremony of presentations held in the Sunday school auditorium. First, Janet Elliott was enrolled in the pack. Afterward, 10 Brownies stood on the golden carpet at the toadstool to receive their golden bars from Brown Owl Mrs. J. McLeod. The girls who earned this bar are Pamela Hocking, Mary Louise Bateman, Betty Fairburn, Carol King, Roseanne Goldbach, Barbara Goldbach, Jackaline Fulton, Judy Lovitz, Marybeth Langan, and Nancy Bacon. Proficiency badges were then presented to the following Brownies: Minstrel badge, Jane Coleman, Janet McLeod, Norma Perry, Diane Ford, Ann Reid; collector's badge, Janet McLeod and Ann Reid. All the Brownies were given the Coronation Tribute badge as they are working as a pack in this effort. Mrs. R. Whalon was guest speaker for this special occasion and her subject was "Brownie badges." Mrs. E. J. Macdonald of the local Girl Guides Association was present. Refreshments were served to the parents and brownies by the Brownies' Mothers' Auxiliary. This social half-hour was convened by Mrs. J. Young and Mrs. L. Bateman.

THE YOUNG CANADIAN MISS takes inspiration from the west in her denim pedal pushers and bra top. Gay Togs laces the pushers and outlines them in red to match the collar and lacing of the top.

Change Name Aux. Association

A special meeting was held on Monday afternoon in St. Andrew's church parlours of what has been known as Association of Auxiliaries for Scouts and Guides, but which from now on will be correctly titled "Executive Board for Auxiliaries for Scouts and Guides."

Secretary Mrs. E. J. MacDonald, read her report of the auxiliaries session at the area conference held March 21st in the Normal School. It was announced that there will be a plastic demonstration in St. Luke's Hall, Wednesday evening, April 22nd, to raise money towards the expenses of sending a Rover to the Rover Moot in Switzerland this summer.

It was decided that instead of having a summer picnic of the combined auxiliaries, there will be a fall tea and rally early in October. A report was read by Mrs. Pollock, lady representative to the local assocaiton. She announced that there would soon be a paper drive by the Scouts.

The next meeting will be held in St. Paul's sunday school, on Monday afternoon, May 4th.

Laubach Method Used In Teaching

LAKEFIELD (ENS) — "Education in Africa" was the subject dealt with by Miss Irene Madill on Monday evening in reviewing the study book, "Along African Trails" at the meeting of the Missionary and Service Club held at the home of Mrs. A. W. Stewart.

Of particular interest was the explanation of the Laubach method of teaching. This method is used in many countries such as India, Southern Asia, Mexico and Central America as well as Africa. The Laubach method has for its motto, "Each one teach one." Each person who attends these seasonable schools is expected to return home and not only continue his or her education, but teach others also.

"When one considers that the population of the area served by the missions of the United Church in Angola is 500,000; that 85% of African education is provided by missions and that 30,000 children and young people attend these schools, we feel justly proud of this splendid contribution that missionaries are making to the life of the Africans," concluded Miss Madill.

Mrs. Theo Down was in charge of the worship service. The scripture was read by Mrs. L. G. Poole, Mrs. R. C. McCracken gave the meditations and Mrs. S. Whiting led in prayer. Mrs. George Tanner and Miss Jean Spence sang a duet, accompanied by Mrs. T. Payton and Mrs. M. Calberry gave a reading, "Easter Thoughts."

The president, Mrs. W. H. Fife, presided for the business session.

Mrs. Edison Foster reported the proceeds from the recently held St. Patrick's tea were $49.20 and thanked all who had co-operated to make it such a success.

An invitation was extended by Mrs. Robert McCracken to all the ladies to attend a beauty demonstration being held under the auspices of the Club on Wednesday, April 8 in the auditorium of the new high school.

Assisting the hostess in serving tea were Mrs. J. Kellar, Mrs. C. Chittick and Mrs. R. Maidment.

Mothers Guests Of Mission Band

OMEMEE (ENS) — The Wide-Awake Mission Band of Trinity United Church had their mothers as guests at their Easter meeting Monday afternoon, which was held in the basement of the church. Forty-eight boys and girls were present. In the absence of president Jerry Nelson, past president Homer Brooks presided. Darlene Nelson was secretary.

Quiet music preceded the worship which consisted of Easter Bible readings, prayers, Easter and missionary hymns, and a thankoffering dedicated to hospital, school and village work in Chissamba, Angola. The Bible verses were read by June Middleton, Yvonne Parker, Beverly Smith and Loraine Flannagan, and the prayers by Beth Saulter, Arleen Decker and Susan Ross. The Easter story was told by Mission Band Superintendent Mrs. Vaughan, covering the crucifixion, resurrection and ascension of Christ.

In the program following recitations were given by Kennie Smith and Barbara Johnston. A playlet, "Ringing the Bell for the Bush School," depicting some of the customs and the outlook of African villagers in Angola, was presented by Isabel Sibley, Homer Brooks, Grant Hart, Howard Robertson, Terry Ruttle, Stanley Nelson, Larry Whetung, Glen Hyland, Marilyn McQuade and Judy Whetung. There was also an "African Girls' Song" sung with motions and in costume, by Crystal James, Darlene Nelson, Judy Whetung, Barbara Johnson, Marilyn McQuade, Isabel Sibley and Carolyn Morrison.

The meeting closed with the Band's unison benediction, after which refreshments were served.

Cider Gravy On Ham Slice

CIDER GRAVY

2 tablespoons fat
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon ac'cent
Few grains pepper
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
Dash tabasco
Cider from baking pan

Melt fat, blend in flour, ac'cent, pepper, mustard and tabasco. Measure cider from pan, add enough cider or water to make 2 cups, add to saucepan. Cook, stirring, over low heat until smooth and thickened. Add salt if necessary. Makes about 2 cups gravy.

Select a centre slice of tender ready-to-eat ham, about 1½ inches thick. Score fat edge at half-inch intervals. Brown on both sides in a little hot fat. Place in baking pan; sprinkle top with ½ teaspoon ac'cent. Pour 2 cups sweet apple cider into baking pan; bake in moderate over (350 F.) 45 minutes, basting with cider in pan at 15-minute intervals. Make gravy with cider remaining in pan. Garnish with walnut-stuffed steamed pitted prunes. Makes 6 servings.

STRIPES ARE WORKED both horizontally and vertically in viscose blend. The self belt on the jacket is worn just above the slash pockets. The skirt on this Canadian fashion is in the plain blend fabric.

FUNNEL COAT

NEW YORK — Indicating one spring coat trend, Ben Zuckerman shows a funnel coat which flares out to a wide hemline. This is exactly the reverse of the lines in Monte-Sano & Pruzan's wedge-shaped coat, which starts with broad shoulders and tapers down to a narrow hem. Coats, in the main, give a taller, slimmer, and more graceful look.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Serve Golden Glazed Ham On Easter Dinner Menu

Easter is such a joyous season. Christians flock to church, even the tepid ones, to worship the risen Christ.

Their devotion overflows in all directions into florist shops, millinery salons, candy and butcher shops.

So we are going to suggest a menu that one way or another embraces them all.

After you come home from the Easter service you take off your new spring bonnet, and put it carefully away in its brand new box. Then you or one of your loving helpers set the table, centering it with the beautiful pot of bulbs or bouquet of spring flowers that your loving family gave you for an Easter present. Little favor baskets containing tiny Easter eggs are put at each place. Then at the right moment, when everybody is dying of hunger, you bear in a golden glazed and garnished ham, which has been quietly baking in your faithful controlled oven, while you were worshipping.

Looks as if you have your work cut out for you, my girl. I ought to know. But we love it, don't we?

EASTER DINNER MENU

Pineapple Juice
Glazed Ham
Rosy Cinnamon Apples
Parsleyed New Potatoes
Green Peas
Moulded Fruit Salads
Banana Cake, Golden Frosting
Coffee.

The menu looks Easter-y, even in print, doesn't it?

GLAZED HAM

I will assume that you are going to buy a 10 or 11 lb. boneless ham in a casing. In the trade they call it Visking casing. When you bake a ham you remove this casing. (When you boil it, you leave it on.) Place ham, fat side up, on rack in uncovered roaster. Bake at 325 degrees Fahr. exactly. Bake it about 19 minutes to the pound. Thus a 10-lb. ham requires about 190 minutes which is 3 hours and 10 minutes. Since this is going to be glazed one-half hour before baking time is up, drain off the fat. You must do this, for glaze that is mixed with fat is dull and does not stick to the ham well. The glaze is made of 1 cup brown sugar, and ½ cup orange juice. Use only part of the glaze for the first application and save the rest for basting the ham at about 10-minute intervals until the ham is a glistening golden brown.

Transfer the ham to a hot platter and garnish it with the Rosy Cinnamon Apples, which are baked halves of Spy apples, colored and flavored by topping each one with a few tiny red cinnamon candies, which of course melt while the apples are baking, and color and flavor the pulp.

Of course, you know I expect you to serve the potatoes, since they are new, with the skins on. You parsley them by spooning over them in the bowl a mixture of lots of finely chopped parsley in melted butter.

MOULDED FRUIT SALADS

These may be served either as individual moulds on lettuce with a little whipped cream dressing, or moulded in one large dish and spooned into serving glasses. Pour 1 cup boiling water over 1 package prepared packaged lime gelatin (lemon, if you prefer it). Stir until dissolved. Add 2 tablespoons fresh lemon or lime juice. Add 1 or 2 cups well-drained and cut up fresh or canned fruits. But do not use fresh pineapple—it contains an enzyme which prevents gelatin from setting. Grapefruit and orange sections and apricot slices are good. If you can buy them in your community, drained canned mandarin oranges are a delicious addition. Add a few sliced green maraschino cherries. Pour into moulds or mould to chill.

STREAMLINED BANANA CAKE

Sift together 2½ cups sifted cake flour, 1 2/3 cups sugar, 1¼ teaspoons baking powder, 1¼ teaspoons baking soda, 1 teaspoon salt. Add 2/3 cup very soft shortening, 1/3 cup buttermilk, and 1¼ cups smoothly mashed ripe banana. Now beat this batter for two minutes until perfectly smooth. Now add 2 large eggs and another 1/3 cup buttermilk, and if desired 2/3 cup chopped nuts. Beat 2 minutes. Pour into greased and paper-lined 13x9-inch pan and bake at 350 degrees Fahr. for about 45 minutes.

My space is filled. I'll have to give you the frosting tomorrow.

CAMEO PINK in a narrow pillbox has a band of ribbon separating the brim and crown. On this all-Canadian fashion there is placed tiny roses at either side of the hairline.

New Pipe Line Operating By December 31

TORONTO (CP)—Interprovincial Pipe Line system will be extended this summer from Superior, Wisconsin, to Sarnia, and is expected to be in operation by Dec. 31.

With granting of various government permissions for constructions, T. S. Johnston, president of Interprovincial Pipe Line Company today confirmed that the extension will be built. The cost will be $7,000,000.

The line has operated, since 1950, from Edmonton to Superior, and the 635-mile extension to Sarnia will give it a total length of 1,765 miles, the world's longest crude oil pipe line.

The extension, Mr. Johnston said, will enable shipment of western crude oil to Ontario the year round, breaking "the bottleneck caused by the cessation of tanker operations on the Great Lakes during the winter months."

Deliveries also will be made in Wisconsin and Minnesota and take-off points will be provided on the line in case refineries in Michigan wish to buy western crude.

"Big Inch" pipe, 30 inches in diameter, will be used in the extension, and all but six miles will be in the United States and constructed by Interprovincial's subsidiary, Lakehead Pipe Line Co., Inc.

The route will be from Superior in an easterly direction, across Michigan's upper peninsula, then south, across the straits of Mackinac, thence to the Saginaw-Bay City area, and then southeasterly to Sarnia. It will cross the St. Clair river to Sarnia near Port Huron.

Interprovincial and Lakehead have designed Canadian Bechtel, Ltd., Toronto, and Bechtel Corporation of San Francisco, as their agents to co-ordinate the project.

The extension, with one pump station at Superior, will have an initial capacity of 120,000 barrels a day. By construction of five additional pump stations, ultimate capacity can be increased to 300,000 barrels a day.

Leg Fractured As Auto Rolls

Two youths were injured Tuesday night, one seriously, when their car was totally wrecked on Highway 7A, two miles west of Cavan, about 8:30 p.m.

Robert C. Breadman, 19, 115 Hazlitt Street, the driver, is in Civic Hospital with a compound fracture of the left thigh, cuts on the head and face and undetermined head injuries. His condition was reported satisfactory today.

Robert A. Driver, 20, of Bethany, owner of the car but a passenger at the time of the accident, was treated in the outpatients' department for cuts and bruises on the hands and face and a sprained ankle.

Police said it appeared that the car had gone out of control on a hill, hit a telephone pole on the driver's wrong side of the highway and turned over in the ditch.

OPP Constable Stanley Judson of Cobourg is investigating.

Fire Fighters Protest No Representation

TORONTO (CP) — The Corps of Canadian Overseas Fire Fighters, which battled side by side with British firemen during air raids in the Second World War, protests it will not be represented at the Coronation.

Secretary of the corps, Herbert R. Magill, said here today that members from across Canada recommended Gordon E. Huff, OBE., MM., head of the corps during the war, represent it at the Coronation.

"Although the government is paying the way of reserve regiment officers no such move has been made to send a representative of the fire fighters," said Mr Magill.

Mr. Huff who is now fire chief at Brantford left the RCAF, in which he was a flight lieutenant, to lead the corps.

Bitter Fighting Along Front On Small Scale

SEOUL (AP)—Small-scale but bitter fighting erupted along the Korean battle front today as UN troops anxiously awaited the outcome of Communist truce overtures.

Most combat veterans were hopeful but wary.

The 5th air force reported Allied Sabre jets blasted 33 Red MiG jets out of Korean skies for only two Sabres lost in aerial combat in March.

The monthly air summary showed, however, that 18 Allied planes were lost to all causes—two to MiGs, seven to Red ground fire and nine to other causes.

Army Secretary Robert Stevens, Gen. Mark Clark, Far East commander; and Lt.-Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, 8th army commander, toured the battle zone and visited an observation post overlooking Communist-held Old Baldy hill north of Seoul.

VISITS DIVISIONS

Stevens, in Korea to inspect the combat zone and for a first hand survey of ammunition supplies, visited several U. S. divisions. At one ordnance ammunition company, the secretary was told the ammunition supply at the moment was above normal.

When he returns to Washington, Stevens is expected to testify before a Senate sub-committee investigating reports of ammunition shortages in Korea.

U. S. marines on the western front turned back four small Red attacks Tuesday night.

Contract Talks Break Down For Sugar Beets

CHATHAM (CP) — Negotiations for a 1953 contract between the Canada and Dominion Sugar Company and the Ontario beet growers marketing board broke down here Tuesday.

A. W. McIntyre, assistant to the company president, said Canada-Dominion had made "a firm offer to the growers of exactly the same contract scale as last year without any change in contract terms." He said the growers turned it down "and there the matter stands."

R. O'Neil, secretary of the growers' group, said the farmers required 50 cents a ton over last year's contract price and that the initial company offer was 50 cents below the 1952 contract.

Mr. McIntyre said that while former contracts have been negotiated later in the year, growers must plan their crops and "without contracts within the next week I see no chance of a beet crop this year."

He said the company "still has over 40,000,000 pounds of the 1952 beet sugar on hand and it is being marketed in as orderly a fashion as possible without attempting to compete price-wise with Cuban imported refined sugar."

He said the producers "entered into contract negotiations with some measure of hesitancy due to the continuing flow of Cuban refined sugar into markets normally supplied by beet sugar and in the disappointment that this threat had not been removed following the assurance Trade Minister Howe gave to producers of sugar beets and the people of Canada Feb. 11 in the House of Commons."

"It had been hoped," he said, "that before contracting time, steps would have been taken to stop imports of Cuban refined sugar into southwestern Ontario. Unfortunately this has not been done and both growers and the sugar company fear the effects upon the industry of these continuing shipments."

Growers planted some 32,000 acres of sugar beets during 1952.

Mrs. Jones, a chronic diabetic who had lost both legs by amputation, was electrocuted in her bathtub.

Her husband tied an exposed lamp cord around her wrist and then switched on the electricity. He failed in an attempt to take his own life. He told police he and his wife previously tried suicide together.

Jones faces a possible maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

350-Mile Grind, Skill Test To Feature Sport Car Rally

The first sports car rally will be held Friday by the Peterborough Motor Sports club when about 20 cars from Peterborough, Lindsay and Toronto start a 350 mile grind at 10 p.m.

The course, with six check points, will be a test of cars and driving ability. Drivers, two to each car, will have to maintain a steady speed that will cover sections of the course with set limits and at the same time not exceed the usual highway speed limit.

Start of the grind will be made from the parking lot at city hall, with small cars starting at 10 p.m. and leaving at two-minute intervals. Large cars will start at 11 p.m. and depart at similar intervals.

ROUTE OF DRIVE

The cars will be checked in at Kaladar on Highway 7 at the end of the first lap of the course. From there the route goes north on Highway 41 and connects with Highway 60 to Barry's Bay. The route then is laid down Highway 62 to Bancroft and then on to Peterborough on Highway 28. The first cars are expected to return to Peterborough about 9:27 a.m. Saturday.

Throughout the course there will be men stationed to check the speeds of the cars as they pass. If a car if found exceeding the speed limit and if it fails to cover a section in the prescribed time, marks are chalked up against it. The car or cars, that completes the course with a perfect score, wins.

Last January there was a larger scale rally that passed through Peterborough. It followed a course that made a wide circuit around Lake Ontario.

CONSIDERABLE TEST

Friday's rally sponsored by the local club will be a good deal shorter, but will be a considerable test nonetheless.

Many of the cars participating will be English, but entries are not restricted to them nor to members of the club. The rally is open to any make of car. Already entered are representatives of most car dealers in the city. Entries from Toronto include, among others, a Volkswagen, a Nash Rambler, and a Jaguar. A large percentage of the cars that travelled through Peterborough in the January rally were MGs.

At the end of the rally competitors will be subjected to special tests at the exhibition grounds under the direction of an experienced competition driver, Wally Mason. The results of these tests will have a bearing on the placing of the contestants and could determine the eventual winners.

Young Canadians Chosen To Attend The Coronation

LONDON (CP)—A Canadian contingent of 150 young people, chosen from across the country, is attending the Coronation next June under the auspices of the Commonwealth Youth Movement.

The contingent will be the second since the CYM was organized at the 1937 coronation, on the initiative of the Overseas Education League of Canada. The latter organization handles the Canadian phase of the program.

Compared with the group of 330 high school students sent in 1937, this year's total of young men and women drawn from universities, youth clubs and public and private schools will be much smaller, because of the tight shipping situation.

But it still will be the largest group at the Commonwealth gathering, although other countries haven't specified their contributions yet.

BUSY PROGRAM

The visitors will watch the Coronation procession and take part in a host of other events, including a rally at London's Royal Albert Hall.

Included in Canada's party is the chapel choir of Appleby College, Oakville, and the girl's choir of Bishop Strachan School, Toronto, scheduled to appear in a number of concerts plus cathedral and church services and programs.

Officials say this will be the first Commonwealth visit by school choirs.

The contingents will be quartered in the 300-capacity Grange farm, Britain's finest camp located at Chigwell, Essex, on London's outskirts. There, amid rolling countryside dotted with playing fields, the young Coronation guests will eat, sleep and play between excursions.

Typical outing will be a special matinee June 10 of "The Taming of the Shrew" at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon.

Officials stress that this special feature, like many other activities planned, is open to non-group youngsters from Canada who make arrangements to attend soon enough.

The Canadians will arrive in three liners at Southampton, Liverpool and Greenock, Scotland, between May 20 and May 29 and will stay about a month.

Gilbert Roland Happiest Man In Films

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The happiest man in Hollywood? Gilbert Roland.

The Latin actor seems to have found the secret of lasting youth. He readily admits to being 47 years old, yet he has the face and figure of a far younger man. He also has a youthful outlook on life, but with a calm, deep philosophy that can come only with years of good living.

Career-wise, he is the envy of his fellow actors. In the past five years, he has gone from picture to picture, delivering finely-etched performances such as in "My Six Convicts" and "The Bad and the Beautiful." Yet he doesn't have the rigors and the insecurity of being a star.

"I don't want to be a star," he blandly declares. "I've had it before, and I know what it's like. Let the young kids have it now."

LEAVES FOR FLORIDA

At present he is finishing up "The Diamond Queen" with Arlene Dahl and Fernando Lamas. This week he leaves for Florida to portray a sponge fisherman in "12-Mile Reef" with Robert Wagner and Terry Moore. Then he goes to Spain to appear with Claudette Colbert in "That Lady," which Katherine Cornell did on the stage.

Of course, the picture business was not always as rosy for Roland. He was a big hit in the '20s, when Latin lovers had their heyday on the screen. His star faded with the advent of the grapefruit-in-the-face style of movie lover. After he got out of the army in the Second World War, he rode the range in the Cisco Kid series.

"No producer wanted to hire me," he recalled. "They said I was a Western Actor."

HONEST ANSWERS

John Huston changed all that. He interviewed the actor for a role in "We Were Strangers." "Can You sing?" Roland replied he couldn't. "Can you play a guitar?" The answer was again negative.

So Roland got the job as a Cuban revolutionary who played the guitar and sang. Huston made him get a haircut, and the director even wielded the scissors himself. Roland submitted to all this, and the results brought a revival of his film career. He has made 15 pictures in the last five years, and turned down more.

72,000 Pheasants Distributed Annually

TORONTO (CP)—The lands department distributes 72,000 pheasants annually throughout Southern Ontario, the Ontario legislature's lands and forests committee was told Tuesday.

Dr. W. J. K. Harkness, chief of the department's fisn and wildlife division, said tne birds are distributed through township authorities in Southern Ontario from Lake Huron to the Ottawa river. Of the 72,000 some 44,000 are chicks, 25,000 birds are six to eight weeks old and 3,000 are adults.

The birds are raised on a contract basis and cost usually $55,000 a year altogether, he said.

Harold Scott ,acting lands minister, said Monday in the legislature the government has spent $230,000 since 1948 on the pheasant chicks. He replied to a question by Albert Wren (Lib-Lab. Kenora).

Conciliation Report Will Be Accepted

STRATFORD (CP)—Striking employees at the Swift Canadian Company here indicated Tuesday they would accept a majority report handed down recently by a conciliation board in an attempt to settle their wage dispute which began March 6.

The action of local 307, United Packinghouse Workers of America (CIO-CCL), on behalf of the striking workers came after union representatives turned down a 7½-cent increase offered Tuesday by the company.

The majority report recommended a nine-cent hourly wage increase, half of it retroactive to April, 1952. A minority report, signed by the company's nominee, proposed six cents an hour, of which 3½ was retroactive.

Seek To End Controls

ST. THOMAS (CP)—City council Tuesday night adopted a recommendation that application be made to the rentals administrator in Toronto to have the city of St. Thomas exempted from rent controls. Ald. Jack Stirling, chairman of a committee appointed to investigate the matter, said of 21 replies received to a published advertisement no opinion was expressed in favor of retaining controls.

Suspenders Save Life

CASTELFRANCO VENETO, Italy (AP)—A 34-year-old farmer, Antonio Sartoretto, says he's going to wear suspenders for the rest of his life.

Why?

He fell from a barn window Monday and his loose suspenders caught on a window hook They held him dangling 30 feet off the ground until relatives rescued him.

Four-Year Sentence

BELLEVILLE (CP)—James Kennedy, 24, of Belleville, now serving a three-year sentence for shopbreaking in Toronto, was sentenced Tuesday to four years in penitentiary on six charges of shopbreaking, shopbreaking with intent, housebreaking and theft. Magistrate T. Y. Wills said the second sentence will run "concurrently with and continue after" the Toronto sentence.

Fail To See Red Influence

TORONTO (CP)—Kites are not necessarily communistic. A white dove of peace need not be red.

This, in effect, is the decision of a group of Toronto artists who announced Tuesday they found no sign of Communist influence in the selection of about 75 paintings on display this week at the 1953 exhibition of the Canadian Society of Graphic Arts.

They made the examination at the invitation of the society after William Newcombe, past president of the society and a Toronto painter, said last week that communist ideology influenced the choice of some of the paintings. He said this influence would hardly be noticed by laymen but to an artist it would be "plain as the nose on his face."

For example, he said, at least one painting showed kites and kites are Communist symbols. And a dove is the symbol of the Communist world peace congress.

"The committee failed to see any intention to manipulate the exhibition for Communist propaganda purposes," the group of artists said in their report.

Elephant Killer

BEIRA, East Africa (AP) — A rogue white elephant Tuesday made its second killing of a white man in the area of Vila Pery, 100 miles from here. The rogue apparently was turned out by his herd after losing one tusk in a fight. His new victim was a German, Horst Rohe, 38. His African guide, who escaped, identified the elephant as the one that killed another white man in the same area.

An unusual instructional program covering the principles of automotive engine operations and servicing, was presented at the Empress Hotel for White Rose Dealers by Ethyl Corp. engineers. Ethyl Corp. is the world's largest manufacturer and marketer of anti-knock compounds which petroleum refinery use to improve motor and aviation gasoline.

Known as the "Ethyl Product-Sales Clinic," the presentation stressed the importance of correct lubrication and proper engine adjustment and service in assuring motorists maximum fuel economy, trouble-free performance and long engine life. The White Rose Dealers were shown the most frequent causes of mechanical troubles and how to prevent them.

Jailed 18 Months On 4 Charges Forging Cheques

John Cross, 23, no fixed address, was given an 18 months definite and one year indefinite reformatory term when he appeared before Magistrate W. R. Philp Tuesday on four charges of forgery.

The charges were laid after Cross had taken merchants in Bridgenorth, Norwood and Lakefield for a total of $89.50 in cash and merchandise. He pleaded guilty to the offences.

Pleading guilty later to five additional charges of forgery and four of false pretences before county Judge John De N. Kennedy, he was remanded until next Wednesday.

The charges dealt with in Magistrate's Court were laid for offences committed on March 21 and March 26. According to OPP Constable John Cawood, Cross cashed cheques made out in false names and in the amounts of $25.50 and $9.50 with Robert Gordon and Richard Dallman of Norwood on March 21.

On March 26 he received merchandise from Samuel Bell of Bridgenorth amounting to $28 with the aid of a forged cheque and received $26.50 in cash from Clarence Foster of Lakefield.

In handing out the sentence, Magistrate Philip said he was sending the defendant to the reformatory "where you may have the opportunity of learning a trade. I suggest you do so."

The charges against Cross read by Judge Kennedy involved writing and passing cheques last December amounting to $124.90 and forging a fifth which he attempted to pass in Loblow's amounting to $30.75.

Decide PoW Talks To Begin In Panmunjom On Monday

Vishinsky Shifts 7-Year Stand On Arms In U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Rapid-fire moves in the new Soviet peace offensive gave United Nations delegates much to study over today and little hope for rest as they started a five-day Easter recess. The United States and Western allies joined all other nations outside the Soviet bloc in probing warily the succession of dramatic Red actions of the last few days. One observer said it looked like a "surprise-a-day campaign." Delegates wondered if another peace shot would be fired today on another front.

The latest surprise here came Wednesday when Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky, recently returned from Moscow talks with the new regime of Prime Minister Georgi M. Malenkov, scrapped for the first time in seven years his efforts to introduce harsh words against the West into the formal records on disarmament.

Topmost in the minds of all diplomats are the fresh proposals by Red China for a solution of the deadlocked Korean prisoner-of-war issue—apparently along the West-demanded principles of non-forcible repatriation.

GET NEW BOOST

This action got a new boost Wednesday when Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov announced the Kremlin's full support to the offer, indicating to the world that it is a serious move to end the war in Korea.

Efforts by India's V. K. Krishna Menon to get the UN assembly to seize immediately the new Red overtures as the basis for reopening Korean talks here were sidestepped by the assembly's recess.

Vishinsky's version of the "soft approach" is an amendment he submitted to the Western-backed resolution on disarmament scheduled for consideration when the assembly reconvenes on Tuesday.

The Western plan, which lays down a suggested disarmament program for the UN disarmament commission to consider in its year-round negotiations, was approved last month by the assembly's political committee. The same program was approved in 1952 by the assembly but was stymied in the commission by Russian opposition.

REJECT ALTERNATE PROGRAM

The political committee last month rejected, as it has before, an alternate Soviet program.

The usual Soviet tactic, after defeat in the committee, is to roll out its defeated resolution and demand that the full assembly reverse the committee decision against it.

This time, however, the Russians asked the assembly only to delete from the Western resolution the parts the Soviets had voted against in a paragraph-by-paragraph ballot in the committee, but to leave in the working part ordering the disarmament commission to continue its work toward finding a solution.

Nor did Vishinsky's amendment make any mention of a rejected Soviet resolution charging the U.S., Britain and France with trying to turn the disarmament commission into a Western espionage agency.

This seemingly conciliatory approach surprised Western diplomats, but they noted that it contained no indication the Russians would not try to push through their own ideas on disarmament when the commission gets back to work.

Organized Ring Said Smuggling Aliens Into U.S.

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—Federal authorities said today they believe an organized ring of smugglers is operating in this area and is bringing aliens into the United States for a price.

Arthur J. Karnuth, district director of the U. S. immigration and naturalization service, said that more than 1,000 aliens have been picked up in the area in the last year by the border patrol.

Federal district court records showed that one young Italian charged with illegal entry claimed he had paid $50 to be rowed across the Niagara river from Canada. Karnuth, the U. S. marshal's office and the U. S. district attorney's office agreed that the case parallels others that have come to their attention.

"There's no doubt there are smugglers working here and giving these people help," Karnuth said. "We're investigating every lead we can get."

He added that in several cases, aliens picked up here have admitted arranging their entrance into the U. S. before leaving Europe for Canada. But he said the aliens in most cases were reluctant to identify any of the people who had helped them get into the United States.

Canada and the U. S. are separated by the Niagara river between Lakes Erie and Ontario, a distance of about 30 miles. Karnuth said the alien smuggling operations appear to be centred in the lower river, between Niagara Falls and Lake Ontario.

Pilgrims Pay Jerusalem Visit

JERUSALEM (Reuters)—Thousands of Christian pilgrims, bearing heavy wooden crosses, on Good Friday will retrace the steps of Christ on the way to Calvary

The traditional procession through the old city to Jerusalem will stop to kneel on the cobbles at each of the 14 stations which commemorate incidents that took place as Christ went to his crucifixion on the hill of Golgotha.

Along the Via Dolorosa—the way of the cross—groups of pilgrims from many countries will pray and chant as the procession winds its way to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre on Calvary.

On Easter Sunday the "dragon teeth" barriers and mines at the Jaffa Gate between the Arab old city and the Israeli-held quarter—grim reminders of the Holy Land fighting—will be removed and members of the diplomatic corps in full regalia will walk to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

There a pontifical high mass will be conducted by the Roman Catholic patriarch of the Holy Land, Msgr. Alberto Gori.

Report Two Men Swept Over Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Reports of a rowboat containing two men being swept over Niagara Falls Monday night were strengthened today when a wrecked punt was found at the bottom of the falls and the same type of craft was reported missing at Fort Erie, 10 miles upriver.

Major Hill pulled the wrecked boat out of the river below the Canadian falls early today.

Police and U. S. Coast Guard officials swept the upper river with searchlights Monday night after residents in the area reported seeing a boat drifting downstream. However, they could find nothing.

No fishermen have been reported missing in this district and until today, officials were of the opinion it was false alarm.

Sell OHA Franchise To Kenneth Soble

HAMILTON (CP) — Sale of the Barton street arena and the senior OHA franchise for operation of the Hamilton Tigers club was announced today at a meeting of the board of control.

Kenneth D. Soble, new owner of the arena and franchise, told the board of plans for erecting a new auditorium-arena.

The building will have a seating capacity of approximately 4,000 for hockey games and other ice attractions and more than 6,000 for symphony concerts, dramatic productions, variety shows, musical comedy presentations, and boxing and wrestling.

Abandon Attempt Prosecute Policeman

MONTREAL (CP) — Police authorities who wanted to prosecute a sweepstake-winning veteran of heMontreal force gave up the struggle today and released him on pension.

Last November Lt. Lucien Charbonneau received word he had won $46,500 on a sweepstake ticket. The veteran of 28 years service submitted his resignation in January and applied for his pension.

Police authorities, however, said since sweepstakes are illegal they would prosecute Lt. Charbonneau. They found action would have o be taken within six months of the ticket's purchase. They could not find out when he bought it.

See Kremlin Plan To Stall Allied Defence

Cold War Tactics Reversed As Soviet Begins To Consolidate

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Russia's snowballing peace offensive piled up evidence today that the Kremlin has reversed its cold war tactics in a bold plan to stall the West's defence buildup and crumble the anti-Soviet world's unity.

Responsible officials and western diplomats here increasingly voice the belief that this is a major Soviet aim.

They see the situation creating a critical problem of leadership for the Eisenhower administration, which must be ready to join in negotiating settlements with Moscow while maintaining the military power that enables it to negotiate from strength.

At the same time, some authorities suggest the situation is an opportunity for Allied governments to create a stability which the Soviets may not hereafter be able to upset. This view is based on the theory that if the Kremlin loses its post-war momentum of aggressive expansion for a substantial time, it may not be able to get moving again.

CONSTANTLY REVALUE

In the face of the high speed Soviet manoeuvres recently, the administration is confronted with the need constantly to sound out and re-assess the immediate purpose of specific proposals as well as over-all intentions.

Assisting in this task evidently will be the primary test of ambassador Charles E. Bohlen, President Eisenhower's new envoy to Moscow, who is due in the Russian capital by April 10.

Russia's latest manoeuvre was to submit to the United Nations Wednesday new disarmament proposals which appear somewhat similar to western proposals denounced by the Soviets previously. Among other things, they indicate willingness to engage in a balanced reduction of armed forces instead of demanding a percentage cut which would leave Russia with an overbalance of forces as compared with the West.

South Koreans Halt Attack

SEOUL (AP)—A Chinese Communist battalion—about 750 men—hit the South Korean Capitol division on the central front early today, but the sharpshooting RoKs drove off the Reds with deadly artillery and small arms fire.

Eighth army headquarters said 53 Communist bodies were left on the battle field and another 75 Reds probably were wounded.

The Chinese crossed the Kumhwa-Kumsong highway shortly after midnight and stormed RoK positions south of Kumsong. After 40 minutes of savage fighting the Reds broke off the battle and were driven back across the road, the army said.

For the second straight day American Sabre jets swept over North Korea without spotting a Communist MiG jet.

Russians Begin Repatriation Talks On Britons

LONDON (AP) — The Russians have already started talks with the North Koreans on ways to repatriate a group of British civilians interned at the start of the Korean war, Selwyn Lloyd, minister of state for foreign affairs, told the House of Commons today.

But, he added, the North Koreans have reported that two missionaries—one a middle-aged nun—in the group have died and that they know nothing about a third. Lloyd said this news—the first official information about the welfare of the group—was passed to the British embassy in Moscow by the Russian government, which only two weeks ago agreed to use its influence in bringing the internees home.

Nine Britons, including the British minister, Capt. Vyvyan Holt and an Irish priest, were reported captured after the North Koreans took Seoul in the summer of 1950.

Lloyd identified the missionaries who have died as Father Charles Hunt and Sister Mary Clare. The missing missionary, he said, is Father A. W. Lee. All three were members of the mission in Seoul run by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.

Lloyd said the Russian government told the British embassy in Moscow last Saturday that they are consulting with the North Koreans about the whereabouts of the interned Britons, and the method and route of their repatriation through China and Russia to Moscow.

Ridgway Warns Reds Unchanged

PARIS (AP) — Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway warned today that Soviet Russia's threat against the western allies "has not diminished one iota."

NATO's supreme commander in Europe said nothing about the current peace moves in a speech at the second anniversary of supreme headquarters, Allied powers in Europe, but he warned that Soviet Russia has "increased and continues to increase" its military capacity.

Then Ridgway made a strong appeal to the western allies to bring West German troops into the defence of the 4,000-mile West European front.

"For the defence of this vast region," he said, "one significant contribution—the participation of Germany—is still as yet withheld.

"I would welcome this additional military potential. A western German contribution would not only strengthen the whole edifice of Allied command Europe, it would lighten proportionally the burden of the cost of this defence."

Conducting Cheese Inquiry After Sub-Standard Foods

OTTAWA (CP)—A federal food inspector today testified in magistrate's court that the food and drugs division is investigating about 150 eastern Ontario cheese manufacturers and jobbers reported to be producing sub-standard Canadian cheddar cheese.

W. R. Moon, health department food and drugs inspector, revealed that the investigation is under way during testimony at the arraignment of Roland Sicotte, 39-year-old Sarsfield, Ont., cheesemaker.

Sicotte pleaded guilty to selling a quantity of cheese which did not meet pasteurization requirements or was not stored for the required 60 days. Magistrate Glenn Strike fined Sicotte $100 and $27 costs wtth an alternative of one month in jail.

PREVIOUS DEATHS

George Addy, special prosecutor for the health department, said that in the past a number of deaths from typhoid fever have been directly attributed to people eating cheese from an unpasteurized source.

He said if the milk used in making the cheese was pasteurized and the cheese stored for a minimum of 60 days there was no danger of infection from typhoid fever.

Sicotte told the court that other cheesemakers in the Sarsfield area about 20 miles east of Ottawa, had cheese made from unpasteurized milk and were not storing it for the 60-day period.

CHECKING UP

Mr. Moon, who brought the charge against Sicotte, said the food and drugs division of the health department is "going after" cheese-makers and jobbers in eastern Ontario.

"It's a difficult job but we are pressing it right now," he told

The Food and Drugs Act requires that cheese be made from pasteurized materials or be stored for 60 days if made from unpasteurized materials.

Death Toll 5 In Apt. Blaze

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A fast-spreading fire swept through a 48-family apartment building near downtown Kansas City Wednesday, killing five persons, three of them firemen. Fifteen persons were injured.

The firemen were crushed to death when two porches and part of a wall collapsed on them. The bodies of the two other victims—Mrs. Willard Coon, 22, and her two-year-od daughter Mary—were found in heir third-floor apartment.

Some residents trapped in their rooms escaped the flames by descending ladders. At least three were forced to leap into firemen's nets.

Explosions Shake Levis Waterfront

LEVIS, Que. (CP) — A general alarm fire, marked by several explosions, today destroyed a huge warehouse on the Levis waterfront, across the St. Lawrence river from Quebec City.

The blaze caused damage estimated at $400,000. No one was injured.

The building, about 125 feet long and 70 feet wide, was enveloped by flames within 20 minutes and fire quickly spread to an adjacent flour plant, causing heavy damage.

The warehouse contained building and tar products. Intense heat caused several barrels of tar and asphalt to explode. Flames reached heights of more than 75 feet.

A locomotive and about 15 freight cars were pulled from a siding seconds before one of the walls of the building collapsed.

British Talks Important German Chancellor Says

LE HAVRE, France (AP)—West Germany's Chancellor Konrad Adenauer sailed for the United States early today for important conferences but indicated that even more critical talks may take place next month—when he visits Britain.

In a press conference shortly before he boarded the liner United States, the chancellor said that in London he would discuss Britain's relationship with the projected European Defence Community.

Asked what he would take up with Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, Adenauer at first said the talks in mid-May—after his Washington visit—would concern the world situation at that time. Then he added:

"I don't want to play hide-and-seek with you, I have repeatedly urged Eden to accede to France's wishes for closer association between Britain and the EDC."

Referring to Britain's repeated refusal to join the European Army because it must consider its Commonwealth commitments, Adenauer added:

"I fully recognize the special position of Britain. At the same time, we have the same wish as France that Britain be associated as closely as possible with the EDC."

Britain promised to co-operate with the EDC but refused to join. Now it is felt that closer British association would help the treaty's passage through the French Parliament by allaying somewhat the fear of many Frenchmen that France would stand alone against a resurgence of German militarism.

Believe Soviet's Next Move Talks On Unifying Germany

BONN, Germany (AP)—West German government sources forecast today that Moscow might soon extend its current "peace offensive" with a new note to the three Western Allies proposing talks on unifying Germany.

Some Allied quarters here also said they would "not be surprised" if something like this happened.

The Russians' invitation to the United States and France to join them and the British in the air safety talks now going on in Berlin may be a prelude to new unity overtures, German sources said.

It was believed that Moscow might make the move while Chancellor Konrad Adenauer is visiting the U. S. and Canada. Adenauer sailed early today. One of the chief topics he will talk about with President Eisenhower is hastening the buildup of Western defences through creation of a European army, including 500,000 West German troops.

The Russians might try to torpedo these plans with a sudden new move to end the cold war in divided Germany, Bonn officials predicted.

The Russians could reopen the long-deadlocked German question by replying to the note of last Sept. 23 from the U. S., Britain and France.

The unanswered note was the last in a month-long exchange initiated by Moscow.

The Russians last Aug. 27 proposed a four-power conference to discuss a peace treaty for Germany, formation of an all-German government, and all-German elections.

The Western powers agreed to a four-power meeting but wanted discussion first on an impartial commission to investigate conditions for holding free elections, especially in the Russian zone. The Russians did not reply.

Find Red Message Of Acceptance Heartening—Allies

MUNSAN, Korea (AP)—The Allies and the Communists today agreed to meet at Panmunjom Monday to discuss the exchange of sick and wounded prisoners, first step toward a resumption of truce talks. The Monday meeting will be between liaison officers who will arrange for the early exchange of the sick and wounded. The Allies were making swift preparations for the first flow of returned prisoners. Their liaison team already is organized and ready to go.

The Communists suggested that the Monday meeting time for a resumption of full-scale armistice negotiations. They also handed over official copies of Communist proposals for a resumption of truce talks, carried by Peiping radio last Monday.

Gen. Mark Clark, the UN commander, already has made it clear that Allied truce negotiations will return to Panmunjom only after arrangements are completed for exchanging disabled prisoners.

Delivery of the new proposals from Red China's foreign minister, Chou En-lai, and North Korea's premier, Kim Il Sung, fed mounting hopes hat the Communist world is serious about peace.

MOVE FAST

The latest development in a chain reaction touched off by Red China less than a week ago came only a few hours after Soviet Russia pledged its all-out support of China's Korean truce plan.

But many western observers still warned against over-optimism. Wait and see if the Communists do more than talk about peace, is their advice.

One Allied spokesman here said the business-like tone of the Communist message delivered Thursday is "heartening."

"It's devoid of the usual propaganda," he said.

Among UN forces in Korea the latest communist move stirred fresh but guarded hopes.

But the South Korean National Assembly unanimously adopted a resolution opposing any truce which does not unify North and South Korea. The resolution called the Red truce proposal a "trick aimed under the cloak of peace to gain time for another aggression."

Japanese Prince Guest Of Canada 11 Days

OTTAWA (CP) — Crown Prince Akihito of Japan will be in Canada for 11 days as guest of the Canadian government while travelling to London to attend the Coronation June 2 as the representative of his father, the Emperor of Japan.

The itinerary of Prince Akihito was announced Wednesday by the Japanese embassy here. Accompanied by a nine-man suite, he will spend two days in Ottawa as guest of the governor-general and will also visit Victoria, Vancouver, Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls and Montreal.

The crown prince is scheduled to arrive in Victoria by air from San Francisco April 11, and will be the guest of Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace there.

He will arrive in Vancouver April 13, and leave by train that night for Toronto, arriving April 17. From Toronto, he will travel by car to Hamilton, and on April 18 will visit Niagara Falls.

Prince Akihito will arrive in Ottawa April 19, to spend two days in the capital as guest of Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey. He will leave the night of April 20 for Montreal, spend the next day in that city and leave for New York the night of April 21.

Indians' Status Investigated By Committee

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario legislature today named select committees to inquire into the status of Indians in the province and to inquire into the operation of the Cemeteries Act.

It voted down a motion introduced by Albert Wren (Lib.-Lab.-Kenora (which would have appointed a select committee to inquire into the operation and forest conservation activities of the lands and forests department.

Premier Frost told the legislature that many Ontario Indians live in a state of chronic ill-health because the federal government which has control of Indian affairs did not go far enough in its aid programs. There was, for example "a deplorable incidence of tuberculosis" among Indians.

Harold Nixon (Lib.—Brant) withdrew a motion that the federal government be requested to withdraw its ban on the sale of liquor to Ontario Indians. He said he was in favor of the appointment of the select committee which would "study the entire matter of civil liberties and rights with respect to the Indian population of Ontario."

FAVORS COMMITTEES

Health Minister Phillips told the House that the committee inquiry into the operation of the Cemeteries Act was being undertaken because of the appearance in Ontario of organizations which sold cemetery lots for profit. This was a quite recent development.

Thomas Pryde (PC—Huron) said earlier in the session that the public was being exploited by the high pressure salesmenship of cemetery lots.

Mr. Wren said Northern Ontario paper mills and the areas which depend on them will be "in serious condition financially" in a few years if attention is not given to the marketing of sulphite and sulphate pulp. Reforestation and forest conservation was also a matter of public importance.

Reds Abandon Control On Berlin Highway

BERLIN (AP) — Russian zone border guards virtually abandoned controls on the East-West express highway to Berlin today and interzonal traffic sped at an unprecedented rate.

The Soviets obviously had instructed the guards to deal only perfunctorily with cargoes and credentials.

Giant trucks, hauling as much as 12 to 15 tons of goods to West Berlin, were not even subjected to customs inspections at the border.

The vanguard of Easter holiday traffic, including German and Allied passenger cars, reported such speed and courtesy in passing through the frontier had not been seen here before.

Western observers here viewed the new Soviet tactics on the highway as another move in the Russians' current peace offensive.

Labor Gains 3rd Win Within 24 Hours

HAYES, England (Reuters)—The Labor party Wednesday night retained the Middlesex seat of Hayes-Harlington in a parliamentary by-election—the third Labor by-election win announced in 24 hours.

Arthur Skeffington polled 12,797 votes against 7,221 for Arthur Sumption, his Conservative opponent, giving the Socialist a majority of 5,576. The majority was down by more than 5,000 from the 1951 election.

The election was caused through the retirement for health reasons of Labor member Walter Ayles.

Labor also kept the Yorkshire mining constituency seat of Barnsley and Stoke-on-Trent.

Present standing in the House of Commons:

Conservatives and allies 321; Labor 295; Liberals 5; Irish Nationalists 2; vacant 2; total 625.

Frost, Oliver Exchange Heated Words

TORONTO (CP)—The third session of the 24th Ontario legislature is to be prorogued today by Lieutenant-Governor Louis Breithaupt.

The House sat for 10 hours Wednesday as it strove to wind up its affairs. It adjourned shortly after midnight and meets again at 10 a.m. today.

Prorogation will come with the memory of one of the hottest clashes in recent years still vivid in the members' minds. The flare-up came Wednesday after several weeks of quiet debate when Premier Frost and Opposition Leader Farquhar Oliver tangled in a heated exchange.

It drew a reprimand from Speaker Davies after he called for order and pounded his gavel in vain as cries rose from both sides of the house.

DEFENDS LIBERAL

Mr. Oliver rose to the defence of Albert Wren (Lib.-Lab.—Kenora) who had been a continuous target of the premier in a wordy battle over Ontario hydro management and a charge by Mr. Wren that the government had given Steep Rock Mines preferential treatment in hydro rates.

The Kenora member called for a public inquiry into the hydro rate structure and its application to industry, charged the public utility with browbeating the mines and claimed that George Drew, when Ontario premier, had indicated to Steep Rock officials that a reduction in hydro rates would be made if the company invested in mining developing in Northern Ontario.

Mr. Frost repeatedly jumped to his feet to question Mr. Wren and deny statements by the Kenora member. The premier referred to a statement made by the Kenora member in committee last week that Mr. Wren possessed documentary evidence of government promises of preferential treatment for Steep Rock Mines.

ASKS FOR EVIDENCE

Mr. Frost challenged Mr. Wren to produce the evidence and got the reply that it could be obtained by appying to the company.

The premier accused Mr. Wren of "McCarthyism." Mr. Frost said that when Mr. Wren insinuates that he will produce evidence and does not do so when asked for it, "that is 'McCarthyism.' "

Premier Frost said "everything regarding Steep Rock was done in accordance with the statutes passed in this legislature." The premier went on to accuse Mr. Wren of dodging questions and "filmy innuendo."

Mr. Oliver said at this point that he wouldn't stand for those statements from the premier. He said no member of the House performs his duties more diligently than Mr. Wren.

"It is beneath the dignity of the Prime Minister of Ontario to suggest a member of this House has been guilty of filthy tactics," Mr. Oliver said. "When my honorable friend talks about the member of Kenora dodging issues let me say he has learned from a great master."

DECIDE OWN ATTACK

Mr. Oliver added: "Our method of attack is going to be decided by ourselves, not by the government."

At another point in the debate, the Legislature's Communist member, J. B. Salsberg (Lab.-Prog.—Toronto St. Andrew) called on the government to use part of its liquor tax revenue in public education campaigns about misuse of alcoholic beverages and to supplement the federal old-age pension of $40 a month by $10 monthy.

Two ministers, Highways Minister Doucett and Planning Minister Warrender, presented their departments' 1953-54 estimates. The highways department will spend $122,578,000 and the planning department $1,256,000.

Legislature Prorogued

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature was prorogued at 1:30 p. m. today. Press gallery members followed their traditional practice of throwing papers and copies of bills to the floor of the House.

Rubber Workers Begin Strike

NEW YORK (AP)—A CIO union went on strike today against the United States Rubber Company after contract negotiations here became deadlocked. Thirty-five thousand employees in 19 plants are affected.

Negotiations are scheduled to resume today, and a company spokesman said he is "very definitely optimistic" about early settlement. He estimated the strike would last no longer than two or three days, if that long. A spokesman for the CIO Rubber Workers Union declined to make any prediction.

STOPPAGE BEGINS

When no agreement was reached by the Wednesday midnight deadline, workers in the East started quitting, and the strike moved westward on the basis of midnight local time.

A company spokesman said "all but three or four" of the 19 plants —many of which work around the clock—were idle before dawn.

No wage demand is involved, the company spokesman said. Among the issues, he listed hospital care, pension plan revision and the length of the new contract. The company wants a longer contract than the union does. A 21-month contract expired last Tuesday.

Prices Up Slightly On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO (CP) — Prices recovered slightly in early afternoon stock market trading today.

Industrials dipped during the morning but covered slightly after noon. Golds continued firm and western oils turned mixed after early losses. Base metals continued lower. Volume for the first three hours totalled 1,509,000 shares.

Uraniums were mixed. New Brunswick base metals continued weak.

Strength in Canadian Atlantic, Gridoil and a few other leaders revived western oils.

Utilities, banks and miscellaneous issues slipped in industrials.

Senior golds were strong and juniors showed a majority of advances. Higher-priced base metals were mixed but most other issues slipped.

Ontario Farmers Plan Dairy Day June 17

Man Remanded On Charges Of Store Robbery

Edward Brooker, 23, 105 Hay St. Mimico, was remanded for one week when he appeared before Magistrate W. R. Philp today on two charges of breaking, entering and theft and one of theft.

Brooker was apprehended by police a week ago when they answered an anonymous telephone call by a man who said he had seen someone in Ostranders Jewellers taking watches. Five officers were rushed to the scene and surrounded the store.

Brooker gave himself up when Detective Dennis Traynor climbed on to the back roof and observed Brooker through a transom in the ceiling. A carton of rings and about nine watches were found in his possession.

OTHER THEFT

In addition to the charge in connection with Ostranders, Brooker is charged with breaking and entering Vince Crowley's Men's Wear and stealing a quantity of clothes, icluding 10 pairs of pants valued at about $300.

The other charge against Brooker is of theft from a car parked by the Grand Hotel of a mantel radio, camera and case, a suit case containing a quantity of women's clothing and a box containing towels, curtains and a blanket.

Brooker, whose wife is reported living with his parents in Mimico, is also wanted by Scarboro police in connection with car theft.

At this Allied camp work was speeded on plans to care for wounded prisoners and for full-scale resumption of truce negotiations.

A team of officers arrived to choose a site for processing the sick and wounded. And a prefabricated village which can be set up in a few days, or even hours, is stored nearby to care for the returnees.

Tentative plans called for setting up one or more forward aid stations to process and treat prisoners as they are released. If an exchange is agreed upon, most of the men will be taken to field hospitals behind the lines by ambulance, but serious cases will be evacuated by helicopter.

READY FOR MEETING

The UN command is ready for the meeting in Panmunjom Monday.

The proposals handed over by the Communists at Panmunjom Thursday were in reply to a letter Clark wrote Tuesday suggesting a meeting to discuss plans for exchanging disabled prisoners.

The liaison officers met for only two minutes against a background of Red artillery shells exploding around an Allied outpost almost within sight of the conference area.

The truce proposal delivered to Clark provides for the exchange of prisoners who want to return home immediately after a truce is signed. All others would be turned over to an unnamed neutral country pending a decision on their future.

TOKYO (AP)—The Communist proposal for ending the war in Korea delivered at Panmunjom today made these points for settling the prisoner issue:

1. Turn loose all prisoners of war who want to go home after an armistice is signed.

2. Send to a neutral country the approximately 51,000 Chinese and North Korean war prisoners who "are afraid to return home."

3. Let "the side concerned" — the Communists — talk to these 51,000 prisoners, "thus ensuring that the question of their repatriation will be justly settled."

The proposal does not commit the Reds to drop their claim to any prisoners who still refuse to go home after the "explanations."

The Panmunjom text of Chou's statement differed in at least one major respect from that monitored by The Associated Press in Tokyo Monday night.

On point 3, the Reds Panmunjom text said "the side concerned" (the Communists) would make explanations to prisoners turned over to a neutral country.

But Monday night, Peiping radio said "the parties concerned" would explain to these same prisoners, presumably classing the UN command as a party concerned with the problem.

UN headquarters in Tokyo said the text of Chou's statement delivered at Panmunjom is correct.

Appoint Doctor Superintendent

WINDSOR (CP)—Appointment of a new permanent medical superintendent at East Windsor Hospital —Dr. John M. Nettleton of Toronto—has been announced by Ian R. McFarlane, chairman of the East Windsor Health Association board of directors.

Appointment of Dr. Nettleton completes a chapter in the story of medical superintendents at the institution for the chronically ill, a story which began almost a year ago with the ordering of a provincial probe into the affairs of the hospital.

Following the investigation, Attorney-General Porter dismissed the former board of directors on Jan. 9. The present board discharged the former medical superintendent, Dr. P. J. Morgan.

Dr. Nettleton served as chief medical officer for Manitoba and medical superintendent of Deer Lodge Hospital for the department of veterans affairs during the Second World War.

Arrest Pair In Connection With Slaying

TORONTO (CP) — Police arrested two men last night for questioning in connection with last week-end's slaying of Charles (The Kid) Waggoner.

They gave their names as Frank Battaglia, 37, and James Rogers, alias Smith Poirier, 26.

Detective Inspector Archie McCathie said they were arrested on a coroner's warrant at the request of Montreal police. Police took them into custody at a hotel on Jarvis street in central Toronto.

"I don't know what their connection is with the case," the inspector said. "They (Montreal police) asked us to hold the fellows and that's what we did."

He said an escort is expected today to take Battaglia and Rogers back to Montreal.

Believed the victim of gangland vengeance, Waggoner was found shot through the head, his body weighted and thrown in a creek.

Inspector McCathie declined comment on a report that Waggoner's slaying is tied in with the theft last year of a shipment of gold bullion at nearby Malton airport, just before it was to have been loaded aboard an airliner.

This move, coming on top of proposals toward ending the Korean war and other cold-war issues, afforded one more piece of evidence that the Kremlin is acting according to a careful master plan.

Meanwhile, officials concerned with possible Soviet motives say two evident purposes stand out:

1. The Malenkov government can see that Communist use of threats of force since the Second World War has built up an enormous counter-force in the U.S. and Allied countries. To reverse this process, their new tactic is to switch over to easing tensions.

2. The new Malenkov government, having no substitute for the prestige and personality of the late Joseph Stalin, needs to consolidate its political position within the Soviet empire and hopes to advance this process by creating a more peaceful international atmosphere.

Charge Specialists Exercise Hospital Monopoly Ruining General Doctors

TORONTO (CP)—A charge that specialists exercise a monopoly over hospitals which is destroying the effectiveness of the general practitioner was made in the legislature Wednesday by Dr. F. S. Leavine (PC—Waterloo North). He said the present rigidity of hospital bylaws is producing "closed hospitals" and the same process is producing two classes of medical practitioners—the aristocrats and the slaves. "The functions of the general practitioner or slave will be that of directing traffic to the appropriate specialist or doing the off-hour or holiday work," Dr. Leavine said. "The specialist does a magnificent and indispensible piece of work and we could not do without him.

"But inasmuch as 80 per cent of work falls within the natural scope of the general practitioner, by our rigidly closed hospitals we are destroying the effectiveness of the 80 per cent."

WOULD DIVERT TAX

Dr. Leavine urged that portions of income tax paid by some Ontario doctors should be diverted to the support of hospitals in the province.

Hospitals, he said, are the "workshops from which many doctors derive a major part of their income."

Dr. Arthur Kelly, speaking for the Canadian Medical Association said in an interview later he does not feel the word "monopoly" is applicable.

"The CMA is on record advocating the establishment of a department of general practice in every Canadian hospital large enough to be departmentalized," he said. "We are anxious to restore the general practitioner, whose prestige has perhaps been waning."

HAVE OWN DOCTORS

Dr. Leavine also said in the House that the training of nurses should not constitute a charge against hospital patients and that patients should be assigned to the care of doctors of their own choosing.

G. H. Lyons (PC—Sault Ste. Marie) suggested earlier this week that doctors should contribute toward the upkeep of Ontario hospitals. He suggested a "contribution" rather than a diversion of income tax.

FINAL RITES—In the hush of St. George's Chapel at Windsor Castle, final burial service is held for the late Grandmother Queen, Mary. She was buried beside her husband, King George V, as the Royal Family, top British government officials and foreign dignitaries look on.

Canadian Economy Depends On Hydro Electric Power

By NORMAN ALLEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The pulse beat of the Canadian economy is measured by its consumption of hydro-electric power. Its sources are mighty rivers harnessed by the country's engineers.

Behind activity in Eastern Canada is the hydro-electric potential existing in the St. Lawrence seaway and power project, soon to be awakened to buoy the nation's increasing prosperity.

Farther east on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence activity is at a high pitch. The Ontario Paper Company is completing the McCormick dam on the Manicouagan river in the heart of the east's pulp and paper industry. It began partial operation last December.

UNIQUE FEAT

Starting late in 1954, it will supply power to the Quebec hydro electric commission for transmission by four 31-mile-long submarine cables—the longest in the world—under the St. Lawrence river to the Gaspe Peninsula.

Also on the north shore, Quebec hydro is completing plans for construction of an eight-mile tunnel and a power house on the Bersimis river as the first step toward development of 1,100,000 horsepower. This project involves a water drop of 875 feet—more than three times the height of Niagara Falls.

What has been described as one of North America's greatest engineering exploits is being undertaken at Niagara Falls, Ont.

Hundreds of workmen are busy carving two 5½-mile tunnels under the city of Niagara Falls to a depth of 330 feet. These 45-foot-diameter tunnels will be the largest of their kind. There will be enough space in which to turn around a standard railway freight car with five feet to spare at each end.

Some 15,000,000 gallons of water per minute will be diverted from the Niagara river—two miles above the cataract—and carried through the tunnels to an open-cut channel on the other side of the city. More than 3,000,000 tons of earth and rock will have been excavated by the time the power plant operates next year. The Niagara project is one of 14 new hydro power developments undertaken in Ontario since 1945.

A tremendous power potential exists in the Hamilton river in Labrador. Some estimates place it at 10,000,000 horsepower. Also, in the treeless rockland of northern Quebec the Payne river is being explored for its power potential as it flows into Ungava bay.

There's a race between the east and west to see which region can supply the most hydro power and thereby the most industries

On the Pacific coast one of the country's greatest hydro power developments is well under way at Kitimat. The Aluminum Company of Canada is building a sprawling smelter at Kitimat for the manufacture of aluminum. Power will be carried from a power-house at Kemano 50 miles away by the largest reinforced aluminum cables ever made. They will be 2 inches thick.

The mighty turbines in the power house will be spun by a waterfall 16 times greater than Niagara Falls—2,580 feet. The water supply was achieved by the unusual process of reversing the natural eastward flow of the Nechako river by building a dam. Then a 10-mile tunnel was gouged through a mountain in the Coast range to the powerhouse.

The entire map north of the British Columbia border will be changed when Frobisher Limited, a subsidiary of Ventures Corporation, builds three big hydro plants in the Yukon. It is estimated they will yield the largest integrated power supply in the world—500,000,000 horsepower.

A mammoth dam will be built at Lake Laberge, creating a lake covering thousands of square miles. The town and airbase of Whitehorse will be forced to move and even the route of the Alaska Highway will be changed.

In conjunction with the hydro construction, plans call for erection of smelters and leaching plants to process ores from Frobisher's world holdings.

Russian Move Change In Tactics Wilgress Says

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government is "looking forward to practical results" from resumed Korean truce talks.

Pending concrete evidence to the contrary, relaxation of the Communist stand on the prisoner question in Korea and on other East-West issues is regarded as a change in tactics rather than any basis shift in Communist policy.

That definition of official Canadian attitude was given to the Senate foreign affairs committee Wednesday by Russian-speaking Dana Wilgress, former ambassador to Russia and now undersecretary of the external affairs department.

NEEDS PERIOD OF QUIET

Mr. Wilgress said the official view tends to the belief that the recent rash of overtures by Russia and communism arises from a desire by Prime Minister Malenkov "for a period of international quiet to allow him to consolidate his position."

After all, he pointed out, Stalin's status approached that of deification. Mr. Malenkov was a long way short of that.

Mr. Wilgress said frankly that "I do not know the answer" to what is going on in Russia but that, pending concrete evidence of a change in basic policy, the Canadian attitude was to examine every overture gladly but with caution.

He described the Communists' altered stand on exchange of prisoners as "very encouraging" and said the government is looking forward to practical results—presumably a truce.

Fraud Charges Heard Later

Maitland J. Carter, 30, 112 Stewart St., was remanded for one week today when he appeared before Magistrate W. R. Philp on two charges of false pretences.

He is alleged to have obtained a 1939-model car valued at $452 from Nicholas Peconi and $15 cash and $6 worth of gasoline from Garnet H. Johnston, proprietor of the Eastport Service Station, by means of worthless cheques.

He is wanted by Etobicoke police on similar charges.

Sit-Down Strike At Hamilton Plant

HAMILTON (CP) — More than 900 workers of the Canadian Cottons plant staged a sit-down strike this morning in protest against what they called an infringement of their contract.

The strike took place after Sydney Emmerson, administrator for the Hamilton joint board, Textile Workers' Union of America, CIO met the negotiating committee at the plant this morning.

The issues involved are the dismissal of five workers and the proposed elimination of certain jobs in the plant, said to be in the interests of economy. Workers had staged a meeting Wednesday night and decided to meet management today.

When parties failed to make progress the union committee reported back to the workers who sat down at their machines.

Cobourg Gets First Cargo For New Ordnance Depot

COBOURG (ENS) — The first load of military equipment arrived by CSL freighter for transfer by truck to the new ordnance depot Wednesday. Location of the multi-million dollar ordnance depot at Cobourg is regarded as appropriate because this centre has been known for many years as a military town, the home of many artillery units in the past.

The depot is by no means finished yet. More warehouses still have to be built as well as an administration building but, space had to be made available in order that freighters which had been standing by at Kingston could discharge their cargoes.

MORE TO COME

The arrival of the CSL ship "Lethbridge" marked the start of many freighters yet to come and several are due shortly.

Everything was in readiness when the Lethbridge put into Cobourg yesterday. A civilian staff from the ordnance depot was on the pier as well as staff officers, including the commandant OC of the depot, Lt. Col. W. R. Peace, who was in charge of operations.

On hand were several small battery-powered trucks with elevators to take off the load and convey it to waiting transports. Powered by heavy Edison batteries, the little vehicles scooted up and down the pier, dextrously handled by their drivers.

A large crowd watched the unloading operations. Everything went smoothly with evidence of careful planning beforehand. The bulk of the cargo consisted of folding tables.

Large transports were driven out on the pier and loaded two at a time by the little trucks which looked like fleas alongside the transports.

Shortly after the freighter had docked, transports had started their shuttle service back and forth to the ordnance depot. In a few hours the ship had been emptied of its cargo.

Goalie Voted Most Valuable

LINDSAY (ENS)—The Lindsay Muskies Wednesday night voted Clare "Mucker" O'Connell their most valuable player over the last seasons play, in a ballot held at the Lindsay arena. The players on the team made the choice.

O'Connell, who played steady, if unspectacular goal, this year has been especially good during the last two play-off series with Port Hope Redmen and then with the Gananoque Gans. The winner of the award will receive the Bowlaway Lanes trophy donated by Al Garden and Pete Atman, two of the Muskies most avid supporters this season.

Russians Lose Plea

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—A Soviet move in the Kremlin's "let's-be-friends" campaign was rejected in the U.N. Wednesday. The 18-nation economic and social council turned down Russia's request to make Russian one of the official languages of the council. Until last year, French and English were the only official languages. Spanish-speaking countries got assembly approval to include their language on the grounds that so many people in the world speak Spanish.

Change Coney Island?

NEW YORK (AP)—If park commissioner Robert Moses has his way, Coney Island will be "upgraded" to a largely residential seaside area. Re-zoning of the amusement mecca was proposed Wednesday by Moses at a public hearing held by the city planning commission which reserved decision on Moses' proposal.

Gramaphone Cure For Asthma

LONDON (AP)—Are you asthmatic?

Then your best friend is the gramophone, says British doctor John Morwood, writing in the journal, The Practitioner.

Just get a record cut with some soothing words on it, says Morwood. Then whenever you feel an attack coming on, play the record over and over until you half-hypnotize yourself—for asthma is due to mental tenseness as well as to bronchial constriction:

Morwood suggests these soothing words for the hypnotizing record:

"You are drifting down a river on a hot summer's day. The banks are floating past. There is the distant sound of the harvester cutting corn. Your head is getting very heavy and your breathing is getting easier and deeper, easier and deeper."

"Never been known to fail," says Morwood.

Marine Held For Murder Refuses Father's Help

DUBUQUE, Ia. (AP)—A handsome 18-year-old AWL marine today faced murder charges in three states after rejecting the efforts of his grieving father to help him.

Fred E. McManus, who shrugged off five slayings as "too bad," flatly told his father, Mose McManus, Valley Stream, N.Y., brewery executive, he did not want the help of the lawyer the elder McManus had retained to defend him.

The father flew into Dubuque from New York and had a brief interview with his son last night in the Dubuque county jail.

During the 15-minute meeting a deputy sheriff who was present, said young McManus shed a tear when his father made a reference to the girl who accompanied the boy on a four-day cross country crime spree.

"I don't want you to spend any money on me," he said. "I know what I've done, and I know what I want to do. I want to get it over with quickly now."

NEVER IN TROUBLE

The elder McManus said later: "I simply cannot understand it. The boy has never been in trouble before, and has never caused trouble of any kind."

Young McManus has written and signed a statement admitting a car-theft killing at Rochester, N.Y., last Friday and double killings in holdups at Kenneyville, Ill., on Saturday and Spring Valley, Minn., on Monday.

During his interview he told reporters he felt no remorse over the slayings.

"It's just like reading of the death of a man 500 miles away—you don't know him and can't associate any feelings with him. It was too bad," he said.

He said he knew what was going to happen to him: "The electric chair."

BLAMES LOVE

McManus blamed all his acts on his love of a 16-year-old girl he called his wife—Diana Marie Weggeland of Summerville, N.Y.

She told authorities she knew of the Minnesota and Illinois slayings but "I guess I loved him so much that as long as I was with him nothing else mattered."

McManus said he and the girl set out for California because "I was sick and tired of sitting behind a typewriter."

He said he joined the marines last June "because I wanted to go to Korea and they made me an office clerk instead. Then I met Diana and we fell in love."

Will Protect Ships

LONDON (Reuters) — Selwyn Lloyd, British minister of state, told the House of Commons Wednesday that British ships legally trading with Communist China will be protected from any "interference" in the Far East. He declined to disclose what steps are being taken to protect British shipping.

St. Laurent Urges More Tolerance

TORONTO (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent says people in democratic countries must tolerate those with whom they "honestly differ."

He made the statement in a letter to J. Farley Faulkner of Toronto, founder of the anti-Communist Vigilance for Freedom Fund. Mr. Faulkner asked the Prime Minister for a statement to be included in a booklet to be published by the organization, which has proposed a law banning Communist activity.

"We will rid the world of this modern menace only if we really practise what we preach," Mr. St. Laurent wrote.

"It means we must allow creativeness and we must preserve freedom for others to say and believe what they will. It means ordinary men and women must have a chance to live their own lives in their own way.

"If this century is to be ours, we must show the disillusioned and those without hope that our kind of society is a worth while one that we ourselves are, on the whole, fairly decent people interested in the welfare of our neighbors."

Road Safety Group Planned

TORONTO (CP) — Highways Minister Doucett announced in the Ontario legislature Wednesday night that an organization is being formed to co-ordinate the work of all groups interested in highway safety.

He said the new body will cover every municipality and area in the province.

The community is the level at which highway safety must be taught, he said. Rudeness, arrogance, lack of good manners, failure to display ordinary decency and common sense were the causes of most traffic accidents.

"We must have an aroused public mind," he said. "We should have on our streets and highways the same sense of courtesy that is expected in the drawing room."

Falls 50 Feet

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Two-year-old Michael Raychel fell 50 feet from a fourth-floor apartment window to a cement stairway base Wednesday. "It was miraculous that the child wasn't killed," said a fireman. "He must have floated down on the wings of an angel." He is in hospital in fair condition.

Landmark Goes

SPIRITWOOD, Sask. (CP)—The Winding Creek town hall in the nearby Norbury district is to be demolished. A landmark built by settlers in 1918, it had served as a town hall ever since.

Hit Up Wrong Man

COBOURG (ENS).—Clifford Boucher, no fixed address, came to Cobourg Wednesday and needing some money is said to have embarked on a little campaign of asking for it. One of those who contributed one dollar to Boucher was town clerk Ewart. Police later picked up Boucher on a begging charge and brought him to the justice of the peace for a remand. Said justice of the peace was Jack Ewart, the town clerk, who earlier had succumbed to Boucher's sales talk.

Puebla, Cradle Of Culture City Of 250,000 People

By JEAN E. STENTON

PUEBLA. — Puebla is one of the friendliest and most interesting cities in the republic of Mexico. It is the cradle of the country's culture and the 250,000 people there give it the tempo and veneer of a university town.

* * * * *

You will not find here the hustle and bustle and cosmopolitan atmosphere that goes with Mexico City. Even the buildings while not so modern as some in the capital have a charm emanating from their fine Spanish architecture, their Moorish arches, lovely fountains and the many buildings covered with tile work. It is more like an Andalusian town.

* * * * *

Puebla's full name is Puebla de Los Angeles, or City of the Angels, and the patron saint is St. Michael. There is a very old fountain in the centre of the old quarter called St. Michael's fountain. Legend attributes Puebla's name to the story relating that the natives were unable to lift the heavy bells into the Cathedral towers and the angels did the work for them during the night.

* * * * *

This Spanish colonial city was founded in 1531. The Spaniards were anxious to have a resting place between Veracruz and the capital. This site on a flat plain in view of four volcanoes was deemed attractive and it grew very popular.

* * * * *

RESTING PLACE

Puebla was a resting place for me too on the way to Oaxaca. I came by pullman bus from Mexico City in three hours. These buses are excellent and it cost less than $1. You have a reserved seat and they have the latest equipment. Part of the way you have perfect views of the two snow-capped volcanoes Popocatepti and Ixtaccihuatl.

* * * * *

In Puebla as elsewhere I found the Mexican people wonderful friends and so helpful. Many of the hotels here were formerly convents and the Colonial where I stayed this time was formerly used by an order of Sisters. The largest hotel in the city it has 70 rooms where most of them have about 40. I particularly liked my room because its thick adobe walls deadened the noise outside as well as the typing inside. And it was only $2.75 a night. The dining room with its fountain was most attractive. The chairs were done in leather, old Spanish style, with the crest of Puebla on them.

* * * * *

Sr. Adolfo Vallejo and his wife were grand friends and put themselves and their car at my disposal. This young couple, both of whom speak English, have only been operating this hotel for eight months. Formerly Sr. Vallejo worked in an Acapulco hotel.

* * * * *

FAMOUS FORT

One of the more interesting places the Vallejo family took me to see was the San Loreto Fort. On a high hill overlooking the city this fort was where the Mexican army won a very important battle from the French invaders May 5, 1862. This is one of the most important dates in Mexican history and in nearly every town in the Republic you will find a street named Cinco de Mayo (5th of May).

* * * * *

It was here that Gen. Zaragoza gallantly defended the city and a small army of 2,000 defeated the superior French forces of 6,000. In 1867 General Diaz met and defeated Maximilian's troops at Puebla and was himself defeated there in 1910.

* * * * *

The fort has now been converted into a museum of war and there is a fine collection of articles on display. From this hill too may be seen the four highest mountains of Mexico and a beautiful view of the city.

* * * * *

The Sugar Cake House (Casa del Alfenique) is a fascinating place. It is the famous residential house of Puebla of the 18th century. It gets its name because of the white and rosy sugary appearance of its facade. The surface pattern is formed by blue and white glazed tiles set in a ground of plain red ones. The broad projecting stonework that shelters the balconies in the upper storey at the corners and elsewhere is a common feature in Puebla's architecture. It is at present used as the State Regional Museum.

* * * * *

UNUSUAL FACADE

The Church of San Francisco dating from 1667 again uses tiles to good advantage as decoration. Certain of the lustred tiles are formed into flowers of blue and yellow on a white ground with a connecting network of Mudejar patterns. A series of blue and white vases adorn the projecting angles of the brown stone strip which reaches from the pave to the tower and these with the tile figures of saints, crosses, etc., form a joyous ensemble very unusual in a church facade.

* * * * *

There is also a small replica of the Lourdes Grotto in France that is charming and very popular.

* * * * *

Through Sr. Vallejo I met other delightful Mexicans. Sr. de la Concha of the Comision de Tourismo took his wife and I to a lovely spot for lunch. It is called Blue Water because there is a sulphur springs there. From its dining terrace you have a marvellous view of the two volcanoes, Popocatepti and Ixtaccihuatl. Below is the Atoyac River, near the sulphur pool. A wide awning gave shade to the diners and it was most pleasant. I had some of my first Mexican food here—tortillas and mango—both of which I liked. Although Sra. de la Concha could not speak English, her husband made a good interpreter.

* * * * *

As a colonial city Puebla is different from other Mexican places and I wouldn't have missed being there or meeting the people who enjoy showing their fine city to visitors.

Moscow Blasts Vatican Anew

LONDON (AP) — Moscow radio today loosed a bitter new attack against the Vatican and accused it of preaching "atomic and germ warfare."

The broadcast was in sharp contrast to recent peace sounds emanating from the Russian capital. It indicated that whatever else may happen the Kremlin plans no letup in its war against the Roman

Quoting a pre-Easter article by academician Tarle in the Soviet New Times, Moscow radio said a revised code of international morals grants "Vatican indulgence to imperialist sinners."

"There can be no doubt," it added, "The masses of believing and all honest members of the Catholic clergy will reject the sermon of war, mass murder, plunder of nations, the deprivation of sovereignty and national property of under-developed countries and of atomic and germ war preached by the code."

The broadcast did not identify the code other than to say it was "compiled by the holy fathers."

Find Coronation Spending Curbed

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario municipal governments won't be able to spend more for receptions and special events this year than in others, even though 1953 is Coronation year, Lorne Cummings, chairman of the Ontario municipal board, said today.

He said the Ontario Municipal Act limits these expenses according to size of the municipality. A number of centres found it a hardship when the King and Queen visited Canada in 1939, he said.

Mr. Cummings was commenting on a statement of Mayor Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa that the city is limited to $30,000 for the year and so will have to cut down an estimate of $15,000 for observance of Coronation Day itself.

Other expenses are $1,600 for city council robes, $2,000 to send the mayor and her secretary to the Coronation, and $7,500 for a special Coronation booklet.

Lindsay Curlers Decide Champions

LINDSAY—Ladies' championships were decided at the Lindsay Curling Club this week. Mrs. Ann McIntosh, whose rink won the first half of the schedule, also skipped a different rink to victory in the second half. She could not play against herself for club honors and Mrs. G. Laidley was named to skip Mrs. McIntosh's second rink. Mrs. McIntosh made the victory complete by winning two out of three games.

Four rinks were tied for first place and the men's section, with Lindy Mackey's rink eliminating a rink skipped by C. Moase in the final game to win the championship.

Woodville Wins 7-2 In Rural League Game

LINDSAY (ENS) — Winger Hughie Cameron led the Woodville team to a 7-2 ORHA intermediate semi-final win over Blair Wednesday night at the Lindsay Arena. The Woodville team tied the best-of-three set, one game each.

Cameron scored two goals and assisted on a third, as the Woodville team scored four times in the second and once in the third, after the teams had split four goals in the opener. Other Woodville goals were scored by Pethick, Butler, Smith, who netted two and McInnes. Blair scorers were Michin and Adam.

Good News

Our front page yesterday, where much of the important international news is carried, was the most cheerful we have been able to present since 1947 when the Iron Curtain was banged down and the Cold War began.

* * *

The Premier of China had repeated his radio offer, this time by cable direct to U.N. (The proposal was that prisoners of war who did not actively wish to be repatriated, should be put in charge of a neutral country, pending final settlement. The prisoner-of-war question was the only point on which the armistice negotiations have been shattered.)

* * *

Moscow announced that she supported not only the earlier proposal for immediate exchange of sick and wounded prisoners, but also the latest Chinese offer. Foreign Minister Molotov pledged Russian assistance in trying to bring about an armistice in Korea.

* * *

Secret talks between Russian and British air officers had been started in Berlin to find means to avoid further air incidents.

* * *

Deadlock at U.N. over the appointment of a successor to Trygve Lie was broken when the five permanent members of the Security Council, who each have power of veto, agreed on Mr. Dag Hammerskjold as Secretary-General of U.N. This is a major break with the rancorous past. Not for years has there been agreement between East and West at U.N. on any vital matter.

* * *

Whatever the calculated counterpoint creating the new harmony, the cheerful fact is that there is a new harmony; a new tone, sweeter and easier than any we have heard for five years. The sound may not last. The sustaining pedal may be taken off abruptly, at any minute. But may we not enjoy the good news while it lasts, and hope with cheerful hearts this first Happy Easter since 1948? For five years precisely to the day—it was April 1st, 1948, when Russia blockaded Berlin and made the airlift necessary—we have lived under the shadow of war and in the din of Russian clamour. The sound has changed. The shadow of war remains, but we can now see the sun, too.

Canada In New York

Trends in the Canadian economy was presented for the eleventh successive year in Monday's issue of the New York Herald-Tribune. Unlike other American publications which only in the last year or two have bothered to cast an inquiring eye over their neighbour and best customer to the north, this great American daily newspaper has kept an eye on us by means of this special section for the last eleven years.

It is good for Canada—and good, too, for Americans—that such publicity is being given this country in New York and through a newspaper with a wide readership. The pages on Canadian business, commerce, industry and finance, are informative, encouraging, and give Canadian points of view a fair presentation. Two points are stressed in the articles (apart of course from the industrial development): The first is that Canada wants freer trade, consistently urges customs reform, and "looks to the United States to provide the leadership necessary to get world trade really moving . . . Canada is free of the nationalism that breeds trade barriers around its domain". The Governor of the Bank of Canada and our Undersecretary of State for External Affairs, "in polite diplomatic language have suggested that the next move is up to Washington". The other Canadian point of view which needs to be impressed on some Americans is that Canada is taking a full share in NATO and this continent's defence.

An article on Canada's defence spending tells Americans that Canada has appropriated two billion dollars for defence spending for the fiscal year which began yesterday. This plus a carry-over from last year's appropriations amounts to 12½ per cent. of Canada's national income. As behoves a great state with a forceful policy, great commitments and responsibility for world leadership, the U.S. is spending much more, but not a great deal more relatively than Canada. A little over sixteen per cent. of the American national income is going into defence expenditures.

The Herald-Tribune recites other facts which should disprove any American allegations that Canada is not doing her part in the Cold War. She has standing military services of more than a hundred thousand men—more than three times as many as were in Canada's armed forces in 1946. A tenth of all Canadians—more than 1,500,000—are engaged directly or indirectly in military service or defence production. Canada has a brigade of seven thousand soldiers, three destroyers and a thousand naval men and some "exchange" pilots, serving in Korea. Canada supports a twelve-plane air lift to Korea, has a brigade in Germany and is putting twelve fighter-plane squadrons in four separate air bases in Europe.

Hundreds of jet fighter planes are being sent to England and Canada is also supplying them to the U.S. Air Force in Korea. About 1,400 pilots from North Atlantic Treaty countries are being trained annually in Canada, and the U.S. and Canada are building an extensive network of "early warning" radar stations. Volume production of the CF-100, Canada's long-range, rocket-firing, all-weather twin jet fighter is scheduled to begin this spring at Avro-Canada, Ltd., outside Toronto. Canadair, Ltd. (Montreal) has produced more than five hundred F-88 Sabrejets for the Royal Canadian, the Royal and the U.S. air forces.

When points of view and records such as these are more widely known in the States, Americans should be less inclined to criticize Canada as lackadaisical about the American campaign to protect the world from Russia. The New York newspaper does us and its readers a service in this annual economic survey not strictly limited to stories about our oil, industry, mines and forests.

Eggs Above A Floor

Last week Britons could buy as many eggs as they wanted and had money for. Eggs were taken off the ration, free (of points) for the first time since the beginning of the war. But a curious regulation was made at the same time—unusual in Britain, common enough on this continent. The British Government decided that an egg had a proper price—fourpence (about five cents) and if the price fell below this farmers should never get less than four shillings for their eggs. In other words, the British Government put a floor under the eggs, to guarantee the price farmers would get. This is the beginning of price support to agriculture in the new, freer economy of the Conservative Government.

Having now secured a guaranteed minimum price for eggs, farmers in Britain may expect the Government to guarantee "fair" minimum prices for other produce. Is this really the return to free enterprise and an uncontrolled economy which the Conservative Government promised? It looks very much like subsidies. It smacks of the American system of price supports to agriculture—a system which the Canadian farmer leans on, too, in some commodities.

The American system of price support to farmers has been pretty expensive to American taxpayers generally. Since last April the U.S. Government has acquired 163 million pounds of dried milk from American dairy farmers unable to sell their milk on the price-supported market. Since December it has spent nearly a hundred million dollars buying floor-supported butter and cheese.

Canada sets a poor example for a food-exporting country in having any subsidies or floors on agricultural products, for this reason. The American program of supports makes it hard for the U.S. Government to lift quotas, tariffs and other restriction on the competition of foreign farm products. For instance, will the U.S. Government be eager to allow cheap New Zealand butter into the U.S.A.? If is did, the more higher-priced American butter it would have to buy, under the price support program. The price support structure works against Canadian agricultural products, too, seeking freer markets in the States. If Canada has such a program of floors and subsidies, can it ask the U.S. to abandon its agricultural price support?

Selling Canadian Coins In New York

A very large and competitive departmental store in New York called Gimbel's had a special sale the other day, of interest to Canadians. It was selling—and still is, for all we know—sets of new Canadian "Elizabeth coins". These, specially boxed and mounted, were priced at $4.50. Well, that seems to be a cheap Coronation souvenir. The gimmick in the Gimbel $4.50 Elizabeth Coins is that they are worth $1.91. You can go to a bank and get the set for merely $1.91, the coins' face value.

If Americans are anxious to have such a Coronation souvenir, a new tourist lure could be devised for the summer. 'Come to Canada for cheap shopping: get the Elizabeth Coin set—$4.50 in New York—for $1.91.' Our banks might take up the crusade as their contribution to the welfare of the tourist industry.

LIFE AND LETTERS

A Neglected Victorian

By PHILIP TOYNBEE

ONE BY ONE the great Victorian pundits are disinterred from the long entombment of our neglect, and presented to us in the terms of our own time. Twenty, ten, even five years ago it seemed that Thomas Carlyle had been buried too deep for resurrection. No row of old books was dustier on the shelf than the inordinate volumes of "Frederick The Great" and "The French Revolution," and there was no Victorian whose vaguely-apprehended spirit seemed more irreversibly alien. Had he not recommended to us, in sour pontifical terms, the German hero, and was there any recommendation in the world less acceptable to us than this one?

✧ ✧ ✧

YET in the last three years Carlyle has been brought almost naggingly to the attention of the English reader. There has been a biography and a collection of the letters to his wife; there has been a biography of his wife and a collection of her letters. And now Professor Trevelyan has done much to remove the guilt of our continued neglect by providing us with the neatest imaginable selection from the prophets' interminable works. (Carlyle: An Anthology. By G. M. Trevelyan). Writing, as always, in his role as the staunchest of contemporary Whigs, Trevelyan's introduction is a little masterpiece of discrimination. That is to say, he discriminates among Carlyle works to suit his and our own taste. There is no pretence that a volume of 180 pages which contains only three quarters of a page from "Frederick The Great" can be representative of Carlyle. Certainly he himself would be, not speechless, for he was never that, btu perhaps inarticulate with rage if he could see what Trevelyan has thought worthy of preservation.

✧ ✧ ✧

CARLYLE worked towards his adulation of the hero, and he believed that this anti-democratic thesis was the culmination of his genius. To him "Frederick" was his masterpiece; to Trevelyan his masterpiece was the early "French Revolution" a book which is informed and enflamed by a passionate radicalism and a sympathetic admiration for the people. It should be said in Carlyle's favour that he saw very clearly the complacent ugliness of Victorian "democracy," the smugness and the inherent follies of laissez-faire capitalism. It was against this background that he launded the Strong Man, whether Cromwell or Frederick, and found in dictatorship the only alternative to the shame and miseries which he was witnessing. He had not had our enlightening experience of Strong Men. We know that his solution was a false one, no better than a fire to the frying-pan of nineteenth century England. In his own time it was less easy to envisage the realities of Duce and Fuehrer.

✧ ✧ ✧

BUT it was not only, perhaps not even chiefly, for his views that Carlyle has been comparatively unread for so many years. Those of us who were forced to read "Sartor Resartus" at school, — one of his most successful books, according to Trevelyan, — are likely to remember with loathing the gargantuan style of the book, the inversions, the paradoxes, the teutonisms, the parentheses. That he was an entirely individual writer nobody has ever doubted; that he was a thoroughly bad one has been generally accepted by the literary stylists of our own time. It is this too simple view which Professor Trevelyan is anxious to correct, and he is at least partially successful in doing so.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT is possible that something of our distaste for Carlyle's style springs from a hidden envy of so much vitality and inventiveness. Certainly it is not true that modern English writers could write like this if they chose but that they prefer to do otherwise.

"The place is very strange, most lonely. For three days after our arrival we had no phenomenon at all but the everlasting roar of the loud winds, and the going and coming of the great Atlantic brine, which makes up and down once every twelve hours since the creation of the world, never forgetting its work; a most unfortunate-looking thing, doomed to a course of transcendent monotony, the very image as of a grey objectless eternity."

✧ ✧ ✧

THIS, as Trevelyan points out, is admirable It is, of course, an unusually quiet passage, but even when all the stops are pulled out, when the purple pours from the sage's pen, there are constant passages of magnificent and subtle imagery. And yet . . .

✧ ✧ ✧

WE are given, in this anthology, twenty-five consecutive pages from the third book of The French Revolution, so as to give us "an idea of (Carlyle's) narrative methods." How one almost gasps with admiration as one begins it, all these jostling felicities of idea and expression! But they begin, after a few pages, to jostle too eagerly; there is no relief. We realise that Carlyle is a writer totally lacking in that most necessary and humble of all literary qualities, the quality of fact. There are no undulations in his mill-race flow, no relaxation of his stentorian tone.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN FACT, a rigid and intelligent selection is just what was needed, and we must be grateful to Professor Trevelyan for providing exactly that.

American Royalty

(Washington Post)

It's good news that the First Lady has taken over one of the President's many chores of protocol, reception of American crowned heads. Mrs. Eisenhower has received a Snow Queen and a Winter Carnival Queen. It is a safe guess that all the traditional agriculture and industry will be along later.

London may have its big coronation pageant next June, but Washington has a continuing cavalcade of royalty. In this Republic, what girl doesn't have a chance to be a queen?

"Now, byos," said the teacher," always remember that you should never end a sentence with the word 'with'.

"That is," he went on hurriedly, "unless you have nothing else to end it with."

Letters To The Editor

WHO WAS FIRST?

Sir: The Chamber of Commerce had a notice in last night's Examiner, intimating that certain retail establishments in the city had more or less repudiated their agreement to give store operators their usual Wednesday half holiday, when there was another holiday falling on the same week.

Although there was no moral reason why other stores should follow their lead, it would be interesting for the citizens to know which store was the first to break the agreement. Maybe the Chamber of Commerce would oblige?

Yours truly,
"FAIR PLAY"

METHOD OF ASSESSING TRUCKS FOR ROAD USE

Sir: Recently the question came up as to how trucks af all sizes could be charged according to the damage they do to the provincial highways. It is certain that they are not paying a fair proportion towards the building and maintenance of these highways at the present time. How to properly assess these trucks has always been a problem for every Province and also for every State in the United States.

We have a postal metre in our office and it seems to me that people with know-how of the company making the postal metre, could very easily build a compact machine which could be fitted into every truck, which would enable the Province to assess on a ton/mile basis and this metre would be built into the truck at the time it was made at the factory and put in in such a way that when it was removed the ignition would be completely cut off. The metre would be taken to the Parliament Buildings or suitable government stations throughout the Province and would be set at 50,000 miles for which the trucker would pay so much per mile. This metre would run backwards and when it had reached zero again it would be cut off and it would be necessary for the trucker to take it to a Government agency for resetting and pay his further fee.

The matter of assessing each truck could easily be arrived at by taking its capacity and horsepower from the owner's permit and the rate would vary of course with the size of the truck.

The truckers would probably come up with the argument that part of the time they are running their trucks empty which would be offset of course by the fact that practically all the time they run them overloaded.

This is just an idea that I had and it seems to me it would be quite feasible. I am quite sure that the Provincial Governments would be delighted if someone came up with the idea of helping them to get proper remuneration from the trucking companies. What fairer assessment could be made than that they pay on a predetermined ton/mile basis?

INTERESTED MOTORIST.

REEVE GRIFFITH'S VIEWS ON ROADS

Sir: I do not disapprove of paved roads, as I can readily understand, with the ever-increasing traffic that the old gravel roads are a thing of the past. But oh how are we going to finance such a project without placing an intolerable burden of taxation on our ratepayers, as it has been stated that it will cost at least $5,000 per mile.

I might here state that the paving begins on the suburban roads, and the following municipalities are the fortunate ones to have these roads. Douro has 22.9 miles; Otonabee 18.8; Smith 18.8; North Monaghan 4.1; Ennismore 3.1; Dummer 1 mile. Asphodel, Belmont, Havelock, Norwood and Lakefield have none, but bear in mind should this become law at the June session we will have to pay our share according to our equalized valuation and this amount will not be levied on the total equalled valuation of $14,203,018.00 there will be a reduction of $1,549,816.00 taken off for the four Northern municipalities as they are not in the County Road system and do not contribute one dollar to the County road system or suburban area.

It is quite different with the Gannon's Narrows Bridge, the debenture on the County of $25,000.00 or $30,000.00 will be levied on the total equalized valuation of the County which I have mentioned as the four Northern townships do pay toward bridges. It is ony fair here to state that the city does contribute equal to the County on the suburban area, and the Provincial Government then puts up their subsidy but the City has nothing to do with the County roads.

It has been suggested that if the City would put up an extra grant of about $14,000 and the County the same along with a good substantial grant from the Government and what the suburban area commission had earmarked for 3 miles of this road that about 9 miles of this road could be done this year and paid for.

To that proposal Mr. Stewart objected and he said that he did not want to go back to Otonabee with the report that for two more years that the road commission money would go toward paving a road leading to a municipality not in the County road system, but he did not worry about the Eastern municipalities not getting anything for the next 25 years, and all this time paying our share toward paving the suburban roads which Peterborough pays a substantial portion to every year but nothing whatever to the County Roads. It is very plain to me what some of these Western Gentlemen have in their minds when they are so keen to pave that 12½ miles of road and have a five year debenture placed on a certain portion of the County to do this work in Smith and next year another 12 miles for Otonabee, and so on down till they get all the suburban roads paved, and it has been stated that 75 per cent or over of the traffic on these roads is foreign to the County.

My suggestion is that these municipalities that require the paving done on these respective suburban roads that they debenture their own municipalities along with the aid that they get from the City and the Government, as it looks very unfair to me to know that the Eastern portion of the County would be penalized for the next 25 years in paying debentures on the suburban roads.

When this was all done, the next move would be the paving of the County roads and I think your electors in the Eastern end of the County well know where the paving of the County Roads would start, and they will be still more costly as we would get no assistance whatever from the City, and we have around 134 miles of County roads, not saying anything about 99 County bridges, our County Road mileage in Belmont is 13 miles. So judge for yourself what the result will be.

Now with regards to my remarks in connection with the County assessor.

It might be well to let the ratepayers of the County know just what this gentleman is costing them through the County each year, over and above his salary. Not saying anything about what it is costing locally. Up to 1953 his salary was $3,500 plus $100 per month for the service of his car which would be $4,701. In 1949 according to the auditor's report he was paid $6,701.06—$2,001.06 over his salary. In 1950 he was paid $7,533.72 or $2,833.72 over what he was hired for. In 1951 he received $5,434.74 or $734.74 over his salary.

The 1952 auditor's report is not yet out but the chairman's estimate which was OK in 1952 was $5,500.00 or $800.00 over what his salary was. In 1953 they increased his salary by $500.00 which makes it now $5,200 and the estimate as was passed under bylaw for 1953 is $6,900.00 or $1,700.00 more than what his salary calls for and he is still not satsified, and through his pet in Belmont he has succeeded in having a resolution passed by four of the council granting his assistant $200.00. I do not know if he has found any more easy marks amongst the local councils or not.

Now is there any wonder at the remarks that I made in the County Chamber when I said that I did not want to cast any reflections on any gentleman in the Chamber but I included myself with the rest. When I said if we men would carry on our own local affairs on the same slip shod principle as what is carried on here that many of us would be bankrupt in five years, and I believe it.

Sincerely Yours,
W. E. GRIFFITH.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Now when Jesus saw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side . . .

And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him. And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered with the waves: but he was asleep. And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us: we perish.

And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then he arose, and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm. But the men marvelled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him! (Matt. 8: 18, 23-27.)

White Minority Rule To Be Biggest Issue

By ASTLEY HAWKINS

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters)—How a white minority can continue peacefully to rule a black majority in peace is the problem which surmounts all other issues in the current general election campaign in South Africa.

Voting is on April 15.

The leading parties, Prime Minister Daniel Malan's ruling Nationalists and their United party rivals, both support racial segregation. But they differ sharply over the right way to do it.

Malan has announced that his government, now seeking another five years of power, will stand or fall by policy of "apartheid" or separation.

Under "apartheid," white authority would be "safeguarded" while the non-white masses would be let develop in their own way with restricted voting rights or none at all in national affairs.

United party leaders say segregation would save the 2,500,000 "whites" from being ultimately swamped by 10,000,000 natives and other "non-white" inhabitants.

CONVINCED OF MISSION

Convinced of their mission to perpetuate white rule in South Africa, the Nationalists have been applying "apartheid" through acts of Parliament aimed at territorial segregation for whites, natives and other "non-white" peoples, prohibition of mixed marriages, and native voting restrictions.

Nationalists have scoffed at United party promises that if elected they will lift the racial issue out of politics by calling a national conference to discuss it, eventually making the world problem a parliamentary responsibility above party.

The United party leader, Jacobus Strauss, says the race relations situation in South Africa today is too big for one party alone to solve.

Malan, taunting the United party with having substantially the same race policy as the Nationalists, has dismissed Strauss' national conference promise as "nice and simple," but unrealistic.

South African voters are divided about the dangers of native unrest but are most agreed some form of control is necessary.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

Some argue that the large native populations have no organized capacity for major resistance. Others cite recent riots.

United party supporters believe that the Nationalists' uncompromising segregation has provoked rather than suppressed, discontent.

Nationalist administrators, pointing to Kenya's Mau Mau and Communist subversion in other countries, reply that "apartheid" backed by enforcing legislation is the only way to security, peace and prosperity for all.

The Nationalist minister for native affairs, Dr. H. F. Verwoerd, conceding a heavy influx of natives into towns, said that the Nationalist government's aim is complete territorial "apartheid" some day though this may take a "century or two."

MUST RESTRAIN PACE

South Africa must if necessary restrain its economic pace to stop natives swamping European areas for work, he added.

As the Nationalists see it, economic integration of natives in urban areas, would lead ultimately to native domination and they are making plans to stop it.

Despite this, there is an increasing integration of natives in the social and industrial life of South Africa. Native men working in South African cities are reported to have increased recently from 165,000 to 220,000.

With the shortages of white labor it seems impossible to stop the trend and the Nationalists themselves are now being blamed for the breakdown of the "color bar" in South African industry through tighter immigration restrictions imposed since they came to power.

Canadian Economy Adjusts To Higher Spending—Bank

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Canada is spending a lot of money, but has become accustomed to it.

This seems to be the conclusion of the current letter of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

The letter, devoted in large part to "sidelights on the 1953-54 budget," shows us nearly doubling our federal government expenditures in three years and taking it virtually in stride—give or take a groan here or there.

The letter, after picturing 1949 as a year of relative stability, relates the circumstances of the "baby budget" of September, 1950, which followed outbreak of war in Korea, and adds:

"Within a year of re-embarking on a high-level defence program, the universal old age pension legislation was implemented, adding thereby a third of a billion dollars to other welfare distributions of over two-thirds of a billion

REQUIREMENTS RISE

"Over a period of three fiscal years, therefpre, (1950-53) federal government financial requirements had risen by well over $2,000,000,000, or close to 85 per cent.

"No deficit financing was contemplated, and the strain of a pay-as-you-go policy on the tax-paying ability of the economy was expected to be severe, since inflationary pressures, while less acute than they had been some years earlier, were still to be reckoned with.

"Through a conjunction of circumstances, however, the strain proved less than was anticipated. As a result of various factors, some domestic, others international the tide of inflation seems to have turned. . . .

ECONOMY ADJUSTED

"On the whole, it would appear that the economy has adjusted itself, with a varying amount of strain, to the higher level of government spending that appears to be in prospect."

The 1953-54 budget appears calculated "to maintain in most essentials the status quo; that is to say, budgetary expenditures of approximately $4,400,000,000, maintenance of a dynamic free enterprise economy, with a rising level of employment, production and income, and a price level substantially that at the beginning of the year."

Woman Jailed For Bad Cheques

OTTAWA (CP)—Mrs. Renata Yelenich, 24, of Toronto, who passed five worthless cheques in an Ottawa department store last October to buy a new wardrobe for a screen test offered her by a phony "movie producer," was sentenced Wednesday to one year in reformatory by magistrate Glenn Strike.

Using the alias Renata Zvolanek, she posed as a German embassy staff member and purchased $277 worth of clothing, cosmetics and luggage for her "dream-trip" to Hollywood for the screen test offered her by a smooth-talking "producer" she met in Montreal.

The "producer" had told her she was just the right type for the movies and said he would give her a screen test, but she would need a new wardrobe.

When she ended her buying spree in Toronto, she could not find the producer and returned to Toronto where she married earlier this year.

Wilgress Predicts Barriers On Trade Will Be Eased

OTTAWA (CP)—Dana Wilgress, under-secretary for external affairs and a former deputy trade minister said Wednesday prospects for lowering the barriers that prevent free flow of trade are brighter today than at any time since the war.

He argued that there is a growing realization of the need for a freer exchange of goods, both in the United States and elsewhere, and he suggested that the time may be ripe for "more positive and constructive steps" towards the goal.

But an old boss of his wasn't so optimistic. Senator W. D. Euler (L—Ontario), trade minister when Mr. Wilgress was a senior official in that department, questioned whether there is any valid hope for real progress when the U.S. violates trade agreements already made.

CITES RESTRICTIONS

As an instance Senator Euler cited American restrictions against Canadian dairy products on which Canada has made three protests.

Mr. Wilgress said there "is a growing realization in certain circles in the U.S. that Europe should be able to earn more dollars. . . It's an educative program that may take considerable time but there are signs of a beginning there."

Court Decision Far-Reaching

BRANTFORD (CP)—A court decision Wednesday may have a far-reaching effect on the operations of interprovincial truck lines.

Magistrate R. J. Gillen dismissed two charges against Arrow Transit Lines Limited of Toronto, a firm which operates a trucking service between Ontario and Manitoba. Provincial police had charged the firm with neglecting to obtain a public commercial vehicle licence for a truck which was stopped on No. 5 Highway, en route to Manitoba, and also with not displaying such a licence.

The magistrate ruled that a Supreme Court decision handed down in connection with the operations of a bus company in New Brunswick, which operated between the state of Maine and Nova Scotia, was applicable to the case before the court here. He held that the province of Ontario has no jurisdiction to legislate for trucks which carry freight from one province to another. There was no evidence, he said, that freight was being picked up and delivered within Ontario.

Booklets For Schools On Queen Elizabeth

TORONTO (CP) — Illustrated booklets describing the life of Queen Elizabeth will be distributed to elementary school classrooms throughout Ontario, Education Minister Dunlop told the Ontario legislature Wednesday.

Purpose of the distribution, he said, is to "bring home to our children the importance of the British connection." The British Commonwealth and Empire was the greatest force for democracy in the world and the basis of it was British law and parliamentary government.

The book is written by Lady Tweedsmuir, widow of a former governor-general.

Asks U.S. Magazine Be Taxed Further

OTTAWA (CP)—J. W. Murphy (PC—Lambton West) suggested in the Commons Wednesday that United States magazines charging a differential of $1 a year on their Canadian subscriptions should be taxed a corresponding amount by the federal government.

During debate on excise tax amendments, Mr. Murphy said publishers of the duty-exempt magazines have continued a $1 "handling charge" for Canada because of possible "future developments" in Canadian taxation.

Jean Lesage, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott, replied that if Canada jacked up taxes on U.S. magazines the magazines might send up their subscription rates further.

Sees Big Development In Eastern Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—J. A. Pringle PC—Addington) predicted Wednesday night that "the next 25 years belongs to eastern Ontario."

Speaking in the budget debate in the Ontario legislature, he said completion of the St. Lawrence seaway project will give tremendous impetus to industrial development in this region.

Population of Kingston will grow to 75,000 persons, he predicted. It now has a population of 50,000.

New Speculation Likely About Lester Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—The name of External Affairs Minister Lester Pearson will once more be popping up in a favorite Parliament Hill game—speculation on the successor to Prime Minister St. Laurent as Liberal party leader.

While Mr. Pearson's name figured in similar speculation about the appointment of a secretary-general for the United Nations, there was a tendency to forget about him as a potential future Liberal leader.

Now that a Swede has got the UN job, Mr. Pearson's name will once again join those of Finance Minister Abott and others in conjecture about Mr. St. Laurent's heir.

SCHOOLBOY CLUB CURLING CHAMPIONSHIP was won this year by Bob Hutchinson's rink. Wednesday night, when the Peterborough Secondary Schools Curling Club held its annual banquet, Gordon McGavin presented the Hutchinson rink with the R. J. Gourley Trophy. Hutchinson (centre) admires the trophy with rink mates Hugh Outram and Frank Lundy; the fourth member, Scott Morley, was unable to attend the dinner. Ted Sanders' rink won the first schedule and received the G. N. Gordon Trophy.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

Hutchinson Rink Receives R. J. Gourley Trophy As School Curling Victors

The R. J. Gourley trophy, symbolic of the Peterborough Secondary Schools Curling Club championship, was presented Wednesday night to Bob Hutchinson's rink at the club's annual banquet at the curling club. The G. N. Gordon trophy was presented to Ted Sanders rink for winning the first schedule. On behalf of Mr. Gourley, Gordon McGavin presented the trophy and prizes to Hutchinson and his rink which included Hugh Outram, Frank Lundy and Scott Morley. Runners-up for the trophy were Doug Baptie, Ken Pammett and Barry Campbell.

In presenting his father's trophy to the Sanders rink (Sanders, Jack Eastwood, Larry Cunningham and Dan Griffin), W. B. (Pete) Gordon pointed out that it was first offered for competition in 1924. Some of the trophy holders included such curlers as Stu Widdess, Don Best, Ralph Clark, Al Heideman and Charlie Huffman.

FOR GORDON CUP

Besides winning the main event, Hutchinson also skipped the runner-up rink for the Gordon Trophy. His rink mates during the first schedule were Bob Pogue, Hugh Outram and Scott Morley.

Other presentations to rinks were: the second event (1) Gary Hancock, Bob Hollingsworth, Alvin Phillips and Bob Malby; (2) George Nickson, Jack King, Doug Ash and Bob Whitton, prizes presented by Ira Moore; consolation events (1) Dave Fanning, Arthur Cuthbert, Bob Pogue and George Harris; (2) Ted Sanders, Larry Cunningham, Bill Logan and Church Geale, prizes presented by Al Ingram and Tom Doughty.

The boys, in appreciation for the help given by advisor Wes Switzer, presented him with a gold watch and knife chain. They also presented Eldon Robinson and Ed Pritchard, the club's icemakers, with thank-you gifts.

SHOWED SLIDES

Another banquet highlight was the screening of colored slides taken by former senior club president W. M. Cruthers. Most of the slides were taken during Mr. Cruthers' trip to Scotland and Switzerland with the Canadian curlers three years ago. Others taken in Peterborough and in the west with Dr. Ralph Clark's rink were also shown.

Mr. Cruthers was introduced by Laverne Jones and thanked by Jack Loucks.

Mr. Switzer, in briefly outlining plans for next season, said he hoped for two fixed nights for curling and possibly 14 rinks.

He emphasized the sportsmanship in curling, saying "the one thing the game can teach is to lose gracefully."

C. S. Browne, principal at PCVS, Dr. Clark and Mr. Moore spoke briefly to the boys.

Jack King thanked the Ladies' Curling Club for preparing and serving the dinner, while Bill Watson thanked the senior club for the privileges offered the high school curlers during the past season.

H. Thompson Leads

Helen Thompson rolled high single of 303 this week in the YM senior girls' bowling circuit, followed by Shirley Heckman 272, Ann Reid 263, Helen Reid 243, Irene Penrose 248, Nancy Moffatt and Mary Morton 241, Ollie Searles 258, Mary Flaherty 250, N. Hepburn 233, and Betty Castle 230.

Helen Reid's triple of 635 was high, and she was trailed by I. Penrose with 629, M. Morton 618, O. Searles 616, M. Flaherty 604, and N. Moffatt and M. Woods with 600 each.

Aces took a firmer grip on top place by taking six points from Corvettes. Their nearest rivals lost six points to Glens. Tigers and Bombers took four each from Commandos and Hurricanes.

Marciano Camp Not Brimming With Confidence

HOLLAND, Mich. (AP) — The Rocky Marciano camp is far from brimming over with confidence as the time approaches for the heavyweight champion's defence against Jersey Joe Walcott.

Neither manager Al Weill nor trainer Charley Goldman will let the champion forget he was trailing on points and being soundly out-boxed by Walcott before the explosive 13th round finish of their blistering Sept. 23 fight.

"It doesn't make any difference how weak Walcott might have finished at Philadelphia, if he stayed on his feet, Marciano couldn't have won a decision," Weill said.

"We don't know how Walcott may fight this time, but if the pattern is the same, the pressure again will be on Rocky."

Goldman has been grooming Marciano to dish out heavy body punishment to the 39-year-old Walcott to hasten the wearing-down process. At the same time, he has been conditioning the Rock for either a vicious early attack by Jersey Joe or a crowding chase if the former champ goes bicycling.

"This should be an even-money fight," said Goldman. "Nobody knows better than Rocky that Walcott can punch, although I don't think Jersey Joe can floor him again in the first round. Marciano was a pretty confused boy in the first round at Philadelphia—suddenly face-to-face with a champion. The left hook that decked Rocky was not as hard as several he took later without blinking."

Curling News

By HERB MARTIN

When the key is turned in the front door of the curling club on Saturday night, we will have curled just about 150 consecutive days.

It has been a long season, and a good one. Lots of curling, lots of local competitions and lots of open bonspiels. It has been great sport,—the good-natured ribbing by the boys on No. 8 has been just a little better than usual.

The work done by the men's and ladies' committees hase been greatly appreciated by the members, and it all adds up to a wonderful season.

And now, before we sign off our column for this season, we want to express one hope, and that is: May you all have an enjoyable summer.

And now don't forget the banquet on Monday night. See you all there, and we'll have a "round robin" all our own — if you know what we mean.

The sympathy of the club is extended to Mr. Ab. Yelland whose mother passed away on Wednesday.

TONIGHT'S PROGRAM

Finals—Club Championship.
Finals—Leads' and Seconds' bonspiel.
Challenge Game—Youths vs. Old Timers.
Saturday afternoon at 2.00 o'clock "Fisherman's" bonspiel. Draw from the board. Everbody gets a prize.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

Oddfellows wind up their hockey season officially April 29 at the annual banquet for officials and players. It'll be held this spring at Coronation Inn, Lakefield, the village which supplied the IOOFers with several fine players the past few years. Local boys will leave the "Y" at 6.15 that night, the dinner being at seven of the clock. Officials of the Triple Links of OHA junior "B" rank intend carrying on next winter just as they've been doing since right after the war ended in '45. That good news as the club does a big job in junior hockey circles for local boys, and supplies future senior talent. And the IOOF-ers take care of all expenses themselves.

* * * * * *

That fine old Spanish-Irish warrior, Senor Miguel Roddenique of San Kingston, is chuckling gleefully these days as his beloved Goodyears move into OHA senior "B" semi-finals against Toronto Lyndhursts. And who can blame him? They beat off the belated Petes' threat at schedule's end — with the aid of a won protest o'er Orillia — and then ousted Belleville to go into group finals. There they fought back furiously from behind to erase Oshawa Truckmen for group honors. Had to switch coaches in mid-stream, too, Johnny Carr-Harris really getting the club rolling. Their fans have backed e'm in great style, and the Goodies must be richer now than a used car dealer. We wish them luck. And you, too, Mike Rodden.

Want To Lay A Bet?

Speaking of money in hockey, the Kitchener columnist had a few things to say of Sudbury Wolves — where Andy Milne plays — and their fans in the senior "A" finals. Says: "Sudbury fans are among the most speculative. Gents were wandering around there at the last game looking for places to get down 'up to $3,000' at even money on the game's outcome. They got a fair amount of it covered. One K-W supporter has laid $3,000 to $2,000 that the Dutchies take the series. An Owen Sound group has $1,300 on Kitchener at even money. Another bet was $900 to $500 on the series, and there are many smaller wagers." Goodness, that's a lot of oughday to be tossing around! And isn't there an anti-gambling law?

Stanley Cup semi-finals resume tonight in Montreal and Detroit. Hawks and Canadiens are tied at 2-2 now in their set whilst Bruins lead the Wings 3-1 and could end it this eve with a win at Olympia. Much as we admire Dit Clapper and Red Sullivan of the Bruins' club, we must still root for the rather baffled Red Wings. But they'd darned well better snap out of it or they'll be spectators in the cup final next week. Woody Dumart has done a terrific job to date in this series in shadowing Detroit's big gun, Gordie Howe. The hapless Howe is certain that he and Dumart are Siamese twins, as Gordie can't make a move on the ice without Woody crowding him. It's worked fine for Boston so far, but we think the NHL scoring champ will shake him in time yet.

One More Puck Night

Hockey comes to an official close here on Easter Monday night. It's the annual minor hockey night to put the PMHA back on its financial feet. The association has to pay rink rental all season and plays to slim crowds throughout the schedule. Provincial playdowns draw good crowds, but the individual teams concerned (and not the PMHA) get this money. A twin bill of hockey and skating races, along with a lot of good prizes, should attract a hefty Monday night gallery to mark the end of the season. Starting at eight, the local Ontario champion bantam Shamrocks play Keene midgets, a team which almost annexed an OMHA title this year, too. This tilt is followed by one betwixt Port Hope juveniles and the local midget Aces, who made such a good show in provincial playdowns. Skating races are for bantam, midget and juvenile players.

Something new was added to the pro grapplers' versatile repertoire at the Brock Arena last e'en before a large and most appreciative audience. They staged a six-man tag team bout, and it was slightly atomic. Like a cyclone in a shingle factory. Everything went in this one as six big wrestlers and two refs shot the works in the furious action. It wound up with the good guys — Pat Flanagan, Tim Geohagen and Larry Moquin — the winners over three downright nasty characters named Firpo Szybsko, Red Mask and Man Mountain Dean. You had to see it to appreciate this one. Another lively bout saw Earl McCready down tough Jan Gotch to the fans' applause. The wrestling midgets are an added attraction on next week's card, 'twas announced.

Strangers To NHL Playoffs In Last 7 Years Chicago Hawks Doing Well

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

After seven lean years of reading about the Stanley Cup in the papers, Chicago Black Hawks are giving a good account of themselves in the National Hockey League playoffs. Sid Abel's crew, who just barely squeezed into fourth place on the last night of the regular schedule, have fought the second-place Montreal Canadiens on even terms through four games of their best-of-seven semi-final round. As they hit the ice at Montreal tonight, nobody is taking them lightly.

Somewhat overshadowed by Boston Bruins' fine showing against Detroit Red Wings, the Chicago-Montreal series has consistently provided excellent hockey. Two of the games were decided by a one-goal margin—one in overtime—and in the others the issue was in doubt until the last few minutes.

MAKING LAST STAND

By contrast, three of the four Detroit-Boston games were comparatively one-sided, the lone exception being the 2-1 victory in overtime that first gave Boston the series lead a week ago.

The Wings, making something of a last stand on home ice against the Bruins tonight after blowing their last three games, would be happier if they had been able to save up some of the seven goals they shoved past Sugar Jim Henry in taking the series opener.

Three games and three defeats later they are still on even terms with the Bruins from a goal-scoring standpoint, but Henry has developed a frustrating habit of thwarting their best efforts when the chips are down.

Goalie Al Rollins of the Hawks also deserves a large share of the credit for Chicago's 2-2 status against the hard-shooting Canadiens. The lanky 26-year-old from Vanguard, Sask., has robbed the Montrealers blind throughout the series, drawing praise from friend and foe.

SENSATIONAL WORK

As Canadien coach Dick Irvin observed glumly after the Hawks evened the series with their 3-1 victory Tuesday night, you can't win games without scoring goals—and some of the stops Al pulled in Chicago that night made the Habitants wonder if they'd ever see a red light flash behind him again.

If the Wings stay alive, they'll continue their series at Boston Sunday night. The Hawks' next date with the Canadiens is at Chicago Saturday.

Trojans Given Cage Title Over Penguins

Referee Howard Hempstead decided the YMCA house league championship Wednesday night. Trojans and Penguins were meeting for the third time, the deciding one, and after persistent bickering by the Penguins about his calls, Hempstead awarded the game and the title to the Trojans. The game ended abruptly early in the fourth with the Trojans well ahead 45-31.

Trojans won the first game of the best-of-three series a week ago and on Tuesday night the Penguins tied the series with a close 33-32 overtime win. Tentative plans for a final city series, the city league champions, the Oilmen, and the Trojans of the Y league have been called off.

The Trojans let the Penguins be the aggressors throughout the game and, at the same time, Trojans played a waiting game for quick breaks up the court. Playing zone defence, Trojans worked their superior height and teamwork for the championship.

AN EARLY LEAD

Trojans took a five-point lead in the first quarter when foul shots helped build up the margin between the quintets. Bak and Roininen, along with Noble, Woods and Groves, cashed in on the foul attempts to offset points totalled by field baskets by Cerosino, Fowler, Thompson and Wyatt.

Once again in the second, the Trojans distributed their points well, with Noble leading the way. Thompson and Wyatt attempted to keep the Penguins close, but again foul shots gave the Trojans another slight lead, taking a 31-22 score at the half.

The quintets played on even terms in the third quarter when Trojans were still ahead 40-31. But early in the fourth, the Trojans started to move further ahead, mostly on successful foul shots.

Bak and Roininen paced the Trojan attack with 14 and 11 points. The Trojans took long shots and the two, Bak and Roininen, took the rebounds, often tipping them in for baskets. Wyatt and Thompson led the Penguins with 11 and 8 points.

The line-ups:

Trojans 45 — Noble 8, Woods 7, Groves 5, Roininen 11, Bak 14.

Penguins 31—Hurrle 1, Ceresino 3, Gandy 4, Fowler 4, Thompson 8, Wyatt 11, O'Connor, Outram.

Walton Rolls 401

George Walton banged out a mighty 401 single and A. Hall hit top three of 844 in fine bowling this week in the Major League. Cherney's 3,757 led teams as Bickell's rolled high single game of 1,340. The 7-0 wins went to Cherney's, Herb's, Examiner, Brewers and Bickell over Burtol, Crowley, Sunshine, Hollingsworth and Selkirk. The 5-2 victories were taken by I & G, Revenoors, McLeod, Clapper and UEW against D & W, E & B, Silents, Paramount and Studebaker. Wonder took OPP by 4-3 and Plazas won 4-3 from Edward's.

Good scores included: J. Playford 720, H. Killen 814, D. Abraham (305) 817, W. Harris 774, M. Caccavella (348) 755, A. Mattucci 777, A. Pilling 738, G. Stevens 758, J. McPhee 763, W. Stanbury 752, G. Walton 778, J. Barnes 721, C. Downer 726, J. Platt 741, D. Coughlin 722, A. Caccavella 737, A. Sanderson (321) 756, and E. Reynolds 719.

Pat, Larry And Tim Win Wild Team Mat Bout Over Dean, Mask, Firpo

Bedlam ruled the ring at the Brock Arena last night as six brawny pro grapplers and two referees caused wild confusion in the final bout before a huge and noisy crowd. It was the first time Peterborough has seen a six-man team mat bout, and the fans loved the furious action dished up throughout the scrap which lasted nearly an hour. The popular trio of Pat Flanagan, Larry Moquin and Timothy Geohagen won two of the three falls over the villainous team of the Red Mask, Man Mountain Dean and bald Firpo Szybsko. These three totalled 843 pounds to 677 for the winners, while Referee Bert Maxwell is a buxom 260 and Ref Joe Gollab a trim 180. The reinforced ring stood all the punishment and was still standing at the wild finish.

MOQUIN OUT

Szybsko threw Moquin out of the ring hard and the latter was counted out in 17 minutes for the first fall, as the crowd booed. A six-man free-for-all broke out after the bell outside the ring as the husky opponents tore into each other and frightened ringsiders scrambled to escape injury. Before the fall, it was a mad scramble inside the ropes as Firpo, Dean and the Mask turned loose their illegal tactics to be met by fast, hot grappling by Tim, Pat and Larry. At times, it looked as though there should have been six referees and just two grapplers in there to keep order.

Moquin evened the count in 19 minutes when they returned, as he pinned Szybsko, after Larry and Pat worked in relays on Firpo with drop kicks perfectly timed to douse his glimmer. Again it was wild and woolly, as they took each other on in twos and threes, once two of them hitting the 350-pound Dean together with a flying tackle that knocked him flying out of the ring. Tim was the strong man of the set and also showed more ring finesse, but Dean was the biggest, and the Mask the roughest, the villains working in a lot of corner rough stuff. This fall drew a big hand from the excited onlookers.

"IRISH SLEEPER"

Geohagen got the deciding fall in six minutes over the Mask with his "Irish sleeper" — an unconscious hold. It was hot and heavy till then, with all six wrestlers and the two refs in the ring at one time in flying tackles to add to the confusion. Larry did a lot of work in leading up to Tim's fall, and Flanagan was flying, too. As it was a team match, the hooded one didn't have to take off his mask when felled this time. The fans whooped it up at the popular finish.

Earl McCready, 247 pounds, won the other bout over 236-pound Jan Gotch. The latter won the opening fall in 31 minutes with a rolling headlock, but Earl evened it in nine minutes with two flying tackles off the ropes and a spread. He gained the deciding fall in five minutes more with his special rolling cradle scissors as the fans applauded. Gotch persisted in rasping eyes, pulling hair, using choke holds and throwing knees and fists. McCready kept ploughing in, and he got in some hard licks himself to keep his chippy rival in check. Each of the two referees took a turn at handling this lively bout. It was announced that an added mat attraction here next week will be a four-man team match featuring the famous wrestling midgets.

Hockey Rhubarb Develops In Western Group

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP)—A hockey rhubarb has sprouted in the Western Junior Hockey League. It grew to a healthy size Wednesday.

Cries of anguish and scorn were heard in Lethbridge, St. Boniface, Flin Flon and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The root of the rhubarb is defenceman Mid Houghton of Calgary Buffaloes, a four-year veteran of the Western Junior League and an all-star the last two seasons, who has been granted by the CAHA to the WJHL champion Lethbridge Native Sons as a playoff medical replacement.

Native Sons lost three regular defencemen through injuries while winning the WJHL title. They applied to the CAHA for three replacements and got one—Houghton, a hefty rearguard who can also be a potent forward.

UNFAIR MOVE

"Unfair," said coach Alex Shibicky of Flin Flon, whose Bombers trail Lethbridge 2-0 in their best-of-seven western semi-finals. "All some clubs have to do is cry a little and they can pick up an all-star defenceman," stormed manager Larry Desjardins of St. Boniface Canadiens, Manitoba junior champions, Claiming the action a "distinct breach" of the CAHA constitution, Desjardins threatened to pull his team out of the Memorial Cup playoffs.

"Piteous and heart-rending," was Lethbridge manager Ed Bruchet's caustic reply.

From Midland, Ont., CAHA secretary George Dudley said it would be "regrettable" if St. Boniface withdrew, but added that permission for Lethbridge to use Houghton will stand.

Charles Floors Layne 4 Times, Wins Bout

SAN FRANCISCO (CP)—Ezzard Charles punished Rex Layne Wednesday night to win a unanimous decision in the 10-round bout and emerge as one of the top contenders for the heavyweight title he once held.

Displaying strong punching power, Charles floored Layne four times.

Charles, weighing 187½ pounds, spotted his big rival 15½ pounds, and proceeded to give him a terrific beating. Layne balanced the scale at 203 pounds.

The former champion went into the ring as the four-to-one favorite and justified the odds before a near-capacity crowd of more than 7,000.

SHARP PUNCHES

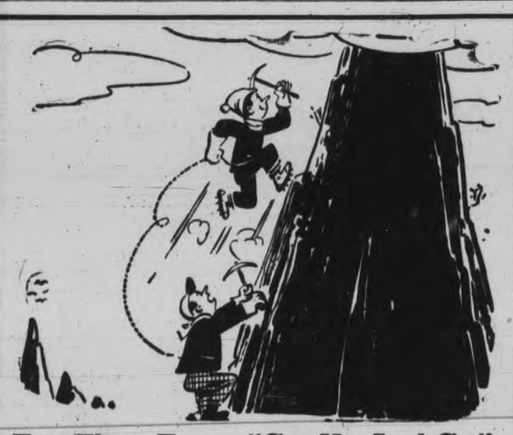
His sharp punches to the face and body took the steam out of Layne but the latter came back fighting every time.

Layne was floored in the first, sixth, seventh and 10th rounds. He got on his feet each time.

There was no count after the first-round knockdown, nor in the sixth. Layne was wobbly in the sixth round and staggered along the ropes but referee Frankie Carter had to send Charles back to a neutral corner. This delay prevented a count being started and the round ended soon after.

From the seventh round on Charles really worked on Layne.

The former champion was on top of his man as soon as the seventh opened. He smashed Layne's face with lefts and rights and dropped him with a straight to the nose. Layne got up and took the count standing. His face was a mass of blood but he fought back gamely. He was groggy from left hooks to the jaw at the end of the round.



UP AT ONCE

Just after the eighth round opened Layne went down on one knee from Charles' steady punching but he was up at once.

Charles finished strong in the ninth with two hard rights to the jaw and pummeled Layne's body with a two-fisted attack.

Layne went down from a left hook to the jaw in the tenth round. They started out by slugging toe to toe but Charles quickly assumed charge. His smashing blows made Layne wilt.

He sagged to the floor and the fight was over just after the referee started to count.

Cardinal Rookies Really Shine As St. Louis Scores Victory

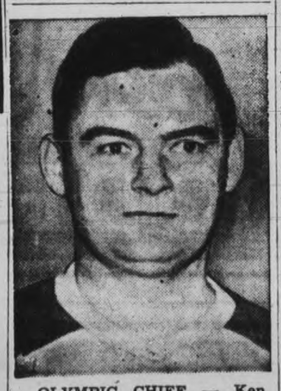
By BEN PHLEGAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

Now that they've shaken the Florida sand from their shoes, St. Louis Cardinals are setting about to prove that they aren't as bad as their spring record indicates.

With a feast of minor league pitching ahead of them, the Red Birds should be able to pull into their Sportsmans Park home with a better than .500 average even though they won only eight of the 22 games in Florida.

Wednesday the Cards pounded out a 12-4 decision over Atlanta of the Southern Association.

The important thing to the Cardinals about that triumph was the way their rookies came through. Third baseman Ray Jablonski laced a triple and a home run. Steve Bilko, who can have the first base job for keeps if he can hit, drove in four runs with a triple and two singles.



The quality in other exhibitions across the country Wednesday varied from good—in Clearwater, Fla., and Mobile, Ala.—to farcical—in Denver.

At Clearwater Richie Ashburn homered in the first inning and Smoky Burgess homered in the 10th to give Philadelphia Phils a 2-1 extra inning victory over New York Yankees.

The Yanks and the Phils both got high class pitching. Curt Simmons worked the first five innings for Philadelphia, giving up five hits and an unearned run, while Karl Drews finished the last five with only two hits. Allie Reynolds turned in his most impressive work of the spring as he went the first eight for New York.

At Mobile in another 10-inning contest, Brooklyn Dodgers edged Milwaukee Braves 3-2. Preacher Roe, Russ Meyer and Ed Roebuck toiled for Brooklyn, Roebuck scoring the deciding run.

Then there was the 12-11 fiasco between Cleveland Indians and the New York Giants at Denver. Cleveland pounded Sal Maglie for eight runs in the first six innings, led 11-7 after eight innings, and then won in the last of the ninth on a fluke single by outfielder Dave Pope.

OLYMPIC CHIEF — Ken Farmer, of Montreal, has been elected president of the Canadian Olympic Association, succeeding A. Sydney Dawes who held the post for the last seven years. Mr. Farmer formerly was honorary secretary. He is in uniform for an old-timers' hockey game in which he took part during the McGill winter carnival at Ottawa.

2 Teams Defy Hockey League

HALIFAX (CP) — Two defiant Maritime hockey teams prepared Wednesday to stage a series which may mean their banishment from Canadian amateur hockey.

Halifax Atlantics and Glace Bay Miners, despite a suspension threat by the Maritime Amateur Hockey Association, plan to open their Maritime Major Hockey League finals as ordered by the league.

The MAHA, on orders of the parent Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, says it will suspend both teams if the game goes on.

What will happen then is anybody's guess. Best bet is that Miners and Atlantics will complete their series anyway even if the MAHA decides to offer the title to someone else—say Charlottetown Islanders who were tossed out of the picture by the league.

Gordie Howe Of Red Wings Finds Romance

DETROIT (AP)—Romance has come to Gordie Howe, No. 1 star of Detroit Red Wings, National Hockey League champions.

Pretty Colleen Joffa of Detroit said Wednesday that she and Gordie will wed after the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The date, she indicated, largely depends on how long the Red Wings will stay in the playoffs. Right now they are fighting to survive the semi-finals with Boston Bruins.

Colleen, who has never been a hockey fan, said she and Gordie met through mutual friends two years ago.

"I think he'll make a wonderful husband. I couldn't have picked anyone nicer and kinder than Gord," she said.

Predict 1953 To Be Biggest Shipping Season

FORT WILLIAM (CP)—Railway, grain and navigation officials here and in Port Arthur are predicting that 1953 will be the biggest shipping season in Lakehead history.

About 68,000,000 bushels of grain are in store at the Lakehead elevators and more than 7,000 loaded railway grain cars are in the terminals of the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Officials say they expect this year to set a record. The present record was set in 1945 when 495,000,000 bushels of grain were transported by freighters from Lakehead ports.

They said the fleet will be in from the lower ports by the weekend and the rush will start next week.

TAKE ON 50 EXTRA MEN

C. L. Webb, head of the Grain Trimmers' Association, said Wednesday an extra 50 grain trimmers have been taken on the staff.

The CNR has already set a record this year in grain handling. A total of 4,201 cars were in the company's terminals Tuesday, 700 more than the previous highest figure. They contain nearly 7,500,000 bushels.

The CPR has some 2,900 cars waiting to be unloaded, bringing the total amount of grain to 12,500,000 bushels.

The first shipments of iron ore from the CNR ore dock are expected about April 17, a month earlier than last year. About 1,500,000 tons of high grade iron ore are expected to be shipped from the dock this season. A $3,000,000 extension to the dock is under way and when completed in the spring of 1955 will double the present capacity to 60,000 tons. Shipments from Steep Rock iron mines are expected to be doubled by the same date.

Children Kidnapped For Special Sacrifice

ACCRA, Gold Coast (AP)—Police scoured the Accra area today for witch doctors reported to have kidnapped small Negro children with the intention of sacrificing their hearts to a weird African god.

The witch doctors are believed to be hunting for 25 young human hearts and 25 adult hearts as a sacrifice to the state god of Tema township. Local newspapers reported the sacrifices are meant to placate the fearful god for the construction of a new harbor at Tema, about 20 miles from here.

The witch doctors are said to have offered £10 to taxi drivers for each live child delivered to them.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The president of a small South Bend factory found only one of his 16 employees at work when he arrived at the plant Wednesday. The others were picketing.

Discover Roads Biggest Danger

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The biggest danger to movie makers in darkest Africa is neither the natives nor the wild animals. It's the roads.

That's the report from Robert Surtees, first of the Hollywood crew to return from shooting the Ava Gardner-Clark Gable epic, "Mogambo." The ace cameraman arrived here in time to collect an Oscar for his filming of "The Bad and the Beautiful."

"The toughest things we faced in Africa were, in this order: roads, weather, natives and animals," said Surtees.

"The roads in Africa are unbelievably bad. You just can't pick up one day, travel 100 miles and start shooting the next day, as you do in this country . . . three of our company were killed in road accidents."

MURDERS REPORTED

The "Mogambo" company worked in British East Africa, scene of terrorism by the Mau Maus Surtees said that murders were reported in the vicinity but no violence was seen.

"There was a rumor that the Mau Maus were going to take a shot at Gable, in order to attract attention to their movement," he remarked. "John Ford, the director, moved the location because of it.

"One day the police came and took all our native drivers into custody. All but two of them were returned later. Apparently the two were Mau Maus."

The animals were the least of their problems, the cameraman added. There were a lot of lions across the river from one of their camps, and they'd raise a ruckus at night.

TAKES TO AFRICA

Surtees said Gable took to Africa like a great white hunter. Miss Gardner was less enthusiastic about life in the wilds. She had her food flown in, but the crew claimed they ate better than she did.

Ava's hubby, Frank Sinatra, visited the location three times, between engagements in the U.S. Surtees said he was a great help for morale, organizing a Christmas show and keeping up the spirits of the homesick film makers.

Bargaining Outlined To TLC

Collective bargaining was the subject of an address by Daniel Dean, business agent for the International Association of Machinists, Wednesday evening at a meeting of the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council.

Mr. Dean said that negotiating and collective bargaining mean just what the words imply. A committee is formed by employees and together they meet with management. Labor must be prepared to listen to the problems of management, and management must be ready to understand the problems of labor.

It is too often the case that workers do not read what is in their contract and it is the function of the unions to educate the shop steward to know all the phases and clauses that are in the contract.

When you go to negotiate a contract with management, you must have an answer to all of their questions, or your requests will lose their forcefulness, Mr. Dean said. When unions are bargaining they should try to make the negotiations and demands benefit management as they do labor.

Lamport Announces $5,000,000 Project

TORONTO (CP) — Mayor Lamport Wednesday revealed a $5,000,000 plan for the development of Toronto Island.

The plan, prepared by planning commissioner Tracy LeMay, calls for consolidation of the islands, raising them above flood level and zonning them into park, residential, commercial and waterfront areas.

The mayor said he hopes the plan's low cost will enable a start to be made on it this year. He said it includes two new features—it provides for 4½ miles of docks on the bay side and would cost about one-fifth of anything yet proposed.

ADOPT GERMAN ORPHANS—Officers and men of the 79th Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, stationed at Hohne, Germany, have adopted a nearby German orphanage. Here they distribute gifts to some of the children on the lawn of the orphanage. The Canadian troops in Germany are Canada's first peacetime garrison. They are part of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization force in Western Europe.

Front-Line Bunkers Of Korean War Preferred To Bright Lights Of Hannover

For almost 2½ years, Bill Boss has been Canadian Press staff correspondent with the Canadian forces in Korea. Now he has spent three weeks with the 27th Canadian brigade in Germany. This story is the first of a series in which he compares conditions in the two theatres. Red-bearded Boss, 35, was an army officer in Italy before he joined the CP staff as a war correspondent there in 1943.

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HANNOVER, Germany (CP)—There's a world of difference between the front-line bunkers of Korea and the bright lights of Hannover. Give me Korea every time.

Canadian soldiers who have sampled both—with the 25th brigade in Korea and the 27th in Germany—seem to agree with me. For instance, L.Cpls. Louis Rodrigue of Montreal and Don Russell of London, Ont., Korea veterans now in Hannover.

"We'd rather be back there," Rodrigue said. "The soldier in Korea is treated as an adult. And I'd much rather be with a brigade doing a job there than with one pretending there's just as tough a job to do in Germany."

FEELS IN STEP

By and large, my experience is that the Canadian soldier in Korea is happy, accepting the necessary limitations of an active theatre and appreciating what is done for him. He feels in step.

That can't be said of the Canadian soldier in Germany. From talks with 27th brigade commanders, I have a feeling changes will be made to make him happier. But he doesn't feel in step now.

The soldiering, the political and social climates, even the weather are different in Germany and Korea.

Korea has one of the finest climates in the world. Even in the rainy season, Korea has sunshine. In winter, sun follows sleet.

DREARY WINTER

Winter in lower Saxony, of which Hannover is the chief city, is dank, dreary and dismal. Day after day brings cloud and mist.

"By actual count, we've had 18 hours of sunlight since November," a colonel told me in late March.

The Canadian in Korea lives in a hillside cave and a shooting enemy is at most 1,000 yards away. He works by night and sleeps by day. He has a bath and change of clothes about once a week. He gets to Tokyo for one five-day leave a year. That sounds tough, but there is the accompanying satisfaction of knowing you're doing a job.

The Canadian in Germany lives in centrally-heated barracks. He works from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and the "enemy" is 50 miles away, behind the iron curtain. He has hot showers and changes clothes daily, gets three 14-day leaves a year with cheap fares anywhere in Europe. He can get a midnight pass to go downtown after hours. That sounds good—and it is.

BETTER IN KOREA

Soldiers in both theatres get three hot meals daily. Rations are equally good, but I think the meals are better in Korea, even if Danish milk is trucked to the men in Germany every second day.

In both theatres, the Canadians are largely ignored.

Japanese occupation and war have reduced Korea to a primitive land of picture-postcard beauty in spring and summer. The words "freedom" and "United Nations" are meaningless to Koreans, who only want to grow their rice in peace. The few who meet the Canadian soldier rapidly win him by simplicity and charm.

War-smashed Hannover is in process of impressive reconstruction. Its people, however, are noted among Germans for their aloofness. They have not got over the defeat of 1945 and still resent the uniform of occupation forces. Associating with a man in uniform makes a German feel self-conscious and conspicuous.

Korea is operational. The 27th Canadian brigade also functions as an operational unit, but the other North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces try only to do a straightforward garrison job. The Canadian in Germany resents the fact that he is treated differently from the soldier of other NATO countries. They evidence a feeling of frustration.

COMPARE ENTERTAINMENT

The Canadian soldier in Korea is virtually isolated from Canada. He gets Canadian news irregularly, sees the occasional Canadian concert party. In Germany he gets a daily Canadian news broadcast, a daily Canadian feature-type broadcast at noon, but no concert parties. There is a better selection of up-to-date motion pictures in Korea.

All three battalion colonels in Germany said Canadian amenities are needed. One said: "Canada is doing this thing on the cheap."

They said British-run canteens and clubs are available, British authorities lean over backward to provide facilities the Canadians suggest, and that volunteer British women workers do a wonderful job in the canteens. But Hannover has no place with a Canadian flavor for the Canadian soldier off duty.

Canadians on leave in Tokyo have the Maple Leaf Club to which they can take Japanese or Western girls. There is nothing like that for the soldier in Germany. Except on leave, there is no way for the soldier in Germany to "get away from it all."

Personally, I'm glad to be going back to Korea, to a straight-forward job with soldiers who are soldiering and like it.

Wants Ontario To Pay Costs

TORONTO (CP)—The provincial government was asked Wednesday night to pay costs of two famous Petawawa military camp trials.

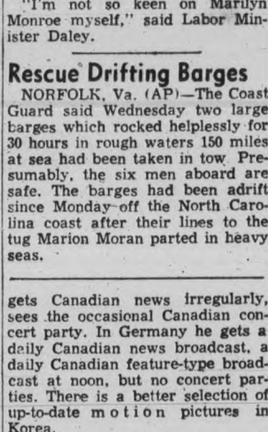
Stanley Hunt (PC — Renfrew North) said in the legislature that the army theft trials last year and the murder trial two years ago of a soldier who shot two comrades at the Petawawa officers' mess raised county levies in Renfrew North by half a mill.

In a budget debate address, he suggested that the province assume costs of court actions arising from the presence of military establishments.

Mr. Hunt urged also an early start on the Allumette Island bridge between Quebec and Ontario.

The Quebec government should state whether it will assume costs of building the bridge approach on the Quebec side, he said.

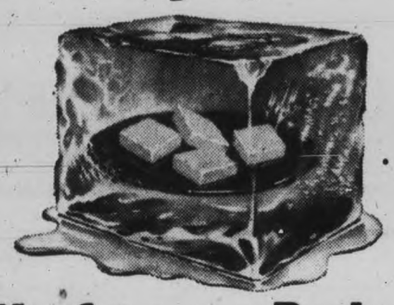
Film Bad Publicity For Niagara Falls



TORONTO (CP) — Hollywood's treatment of Niagara Falls in the recent film "Niagara" was criticized in the legislature Wednesday night.

W. L. Houck (L—Niagara Falls) said the film, starring Marilyn Monroe, had not portrayed Niagara Falls in a favorable light and the star's acting had been criticized.

"I'm not so keen on Marilyn Monroe myself," said Labor Minister Daley.



Rescue Drifting Barges

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—The Coast Guard said Wednesday two large barges which rocked helplessly for 30 hours in rough waters 150 miles at sea had been taken in tow. Presumably, the six men aboard are safe. The barges had been adrift since Monday off the North Carolina coast after their lines to the tug Marion Moran parted in heavy seas.

BLASTS McCARTHY — Mutual Security Administrator Harold Stassen appears before the Senate Permanent Investigating Committee to accuse Sen. Joseph McCarthy of "undermining" administration efforts to cut off shipping to Iron Curtain ports.

Shy London Policeman Becomes National Hero

LONDON (Reuters)—Tom Ledger, shy policeman who put London's murder squad in the shade, is a national hero here today.

Ledger, constable No. 400v to the metropolitan police, arrested John Christie, 55-year-old clerk accused of killing his wife, Ethel, in London's Notting Hill district.

In 24 hours Ledger has leaped from the humdrum routine of a policeman's daily life into the headlines of the press.

He has proved again that it is the man on the beat who gets his man, who succeeds where often Scotland Yard detectives fail.

Ledger, 43, once was told by a police promotion board after passing his examination to become a sergeant: "You are staying where you are. You are deemed unfit to wear three stripes."

Now his name will glow among the annals of Scotland Yard. For a week they spread a gigantic police net over Britain in the most sensational man-hunt the country has known since Jack the Ripper knifed six prostitutes 65 years ago.

Four strangled women were found concealed in Christie's house. His wife's body was found under the floor and three others in a wall recess. Bones of at least two more were unearthed in the backyard.

Back home in the neatly furnished flat where Ledger lives with his wife and three children, Ledger is just a family man.

After arresing Christie he reported to his local station—and then went off duty to dig his garden.

"Constance (his wife) was thrilled to bits when I got home," he said.

CELEBRATES CENTENARY—St. Francis Xavier University at Antigonish, N.S., long noted as a socially-minded college, is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year. Besides its full enrolment of 855 students, St. FX's crusading extension department numbers thousands of men and women learning the way to economic prosperity through the Antigonish movement of adult education. On its trim 50-acre campus, with its Georgian buildings of native sandstone, sons of city men rub shoulders with sons of farmers and fisherfolk.

Canada's Socially-Minded University

By JACK BEST
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP)—St. Francis Xavier is known as a socially-minded university. This year it is celebrating its 100th anniversary.

With a full-time undergraduate enrolment of 855 students, including Mount St. Bernard College for women and Xavier Junior College in Sydney, the university is among the smallest in Canada.

But there are thousands of others St. FX is teaching who never write exams and who never set foot on a university campus. These are the men and women learning the way to economic prosperity through the Antigonish movement of adult education, named for this eastern Nova Scotia town of 3,800 in which the university is situated.

NOTABLE MOVEMENT

Under the guidance of St. FX's crusading extension department, working in close co-operation with federal and provincial governments farmers, fishermen and industrial workers in the Maritimes have organized themselves into co-operative groups doing millions of dollars worth of business each year.

To stimulate mature thinking on pressing social problems, university personnel hold panel discussions which are carried over Antigonish's powerful little radio station CJFX. St. FX pioneered in the use of radio for education, and a highly informed type of industrial worker in Cape Breton is one result.

Two of four Canadian experts now in Southeast Asia under the Colombo plan are St. FX men. Rev. M. J. MacKinnon, director of the extension department, is studying co-operative education possibilities and J. Ed O'Meara, of the federal department of agriculture, is exploring co-operative marketing.

On St. FX's trim, 50-acre campus, with its Georgian buildings of native sandstone, sons of city men rub shoulders with sons of farmers and fisherfolk. About half the students are from Cape Breton Island, but there is a sprinkling from the United States, Holland, England, Korea, Haiti, Greece, Nigeria and several Latin American countries.

FOUNDED BY BISHOP

The university was founded in 1853 by Rt. Rev. Colin Francis MacKinnon, bishop of Arichat, to prepare young men for the priesthood. The emphasis has long since shifted to more secular considerations, but St. FX still turns out its fair share of seminarians. the president, Rt. Rev. P. J. Nicholson, attributes this to the "Christian atmosphere" of eastern Nova Scotian homes.

The tercentenary of the death of St. Francis Xavier had been observed in 1852, and the prominence then given to the Apostle of the Indies was responsible for the school being named in his honor.

In 1866 the provincial legislature conferred upon St. FX full university powers. Sixteen years later a board of governors was created, and today this group includes three members elected by the alumni association.

St. FX is holding year-long celebrations to mark its 100th birthday. Highlights this summer will include observance of the 25th anniversary of the adult education movement, a general alumni reunion and a conference of United States and Canadian mining engineers.

SUCCESS IN SPORTS

The university has had great success in the field of sport. This year the hockey team, which won the Maritime senior championship in both 1951 and 1952, bowed out of Allan Cup competition because the playoff schedule conflicted with exams. The university has taken the Canadian intermediate basketball title twice. It also has a flock of Maritime intercollegiate championships to its credit.

St. FX's president is a silver-haired physicist of 65 who was brought up to speak Gaelic and whose voice even yet is vibrant with the Cape Breton Scottish accent.

"Doc Pat," as the students call him, holds honorary degrees from four Canadian universities and is a past president of the National Conference of Canadian Universities.

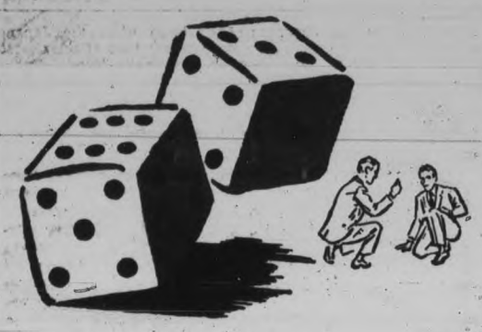
He shows considerable concern over education's "neutral" attitude towards religion, and is suspicious of liberalism because it makes educationists "shy clear" of important issues. He welcomes federal aid to universities, provided no strings are attached. "Otherwise," he says "we'll have to refuse regardless of how poor we are."

Urges Citizens To See Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Senator W. A. Buchanan (L—Alberta) urged Wednesday that greater stress be placed on encouraging Canadians to visit various parts of the country.

Senator Buchanan, chairman of the Senate tourist committee, said this encouragement cannot be given without the Trans-Canada Highway now under construction.

He said during a debate on tourist trade in the Senate that if Canadians lack complete national understanding, the reason is that they only know about sections of the country in which they live.



Canadians should be encouraged to visit historic spots in other provinces in the interests of fostering a stronger Canadian spirit through devotion to the memory of the great men who laid the foundations of Canada.

St. Laurent On Holiday

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent left Wednesday by air for a 10-day Easter holiday in Bermuda. He will join members of his family at Hamilton for a reunion and brief vacation. During Mr. St. Laurent's absence, Trade Minister Howe is acting as prime minister.

YOUNG SEAL-HUNTER

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—Murray Sampson, 15, shot a seal near the shipping pier here. He spotted the seal on the ice and after the kill went out with his 11-year-old brother Jerry and brought the carcass to shore.

Niagara Project Costs $299,900,000 To Finish

TORONTO (CP)—The estimated cost of completing Ontario hydro's new power project at Niagara Falls is $299,900,000, according to a return tabled Wednesday in the Ontario legislature for Farquhar Oliver, Liberal leader.

The hydro said the lowest tender was not necessarily accepted for the first two of the tunnel's five sections because of policy not to award contracts for all five sections to the same firm.

The project, to be called the Sir Adam Beck station No. 2, is slated to supply 1,200,000 horsepower.

Urges Britons Forego Luxuries For Investments

LONDON (CP)—Britons should be willing to go "threadbare and hungry" to allow maximum British investment in Canada, the right-wing Daily Express urges in an editorial.

The strongly pro-Commonwealth newspaper, owned by Canadian-born Lord Beaverbrook, chides Britain for having "lagged behind" the United States for years in providing development capital for the Commonwealth nation.

But it praises as a favorable trend the treasury's authorization of £17,000,000 so far this year for investing in Canada's dollar economy. For the same period last year, between £7,000,000 and £10,000,000 was allowed.

NEED CAPITAL

Canada's vigor and potential lack only sufficient working capital for development, the newspaper says.

"Every single golden dollar" that can be spared—and the British people should "gladly" forgo such luxuries as cigarettes and films to supply them—should be allocated for Canadian investment purposes.

The alternative is to "allow others to exploit the heritage which is Britain's and which, if only men would see it, could bring happiness and prosperity beyond imagination to their children and all the children of Europe."

House Approves Financing Of Water Projects, Won't Retain Ownership

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is putting on a hard-and-fast basis the practice it has followed in paying part of the cost of water-conservation projects entered into with the provinces and municipalities.

A measure making the practice statutory received second reading —approval in principle—in the Commons Wednesday and received support from spokesmen of all parties. However, some of them thought it did not go far enough.

Resources Minister Winters said the government looks for the cost of such projects to be met on the basis of 37½ per cent maximum from the federal treasury, 37½ per cent from the provinces and 25 per cent from the municipalities involved. This has been the basis of a number of water-conservation agreements entered into with Ontario.

The minister said the aid will be for joint projects that will contain water and reduce floods. Development of hydro-electric power was not a primary aim though hydro might be a by-product of some projects.

DAM CONSTRUCTION

The main aim was construction of dams and the providing of forest cover to control drainage. The primary responsibility for such projects would remain with the provinces.

In its half-day Wednesday sitting the Commons gave third and final reading to a series of amendments to the Excise Tax Act, implementing excise changes made in Finance Minister Abbott's February budget.

It also approved legislation giving more power to the Yukon council to govern the 9,000-odd people in the 207,000-square-mile territory. The bill gives the council jurisdiction over such things as agriculture, hospitals, roads, elections and inquests which up to now have been directed from Ottawa.

Mr. Winters told Gordon Graydon (PC-Peel) that the possibility of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories ever becoming provinces was governed by their ability to shoulder provincial responsibility. With their small populations and vast territories they were not yet able to shoulder these responsibilities.

WON'T RETAIN OWNERSHIP

In the debate on the water-conservation bill, Mr. Winters said the federal government will not retain any ownership interest in projects jointly financed by the federal, provincial and municipal governments. He said the new legislation will be integrated with operations of federal forestry legislation which provides aid to the provinces for reforestation.

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, H. W. Herridge, (CCF-Kootenay West) and John Charlton (PC-Brant-Wentworth) supported the principle of the bill.

However, Mr. Low said the bill was not all his party wanted to see in the field of water conservation in Canada. But it was a start and the federal government was showing leadership.

Mr. Charlton, agriculture specialist for his party, agreed with the principle, but said he had hoped the measure would contain more provisions for water conservation and even soil conservation.

12 Of Russ Mission Leave For Home

All had been living at the old Russian embassy building which flies the Red flag but which is not recognized by the Japanese government.

All were members of the wartime Soviet mission to the Allied Council for Japan which went out of existence when the Japanese peace treaty took effect almost a year ago. Soviet Russia does not recognize the treaty and legally is still at war with Japan.

TALK JET-SHOOTING PREVENTION — Sir Ivone Kirkpatrick, left, British High Commissioner for Germany, has agreed to talks on air safety in the corridors to Berlin, proposed by his Soviet counterpart, Gen. Vassily I. Chuikov, right. The Russian's proposal resulted from a British protest over the recent shooting down of a British bomber over Germany.

OSHAWA'S AIRPORT

More than 5,000 airplane arrivals and departures were logged at the Oshawa airport last year. Six hundred of the flights were visiting aircraft, and 100 of them were from the United States. George Slocombe, manager of the airport, comments in a report to the city council: "There is no doubt of its growing importance to Oshawa."

CAR-GAS TRUCK COLLISION

A car driven by Douglas Hunter, 22, of 611 Erskine Ave., early today was in collision with a large gas transport truck on the Springville hill, seven miles southwest of Peterborough on Highway 28. Nobody was injured and damage was $250 to the car and $50 to the truck. Hunter, driving a southbound car, told OPP Constable George Louth that he jammed on his brakes to avoid hitting a northbound car. One of his brakes caught; the other did not. The result was that Hunter's car crabbed across the highway, striking the left rear corner of the oil truck.

Sunny Skies

Although the sun was shining today over the district, the thermometer had six degrees to climb after noon to match Wednesday's high point of 50. Peterborough's temperature Wednesday was as high or higher than most spots in Canada. Only Muskoka airport with 58 and Halifax with 60 among the official weather centres reported higher temperatures. The fine sunny skies should continue Friday when most people will be enjoying a holiday, the weatherman predicts.

Clear Driver Of Blame In Man's Death

Dealing Wednesday with a fatal accident which occurred February 27 at the Nepheline Mines, a coroner's jury absolved a Lakefield truck driver of all blame when they found Austin Stevenson, RR 1, Norwood, "came to death by misadventure."

The decision followed evidence that the deceased had slipped while trying to climb into Arthur Boucher's slow moving truck, and fallen beneath the wheels.

Witnesses called by Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw were Wilfred Stevenson of Cobourg, Elmer Wright of the Nepheline Mines, Dr. H. E. Gastle of Lakefield, Louis Haddlesey of Norwood, Dr. J. E. Howes of Peterborough, Albert Boucher, Arthur Lee of Lang and Reginald Matthews, mine foreman.

The two doctors testified as to Stevenson's condition following the accident. The right side of his chest was crushed and he suffered from two leg fractures. He died two days following the accident.

The events surrounding the accident were described by Haddlesey, Boucher and Lee.

TRIED TO CLIMB UP

Haddlesey, another truck driver near the scene, said Stevenson had come running out of a building on the mine grounds after Boucher's truck which was slowly pulling away from the building "at a walking pace."

He said Stevenson "tried to climb in the door but slipped and fell underneath the back wheels."

Lee, a passenger with Boucher, said they had just pulled away from the building when he heard the door handle rattle, saw Stevenson briefly and then saw him disappear. He told Boucher, who had heard the door handle rattle, to stop the truck.

Following first aid at the mines, Stevenson was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, where he died two days later.

Coroner Dr. H. C. Carleton presided over the inquest.

CAMERON ST. SCHOOL is causing some attention throughout the province because of its low construction costs. The four-room primary school is costing the city about $65,000, plus an additional $15,000 to furnish and to improve the grounds. To house a kindergarten, Grade 1 and possibly Grade 2 classes, the school is being built by the Mortlock Construction company and will be ready for school opening in September. —Examiner Staff Photo

May Cancel New York Trip

TORONTO (CP) — A plan by the Ontario department of education to take new Canadians on a trip to New York next month may be cancelled.

Director of community programs K. Young said today that U. S. immigration authorities say the trip, May 15 to 18, must be confined to 500 persons. About 1,800 new Canadians have applied.

Last year New York state education authorities brought over a large number of new citizens on a similar educational trip.

Decision whether to carry out the arrangements will not be made until next week, Mr. Young said.

The new Canadians and accompanying teachers would pay their own way, about $42.

McCarney Represents Separate School Board

J. G. McCarney will represent the Peterborough separate school board during the 93rd annual spring convention of the Ontario Educational Association to be held at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto during April 6 to 9.

The convention will attract 9,000 delegates from all over the Dominion, and will be the largest educational conference to be held.

The program will include a number of panel discussions on timely topics concerning educational problems. One of the highlights of the convention will be the finals in a province-wide public speaking contest. Another highlight will be a musical concert in Eatons' Auditorium, with a school chorus of 300 voices.

Threatened To Jump Jailed Three Months

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph Lacosse, 26, who was talked out of jumping from the CBC's 500-foot television tower here last week was sentenced today to three months for obstructing police.

Lacosse, who was discharged from the CBC's sound-effects department a few hours before the threatened jump, was finally persuaded to come down from his perch on the 300-foot level by his girl friend and a detective.

Employees, Westclox Reach Agreement, 6-Cent Raise

The International Union of Electrical Workers (CIO-CCL) announced today that they had reached agreement with the Western Clock Co. on a new contract that gives the 500 production employees a wage increase of six cents an hour. Hours of work remain the same. Local 570, IUE-CIO, bargaining agents for the Westclox workers, said that the increase is effective March 31, but four cents of the six-cent wage boost is effective Dec. 1, 1952. This gives the workers an extra $28 in back pay.

The new contract also includes improvements in a health-welfare-pension plan, paid for by both company and employee contributions. Among the improvements on the 1952 plan are unlimited coverage for hospitalization instead of $5 a day, and provision for the use of new "wonder drugs" as they are available. Maternity leave is now granted for a year.

OTHER CHANGES

Other changes in the agreement:

Average earnings to be paid to incentive worker under specified conditions, such as loss of work due to tool trouble, breakdowns, and transfers to other jobs for company convenience.

Automatic wage progression from the starting rate to the job rate in three-month intervals for unskilled labor; and in intervals anywhere from six months to a year for progressions from starting rate to job rate for skilled labor.

Improved grievance procedure.

Liberalized provisions on statutory holidays.

A cost-of-living clause providing for protection in case of a rise in the cost-of-living index.

Improved seniority provisions giving protection to employees when laid off because of lack of work.

Improved short work-week provisions.

GUARANTEED RATE

Incentive workers are guaranteed the starting rate of their labor grade and can never earn less than that rate.

The work week remains at 42½ hours.

Union and management reached final agreement without the intervention of the conciliation board. The board was appointed and heard negotiations for two days and then adjourned on March 13. Eric G. Taylor, labor expert and chairman of the board, told the parties to get together and do some more negotiating. This was done and the deadlock was finally broken.

Monday night the membership of Local 570 ratified the terms of the new contract. It will likely be signed in a couple of weeks.

PCVS Students Begin Exams

Grade 12 students of the commercial, home economics and industrial courses are starting examinations today, which, they hope, will make it possible for them to finish school by May 1.

This will leave them free to seek employment in their chosen work.

The students will be eligible to finish the first of May if they attain high enough standings in the exams they are writing between now and April 17.

Henry Toole is in charge of placing the commercial students and Howard Moebus and Wesley Switzer are taking care of the placing of the industrial grads. The students will be under the supervision of the school for a month and a half following their leaving on May 1.

U.K. Dollar Reserves Up $63,000,000

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's gold and dollar reserves increased by $63,000,000 during March, the treasury announced today.

This brought them to $2,166,000,000 March 31, their highest level since the beginning of 1952, compared with the low level of $1,662,000,000 last April, but still far below the peak of $3,867,000,000 in the middle of 1951.

Last month's increase is about half of February's increase which was $125,000,000. It included $29,000,000 of defence aid from the United States and $19,000,000 in part payment of Britain's February surplus with the European Payments Union.

The sterling area's surplus with the dollar area during March was thus only $15,000,000 compared with $74,000,000 in February.

Hamilton Official Visitor in Peterborough

Assessment Commissioner Norman Wilks of Hamilton was a visitor today at the City Hall on his way home from Ottawa where he attended the meetings of the Appraisers Institute of Canada. He was in charge of Peterborough's assessment department, immediately preceding the appointment of J. E. Davis.

Mr. Wilks was a member of the Hamilton assessment when he was engaged to fill the vacant commissionership here. Then Hamilton council reached out and took him back in the responsibility as Commissioner and head of its assessment department. He had to assume the adoption of two major changes on his return. One was the re-assessment of all Hamilton properties and business in 1951, and last year the city annexed 3,000 acres of township lands. Mr. Wilks spent most of his time this morning with Assessment Commissioner Davis.

Restaurant Owner Captures Bandit

MONTREAL (CP) — A 42-year-old Chinese restaurant owner early today told police he ignored a young gunman and then captured him after "he kept bothering me."

Gordon Lee told police the man came into the store, asked for cigarettes and then pointed a gun at him. "The gun looked like a toy so I just ignored him," he said. When the man turned his head away Lee said he sprang on him and held him until police arrived.

NEW SD AND G PRESIDENT

Robert Willshaw, a former sergeant, was elected president of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders Association at the annual election of officers Wednesday night. He succeeds Eric May. Other officers for 1953: Roy Garrett, vice-president; Palmer Howden, secretary; and Max Sexsmith, treasurer. Mr. Willshaw served with the SD and Gs during the campaign in north Europe until he was wounded. Winner of the Easter ham at the meeting was Joseph Douglas.

Annexation Of Smith Acres Becomes Law
City Now One-Third Larger

1,200 Acres Added As Lieutenant-Governor Signs Provincial Bill
Committee Gave Approval Two Weeks Ago

Peterborough's incorporation of 1,200 acres of Smith township received final sanction today with the third reading of the city's private bill by the Legislature and royal assent in its signing by Lieutenant-Governor Breithaupt. With that ultimate official authority, City Clerk Outram today wrote to all the departments of the civic administration informing them of the transfer of the annexed area from the one municipality to the other, that is from Smith township to the city of Peterborough.

Notification was sent by letter to both Civic and St. Joseph's Hospitals, Board of Education, Police Commission and Department, Fire Department, Family Court, Court of Revision, health services and the other branches of the city's administration.

MANY AFFECTED

By this notice the city's services and responsibilities to its people are extended beyond the old north boundary to the new lines that are projected into Smith.

Authority of the city police now embraces the new area, replacing there the Ontario Provincial Police. Likewise the Fire Department assumes responsibility for fighting fires in the city's annex.

Court of Revision will be required to confirm the former township assessments, in effect a repetition of the assessing that was agreed upon last year by the city and township councils.

The city adopted the assessments made in 1952 by the township's assessor, but Mr. Outram had to mail new notices of assessment giving to the property owners a further opportunity of appeal. Several of the owners have taken advantage of legalistic detail, and their claims will come before the city's Court of Revision.

The altered status of the area reaches out to any gasoline stations formerly within the township's bounds. They will be required to comply with the city's bylaw controlling the hours of business of the "gas" stations.

Peterborough's health department will extend its activities to the residents who now become entitled to their benefits by incorporation. Another effect of the acceptance of those taxpayers by the city is that they will pay their taxes this year at the City Hall.

As already mentioned, the valuation by Smith assessor has been adopted by the city as the basis of tax payments for 1953. Peterborough's rates are levied on the unaltered assessments as determined by the township, but the tax notices will be sent out to the property owners by Don W. Hill, collector at the City Hall and deputy treasurer.

Finally, the incoming taxpayers acquire all the rights of citizens of Peterborough including their enfranchisement entitling them to vote in the city's municipal elections.

Britain Honors Egyptian Pact

LONDON (AP) — Britain will honor the British-Egyptian agreement on Sudanese independence "in the spirit and the letter," the minister of state, Selwyn Lloyd, told the House of Commons today.

But, he added, Egyptian interference in the Sudanese election and Egyptian propaganda against Sudanese administration could cause the agreement to break down. Lloyd, who is chief foreign affairs deputy to Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, reported to the House on his recent visit to the Sudan and Egypt.

"One of the purposes of my talk with General Naguib," he said of his Cairo trip, "was to try and diminish the amount of propaganda that was being initiated. . and I did make it quite clear that I thought that Egyptian interference in the election and the continuance of propaganda against the administration would cause this agreement to break down."

Egyptian officials repeatedly have criticized the way Britain is handling the preparations for Sudan's first general election.

Eighty girls of Peterborough county are meeting at Normal School Saturday, April 11 for their Junior Homemaking Club achievement day.

The program arranged by Miss Jean Noble, Bowmanville, district home economist, begins with registration at 9 a.m. Judging classes comprise the main event of the morning. Girls bring their own lunch.

In the afternoon there will be planning of the program for the coming year, club demonstration or skits, modelling of all dresses by Club members and presentation of certificates and awards.

Club leaders and assistants are as follows:

Bailieboro—Mrs. L. M. Perrin and Mrs. J. Stewart.

Belmont — Mrs. C. King and Mrs. Ivan Ellis.

Buckhorn —Mrs. O. Churchill and Mrs. W. H. Pearson.

Hall's Glen—Mrs. A. Harrison and Mrs. Marg Neville.

Havelock—Mrs. F. C. Bennett and Mrs. W. Woodbeck.

Keene—Mrs. E. Anderson and Miss Edith Wood.

Lakefield—Mrs. M. Payton and Mrs. Roy Farrow.

Warsaw—Mrs. H. G. Digweed and Mrs. Milton Drain.

Dresses made by members have been arriving of late at the office of the Department of Agriculture. They will be exhibited and judged on Achievement Day. Judging includes a class of four dresses, and a class of four models dressed for a definite occasion.

Each Club is expected to present an exhibit designated "Cottons May Be Smart", and with comments by some Club members.

Miss Noble is inviting mothers and friends of the Club girls and also members of the Women's Institute.

✦ ✦ ✦

Eastern Ontario Day

Farmers' Day at Kemptville Agricultural School will be Wednesday, June 24. It is being planned by A. M. Barr, Principal, especially for farmers of Eastern Ontario for demonstrations and other activities closely related to their own farm problems.

✦ ✦ ✦

Holstein Club Dinner

Dean R. O. Hurst, retired head of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, Toronto, will be the speaker at the Holstein Club dinner on Tuesday, April 7, at Brookside Pavilion, just east of the city, on No. 7 Highway.

Tom Hamilton of Toronto, comedian, is coming as entertainer. The dinner will be purveyed by the women of St. James' United Church. Henry Sharpe, president of the club, will be chairman.

✦ ✦ ✦

Hereford Herd Sold

Hereford breeders of the district will be interested in the report from Calgary of the dispersal of his famous herd by W. A. Crawford-Frost, known in Alberta as the squire of Caerleon Ranch. He has sold his propety and Hereford cattle, and plans to live in retirement in Calgary.

Eighteen bulls and 89 heifers were disposed of by auction. The females averaged above the $600 mark. Two of the American-bred bulls went to A7 Ranch at Nanton, one for $7,600 and the other for $6,600. Another brought $6,750, paid by Mel Wood of Tofield, who recently had the top selling bull at the Calgary sale for $8,000.

Caerleon-bred bulls were high at $4,000 down to $2,500. John Hay of Nanton, herdsman for Mr. Crawford-Frost, paid $2,200 for one bull.

✦ ✦ ✦

Postpone Decision

Asphodel members of the Federation have decided to postpone until next fall further consideration of forming a township branch.

✦ ✦ ✦

Propose Ohio Trip

Crop Improvement group requested Frank Paterson Tuesday to draw up a schedule of a proposed three or four day trip into Ohio and adjoining States early in June. Estimated cost is around $50. If 35 to 40 farmers are interested in this educational journey plans will be undertaken. Inclusion of some business men was generally approved.

✦ ✦ ✦

Meetings At Norwood

East Peterborough Junior Farmers meet Wednesday, April 8, at 8:30 p.m., at the High School. Miss Jean Noble, district Home Economist, will discuss with the girls' group matters of special interest to them. Gordon LaPlante, of Maple Cattle Breeders' staff, will talk about his work.

Organization of calf and swine clubs is scheduled for Friday, April 10, in the town ahll, as reported by Ken Best.

✦ ✦ ✦

Assessing Woodlots

Assessment of woodlots is not affected by the value of their timber in legislation which received the approval of the committee on municipal bills of the Ontario Legislature Monday.

This is an amendment to encourage farmers to maintain fully-grown woodlots on a continuing basis and is intended to promote practical conservation. The 1950 select committee on conservation first pointed out that usually the assessment of woodlots kept pace with the growth and value of their trees.

To conserve the timbered areas as a means of retaining moisture has been advocated as a helpful policy in conservation planning. The amendment provides that fenced-off woodlots not used for pasturing may be classed as "woodlands," of which the assessment value would remain the same regardless of the timber on it.

✦ ✦ ✦

For Poultry Producers

Ontario Agricultural College has issued three publications dealing with the feeding of poultry based on the latest available information. Chicken, broiler and turkey growers may obtain copies at the office of F. C. Patterson, agricultural representative. Feed formulas presented in the circulars were developed under Ontario conditions.

✦ ✦ ✦

Benson Retreating

A recent visitor to Macdonald College, Professor J. K. Galbraith, of Harvard University, said that a general weakness in the price of major agricultural products in the United States constitutes an increasingly difficult problem for the new administration. He indicated that Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson was already retreating from his position of recommending price supports only as "disaster relief."

Professor Galbraith suggested that this retreat would likely continue to the point of putting the United States Department of Agriculture essentially behind the price suport programs inherited from the former Democratic Administration. This might be expected to cause continued difficulties in getting Canadian farm products into American markets.

Present legislation allows the United States Government to impose import restrictions on products which are receiving price support assistance. Professor Galbraith said that he found the American economy in a very healthy condition and that although most prices would likely continue their slow downward trend he could see no general decline in employment or personal incomes in the near future.

✦ ✦ ✦

Attractive Farmsteads

Peterborough Forums agreed at their second last meetings of the season that it is sound and stimulating policy to make some consistent effort in enhancing the attractiveness of the farmstead.

The factor of cost seemed to be emphasized in most of the secretaries' reports. That is pertinent enough when applied to liberal use of paint, which not only brightens the premises but also preserves wood surfaces against effects of weather. The more ambitious the home beautification project, the more it is likely to cost.

However, planning can be greatly simplified. For example, no one would object to the trivial cost of those two long beds of petunias on the west side of the Chemong Road, south of the Lindsay turn. The attract attention that remains in memory when the rest of those three miles from the city is an indistinct blur, pleasant enough in its trees and lawns and green countryside. And, petunias require little attention, occasional watering during dry weeks of midsummer, but otherwise this grand old flower blooms gaily and profusely until the frost comes.

Some of the Forums mentioned the possibilities of the cedar hedge. That reference recalls the Robinson farm, down the hill and across the road from Benafort United Church, in South Monaghan. With its trim and rounded lines, and the arches over the walks leading to the house, that hedge cost nothing to set, and thereafter only the chore of training. Passersby can't help but notice and admire it. And as the Forums said, such decorative effects lift the spirit, add value to the property, at least to the people who appreciate the graces of shrubs and hedges and a neat green background, or foreground.

As to conflict with farm work, hedges can be planted in the spring or fall, cedars are available in the many woods, and the hedge in growth usually invites a flower bed, such as a perrennial border. One other idea might appeal to farmers within reach of the city (Walter Bowles is thinking of subdividing part of his place west of Scott's Corners), hedges or shrubs planted now, and with an eye to eventual sale of lots might repay handsomely the little investment in cost and work.

The radial roads from Peterborough, as with other towns and cities, will continue to attract people looking for home sites in rural surroundings. Trees and shrubs are an asset and could be the preponderating factor when properties for purchase are being scanned.

A "SHORT" RIDE—Stopping over in New York en route from London to Atlanta, Ga., "Shorty," the world's smallest full-grown horse, gives airline passenger service representative Pat Powell a "short" ride. The 59-pound, 30-inch long horse is to be on exhibition at a children's playground in Atlanta.

Once A Forum Nonentity Peterborough Attains Prominence At Convention

Lorne Reynolds of Smith Township must occasionally wonder at the expansion of the Farm Forum in Peterborough since the lean and tardy years of its development during his presidency of the Federation of Agriculture in this county.

At that time Peterborough farmers, aware of the importance of the forum, were comparatively few. And that dimness of recognition was general throughout the eastern counties of the province.

But, the new strength of forum sentiment in this same area within the boundaries of Peterborough will be strikingly represented at the annual meeting of the Ontario Farm Radio Forum Thursday, April 9, in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto.

CHAIRMAN AND SPEAKER

Presiding at the opening session in the morning will be the 1952-1953 chairman, Wellington Sutton of Otonabee Township, and the guest speaker will be Wilson M. Gemmell, manager in Peterborough of the Royal Bank. It may be the custom of the Ontario Farm Forum association to distribute its honors among the provincial membership. If that be so, Mr. Sutton may become the immediate past chairman. However, a Peterborough farmer has has his day at the head of the Ontario Forum counties, most of the province, and the speaker for this year's convention is a Peterborough business man.

Combine those interesting personalities with the attendance of between 400 and 500 farmers and their wives, and also their sons and daughters, including the Peterborough county young men and women of the one of the few Junior Farmers' Choirs in Ontario, and the total accomplishment and advancement from an insignificant and lowly position in the Forum ranks stands high in credit to rural Peterborough.

More by implication than outright appeal, Mr. Sutton suggested last Monday night at the Forum Rally in the Normal School, that Peterborough's Forum membership should be not only notably, by being numerously, represented at the Toronto convention.

CHEAP RAIL FARE

He spoke of the arrangements which were being made to secure an extra coach on the morning local train to Toronto at the fare of $3. If Mr. Sutton were less modest in his public appearances he might have told his large audience that the convention occasion deserved at least a full coach from Peterborough. Instead, he merely mentioned the facts of cheap transport without referring to Mr. Gemmell and himself, and requested an early decision by farmers who wished to make the trip. Mr. Sutton would have been excused if he had injected a little ballyhoo into his announcement.

But, to return to Lorne Reynolds, another quiet fellow, and his presidency of Peterborough Federation! At that time Ontario Federation regarded the Forum as an exceptionally promising offspring, a hope and expectation that has been largely realized.

In the vestibule to the Federation convention hall at the King Edward Hotel, an Ontario map of its counties was conspicuously placed, locating the Farm Forums with black-headed pins. Bruce and Grey and Simcoe, Middlesex and Waterloo, were liberally specked with them. Any one at a glance could count the number of Forums in Bruce, for instance, and by comparison the counties east of Toronto all the way to the Ottawa River stood out prominently as lightly populated Forum territory.

WHEN THE EAST LAGGED

Forum interest and membership was spread mainly across the western Ontario counties, but even in that field there were weak spots of white space here and there. Peterborough had comparatively few Forums, but some of its eastern neighbors were content with a black pin or two, or none, so far behind the provincial procession were they.

Peterborough was the county that gave the Ontario Federation its first president in James Gifford, and also its energetic and pace-making, prudent secretary, Vivian S. Milburn.

Mr. Milburn said at one of those Federation conventions that wherever he found vital Forums with convinced and enthusiastic members, he also noted strong sentiment and support for the Federation. The parent organization has consistently promoted and substantially helped to finance its vigorous offshoot, and still continues that policy. It was Mr. Milburn who described the Forum as "the strong right arm of the Federation."

For Lorne Reynolds and director delegates who accompanied him to the Federation conventions during his term, those were days of patient spade work.

Mr. Reynolds didn't linger long or proudly in front of that Forum map in the King Edward. His only consolation was that some of the eastern counties showed fewer black pins than his. W. W. Dawson continued in more recent years to project Forum possibilities before rural Peterborough, and Henry Sharpe is carrying on the promotional work amid a harvest of black pins which affirm as other achievements have testified that here in Peterborough it can be done.

Last Monday night some of the Forum members drove 30 miles or more to attend the rally at the Normal School winding up the winter of 1952-1953.

CREDIT TO MEMBERS

That is an example of the spirit abroad in the Peterborough townships today. A few names have been mentioned, principally the leaders on the way up from comparative nonentity in the Ontario Forum ranks, but those men would be the first to give credit to the Federation directors and members and subsequently the Forum executive whose efforts have been so gratifyingly rewarded as they are by the rally attendance, the distinction to Mr. Sutton and to townsman Gemmell.

If some communities hold aloof from the Forum associates they are missing an opportunity to take part in a great institution which the farmers of Ontario are doing so much to sustain as literally a national Forum of rural Canada.

ONTARIO THE LEADER

Ontario takes primacy in this enterprise, universally unique among farm people, and is easily first among the provinces. And Peterborough County has arrived, still without a complete Forum network, at a position which Lorne Reynolds did not regard as possible when the Peterbrough black pins on the Forum map could be counted on one hand.

That is rather a long story behind the Peterborough Forum rally the other night. The moral is plain. It can be done, and it has been done.

Bush Pilot Invents Special Gadget

SOUTH PORCUPINE (CP) — Bush pilot Tommy Cooke has invented a gadget that quickly and accurately estimates the size of forest fires, their progress and the size of burned areas which result.

He says it can also estimate timber stands, the cut areas in logging operations and the size of log booms. It measures the size of lakes, islands and other geographical features.

The gadget, called an aerial fire estimator, will be incorporated in the 40 planes belonging to the Ontario department of lands and forests.

RECEIVES BONUS

Cooke, a DFC winner who has been flying from the department's base here since the end of the war, received an initial bonus of $10 for the idea, but that was later raised to $100.

The estimator uses a half spherical mirror to project an image of known size on the area under calculation. Circles on the viewing glass provide the pilot with a basis of computation with each circle twice the size of the next. The area varies with the square of the altitude. A computor on the gadget gives the size of the area under study.

1,027 Liquor Licences Issued In 5 Years

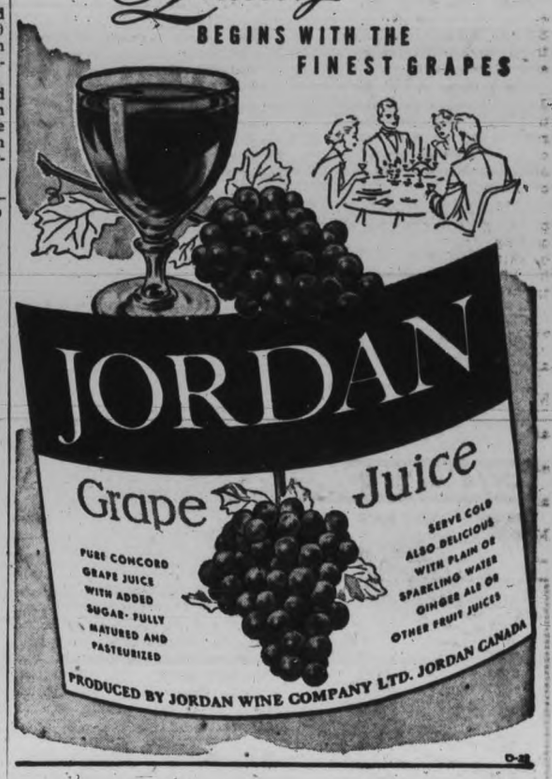
TORONTO (CP)—A total of 1,027 liquor licences of all types was issued in Ontario from 1947 to the end of 1952, said a return tabled in the Ontario legislature Wednesday for Albert Wren (Lib.-Lab.—Kenora).

Public house licences for men headed the list with a total of 251. Other totals were: Dining lounges 249; lounges 234; dining rooms 149; public houses for men and women 144.

REHABILITATE VILLAGE—Rehabilitation has begun in the vilage of Oude Tonge, Zuid, Holland, one of the worst-hit towns in the floods which devastated part of the Netherlands early in February. The Canadian Red Cross, administering the Canadian National European Flood Relief Fund, has sent supplies. Here, Miss Duynstee, of the Netherlands Red Cross, is shown with Mrs. H. V. Kosten van Ouwen Molendijk, who accepts a new pair of pyjamas for her son, 8.

Writer Paid $13,500 For Job

TORONTO (CP)—The lands and forests department paid Merrill Denison, journalist and author, $13,500 for research and writing of a history of the department, according to a departmental reply tabled in the legislature Wednesday.



The reply, to a question asked by Albert Wren (Lib-Lab.—Kenora) said the book has not yet been printed and there were not immediate plans to do so.

Lands Minister Gemmell said the manuscript had been used "in connection with, and to provide the necessary background for, an economic survey of forest resources and their development."

Royal Visit Planned

LONDON (Reuters)—The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh hope to visit the British colonies of Aden, Uganda, Malta and Gibraltar on their return trip from their Australian tour next year, it was announced today. Colonial Secretary Oliver Lyttelton said the visits would be brief and towards the end of April and early May, 1954.

There is no "overnight cure" for irregularity

But there is a simple, natural answer to the common problem of irregularity due to lack of bulk

There are men and women (perhaps you're one of them) who won't let "nature take its course". THEY TRY TO SUBSTITUTE UNNATURAL "FORCING ACTION" FOR THE NATURAL REGULARITY WHICH SENSIBLE DAILY HABITS AND SUFFICIENT BULK IN THE DIET COULD PROBABLY MAINTAIN.

Many fall into the habit of using laxatives in a way laxative makers never intended. They take "big doses" willy-nilly without even reading the directions on the label.

Naturally, such overdosing—with products intended only for overnight relief of a temporary stoppage—exerts upon the delicate digestive system an unnatural strain.

There's nothing wrong, of course, with taking laxatives occasionally. If you feel you have to take a laxative, just be sure you take it wisely—in an accurate, recommended dose.

BUT THERE IS A WAY TO AVOID TAKING DRUG-TYPE LAXATIVES AND TO PLACE YOUR DEPENDENCE ON NATURE, IF LACK OF BULK IN THE DIET IS YOUR TROUBLE.

• • •

In many natural foods—such as certain vegetables, fruits, and grains—nature grows abundant natural bulk which normally and naturally aids the rhythmic process of elimination.

In no other natural food is natural bulk so ideally found as in the outer layers of the whole wheat kernel, known generally as bran.

Bran is nature's "laxative food instead of a medicine". When properly processed and shredded, whole wheat bran yields smooth natural bulk that the digestive system can handle in a natural way.

• • •

The Kellogg Company has made whole wheat bran into a delicious breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN PERFORMS NATURALLY WHAT DRUG-TYPE LAXATIVES DO CHEMICALLY. IT HELPS CLEAR THE INTESTINES OF WASTE IN A NATURAL WAY. IT PROVIDES SOFT NATURAL BULK FOR EASY NATURAL ACTION.

There is no stomach upset, no churning, no after-effect except the feeling of satisfaction and fulfillment that comes with natural, normal elimination.

• • •

To obtain lasting relief, of course, Kellogg's All-Bran must be eaten regularly. You can have it for breakfast every morning secure in the knowledge that it isn't habit-forming.

More than one million servings of Kellogg's All-Bran are consumed each day. This popularity of itself is proof that this natural laxative cereal lives up to what we say about it.

But even better proof comes from thousands of satisfied All-Bran users. They write of their own free will to tell us what natural relief they receive from eating Kellogg's All-Bran daily and drinking plenty of water.

EAT KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN EVERY MORNING FOR BREAKFAST FOR 10 DAYS. THEN, IF YOU'RE NOT COMPLETELY SATISFIED, SEND THE EMPTY CARTON TO THE KELLOGG COMPANY, LONDON, ONTARIO—AND GET DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK.

Remember—Kellogg's All-Bran has helped millions. Why not you?

Suspensions Often Unjust

TORONTO (CP)—The legislature was told Wednesday night that athletic association suspensions are sometimes unjust and arbitrary.

Speaking in the budget debate, A. J. Child (PC—Wentworth) suggested that the provincial government set up a commission "of impartial, sports-minded persons" to handle suspensions from both professional and amateur athletic associations.

"At present a suspended athlete's only recourse is to the courts," Mr. Child said, "and is such an expensive business he usually accepts what is handed out to him. Often the suspensions are unjust."

JUST A FARCE

He said he had attended a recent National Hockey league suspension which "was a farce from beginning to end."

Mr. Child had three further suggestions: That the issuance of wrestling permits be administered entirely by the province, that second-hand car dealers should not be allowed to sell mechanically imperfect vehicles; that school-building be standardized by requiring uniform specifications for materials.

Student Camp Program To Be Discontinued

TORONTO (CP) — The student camp program which aided in the harvesting of Ontario's fruit and vegetable crops for 10 years will be discontinued, the department of agriculture announced Wednesday.

The reason given was the decline in demand for farm labor and rising costs.

The camps were originally set up in 1941 as a war measure. At the peak of activity in 1944, there were 54 camps with a student labor force of 4,265.

J. A. Carroll, deputy minister of agriculture, said: "Farmers are finding that casual help is easier to get than it was during the war. Immigrants who come to Canada are willing to take on farm work immediately."

Children Die In Fire

RIVIERE-AUX - CHIENS, Que. (CP)—Two young children were burned to death Wednesday when fire swept through the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Turcotte, in this small municipality 20 miles north of Quebec City. Dead are Marcel, 2½, and Guy, 10 months. The bodies of the two children were found in the kitchen where they apparently sought refuge under a table.

2 Land Plane Safely

EXETER (CP)—Its engine dead, an RCAF Chipmunk training aircraft from Centralia airport landed safely Wednesday on a sod field two miles southeast of here. Its occupants, FO. Tommy Thomas of Sarnia, and FO. Don McLellan of Montreal, both instructors at Centralia, were unharmed. The two officers were on a "mutual instruction" flight in the single-engine low-wing monoplane.

Have No Plans Now For Improving Roads

TORONTO (CP)—Highways Minister Doucett told the legislature Wednesday the government has no immediate plans to improve that portion of the Queen Elizabeth Way between Niagara Falls and Fort Erie.

In answer to a question for W. L. Houck (L—Niagara Falls) Mr. Doucett said traffic flow on the Niagara Falls-Fort Erie part of the road is not sufficient to warrant its conversion into a four-lane highway. It now has two lanes.

Mr. Houck argued that part of the highway is the first Canadian road seen by many United States tourists. It was important that they receive a good impression because the first impression is a lasting one.

Chemical Industry 'Active Volcano'

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—The chemical industry in Canada and the United States is an "active volcano" in which no new idea is closed to consideration, Dr. R. C. Swain of New York said Wednesday.

Dr. Swain, speaking at the opening of the new research and development laboratories of North American Cyanamid Limited here, said the chemical industry needs new ideas and trained persons that can finish those ideas. He is vice-president in charge of research of North American Cyanamid Limited.

City Hall Site

SARNIA (CP)—Victoria Park, in the heart of downtown Sarnia, will be chosen as the site for a proposed new city hall next Tuesday, if city council adopts a recommendation of the city hall building committee. Clayton Saylor, chairman of the committee, said Wednesday night he has considered every possible site in the city, and is convinced there was no location more suitable or convenient than Victoria Park.

Oil Refinery Projects Speeded By Sterling Area

LONDON (CP)—Sterling area countries of the British Commonwealth are speeding operations on new oil refinery projects involving an outlay of more than £150,000,000.

The figure is based on a survey by the petroleum information bureau, which forecasts a position of Commonwealth oil self-sufficiency when the expansion programs are completed within two or three years. Canada, the lone dollar member, has already attained that position.

Supplementing Britain's own development plans, the new refineries are expected to boost the annual output of oil to approximately 50,000,000 tons. Excluding Canada, this would take care of the Commonwealth's estimated yearly consumption of some 45,000,000 tons.

In Australia alone the oil companies have developments under way to increase annual refinery output by 6,500,000 tons by the end of 1955 at a total cost of £65,000,000. Almost half the capacity will be located at Kwinana, near Fremantle, where a new plant will process about 3,000,000 tons of crude oil a year. Work is also in progress on enlargement of several other Australian refineries.

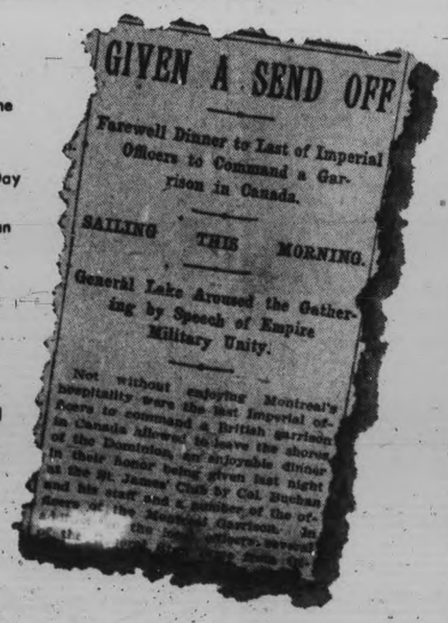
FAR-REACHING PROJECT

Another far-reaching project is located in Aden. This plant, expected to come into production before the end of 1954, will cost in the neighborhood of £40,000,000 and have an annual output capacity of about 5,000,000 tons.

India also is among the more active Commonwealth units, with definite plans for two new plants, which by 1955 will contribute around 3,250,000 tons to the common pool.

Smaller, but vital development schemes, are also contemplated by oil interests in Pakistan, South Africa and British Borneo.

Britain herself expects to be processing some 27,000,000 tons a year when developments nearing completion are in full operation, probably by the end of 1953. There is a possibility, however, production plans may be curtailed as a result of the recent floods in the Thames estuary refinery area.



TO CORONATION — Capt. Marial Laura Mosher, of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, has been selected as a member of the army contingent representing Canada at the Coronation next June. A staff officer at Halifax, Capt. Mosher enlisted first in 1941 and retired in 1946 after service overseas. She was called out again for active duty with eastern command in 1951.

LOOKING OVER PIECES from a display or original designs in leathercraft, at the Public Library Wednesday evening, are (left to right) Mrs. E. R. Frost, Mr. Stan Hayman, Mrs. Rita Larmour of Toronto, chairman of the exhibit, and Mr. Jack Hamer. Mr. Hayman and Mr. Hamer were recognized during the evening for the honor they have brought to this city in having pieces of their work accepted by the Royal Canadian Academy which each year selects the most outstanding work in all Canada in the creative art field. Mr. Hayman is an engraver-sculptor and Mr. Hamer is a painter. —Examiner Staff Photo

Publicly Recognize Two For Excelling In Arts

The recent achievements of two Peterborough artisans, Mr. Stan Hayman, engraver-sculptor, and Mr. Jack Hamer, painter, were further honored by public recognition by the Recreation Commission and the Peterborough Handcraft Guild made at an open meeting Wednesday evening in the Public Library.

Both have had their work accepted by the Royal Canadian Academy which each year selects the most outstanding of entries from all over Canada. Mr. Hayman had the honor to be accepted on his first entry. The Academy has hung Mr. Hamer's paintings for several years past.

Four of the artist's works, two watercolors and two oils, and a box of medals showing the type that are made from a matrix and the larger medals which are sculptored by Mr. Hayman, were on display as Lt.-Col. R. J. Bolton, past president of the Recreation Commission, paid tribute to the creators.

"It is not easy to gain acceptance by the Academy" Mr. Bolton pointed out. "You have to excell."

This ceremony of recognition was in conjunction with a display of leathercraft brought to the city by the Guild with sponsorship of the Commission. The leather pieces of original design, by the most recognized craftsmen to date, have been collected by the Canadian Society of Creative Leathercraft, and are travelling throughout Canada—their next stop from here is Edmonton.

The people of Peterborough interested in this craft, who filled the Library auditorium, were fortunate in that Mrs. Rita Larmour, Toronto, chairman of the society's exhibition committee, came here to explain the exhibit. Mrs. Larmour also brought colored slides of other very fine pieces of work which were exhibited at the Hobby Fair in Toronto recently and included some pictures she had taken of craftsmen at work in their homes.

Alex. Sinclair, who was chairman for the meeting, explained that the exhibit was brought here with the hope of encouraging the local leathercraft workers by stimulating new ideas. All were invited to join the Society by Mrs. Larmour but she reminded that the rule is "only original designs can be accepted for display."

Particular interest in the art of painting pictures in leather was displayed. A very heavy leather is used for this and the design is cut in. A unique piece in the exhibit was a tray molded from sole leather. Filigree work on a pocket flask was much admired and another beautifully cut piece was a jewel box mounted with a stone from the crafter's native Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Larmour explained that the Society of Creative Leathercraft was formed in May, 1950—"hoping to raise leathercraft to a real Canadian art." It appeared that progress to date has been rapid.

Mrs. E. R. Frost, president of the local Handcraft Guild, thanked Mrs. Larmour for being present. The display has been attractively laid out by a committee of Peterborough leather crafters, Mrs. R. H. Parker, Mrs. Randall Stacey Mrs. Jack Wolstenholme and Miss Ann Jamieson.

Tea and cookies were served while visitors viewed the exhibit afterward by Misses June Fraser, Lillie Taylor, Ethel Robson and Mrs. M. G. Niblett and Mrs. O. C. Kallay.

Easter Selection Sung

Mark St. Baby Band Mothers met in the church parlor Wednesday evening with President Mrs. H. Hamley presiding. After giving members a thought for the month, she conducted business. Mrs. E. Manley was in charge of the devotional period, opening with an Easter message. Scripture was read by Mrs. M. Gordon and a meditation was given by Mrs. L. Nelson. An Easter reading by Mrs. E. Aitchison was followed with prayer by Mrs. D. Starr. An Easter selection was sung by Mrs. D. Miller and Mrs. B. Morwood, with Mrs. K. Kidd accompanying at the piano. Mrs. J. Southgate continued with the study on Angola, Africa. Guest speaker was Mrs. A. Robbins, speaking on holy week. After benediction, a social hour was spent in the Sunday school hall, with Mrs. Manley's group serving refreshments.

Hostess To Group

Miss Jessie Schaffer, Elias Ave., was hostess to group six of the WMS of George St. Church on Wednesday afternoon. Theme of the meeting was "Easter" and some lovely thoughts were given in response to the roll call. Mrs. F. Horton presided and opened the meeting with hymn and prayer. Minutes were read by Mrs. A. Fitzgerald, secretary-treasurer. Devotions were taken by Mesdames Horton, Shaw, King and Miss Shaffer. Mrs. S. Staples and Mrs. W. R. Parnell gave Easter readings. Mrs. S. Ward presented a chapter of the study book on Africa. Mrs. E. Shaw, Christian stewardship secretary, gave an interesting paper on the same theme. Two quilts have been quilted by the ladies since the last meeting, and both are being sent in the bale for flood relief in Europe. The meeting was closed with hymn and benediction and dainty refreshments were then served by Miss Schaffer. Mrs. Ward expressed the appreciation to her.

Enjoy Skit

The Mr. and Mrs. Club of George Street United Church met Wednesday evening with a large number in attendance. The meeting opened with a sing-song followed by a short devotional period. After this, all the members took part in a song-naming contest. Mr. and Mrs. Russell Foster played the role of hosts in a skit, "Come As You Are Party" with members of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Elliott's group taking part. This period proved to be enjoyable to those taking part as well as those in the audience. Its close was the cue for serving a lovely lunch. Benediction was said by the Rev. Arnold Mathews.

PETER ROBINSON CHAPTER

After the flag was brought to the front by standardbearer Mrs. Harold Baker, regent of the Peter Robinson Chapter, IODE, Mrs. P. C. Sanders conducted the business of the chapter Tuesday evening in the YWCA Green Room.

It was announced that it is not possible to obtain the IODE Coronation books for members and schools as previously arranged. A donation is to be sent as a Coronation gift to Queen Elizabeth II to purchase a television set for the IODE Convalescent Hospital for TB children located in Toronto.

A Canadian soldier in Korea was adopted, to be sent letters and cigarettes by the Chapter. Mrs. H. Dinsdale and Mrs. J. Fortner were installed as new members by the regent.

Miss Eleanor Taylor delighted with two piano selections, Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" and Grainger's "Children's March."

The chapter welcomed Mrs. Horace Ashmore, a former member, who is now with her minister husband at a mission near North Battleford, Sask. Mrs. Ashmore briefly described the work and people there.

Miss Rachael Young gave a clear description of the intensive work of the Children's Aid Society, presenting their various problems in a realistic manner and enlightening the ladies on the many services rendered by the society. She complimented foster parents on their kindness and understanding and touched on the community's help in this welfare work through the board of directors, help from organizations and community chest.

Three well-chosen films shown were "Man in the Peace Tower," "Background of English Literature," and "Painters of Quebec." The projectionist was Mr. R. Ingall.

Mrs. R. Gamble and her group served hot cross buns and tea at the close.

Winter Spent In Tent Uranium City

REGINA (CP)—Mrs. R. J. Smith of Toronto, one of six white women to spend the winter of 1952-53 in northern Saskatchewan's booming mining centre of Uranium City, is heading back to the bush following a brief visit "outside."

The northern winter with its temperatures of 40 to 50 degrees below zero holds no fears for the former big city girl.

With her husband, a mining prospector, she arrived at Uranium City, north of Lake Athabaska, in October, 1952, and set up housekeeping in a tent that was to be their home throughout the winter.

Mrs. Smith says she beat the below-zero temperatures by sleeping in her clothes—in a winter costume that consisted of heavy "red flannels," a slack suit, riding trousers, a ski suit and flight boots.

"My clothes weighed more than I do," says Mrs. Smith, who is in the 90-pound class.

Mrs. Smith was fascinated by northern pioneer life after surviving the initial shock of doing without electricity, water for washing clothes and the quick transportation that city dwellers take for granted.

"There's going to be a real boom in Uranium City this summer," she says. "I certainly advise any wives who are young and without responsibilities to come with their husbands. It's a great experience."

But they had better be prepared for high costs. Mrs. Smith says food prices are very high. Potatoes, flown in from Edmonton, cost 15 to 19 cents a pound. Meat is more than $1.00 a pound.

The staple diet is vegetables but Mr. and Mrs. Smith were lucky last winter to obtain some caribou meat. Mrs. Smith described it as "delicious, it tastes much like fine beef tenderloin."

NECKLINE GETS AWAY

NEW YORK—Something pretty drastic has happened to necklines. They've been opened up and stand away from the neck —quite a way away! The shoulderline slants sharply downward. Everything it seems, must droop. And woe be the woman who gathers up the surplus and decides to take a tuck! Strictly not allowed in these spring, 1953, fashions. They stand away from the neck intentionally.

DOROTHY DIX:

Heartless Stepfather Out To Profit From Marriage

DEAR MISS DIX: My first husband was killed in service, and after five years of widowhood I remarried. That was seven years ago and my girls were small. Both are in high school now. In the beginning, my husband was a fine father, but he has changed. He doesn't like the children; they have no love or respect for him, and he gripes over every cent he spends on them. I had a bank account when I married him, but that is gone now. I truly love him, even now, but my children will always come first. He wants me to send them away, but that I'll never do.

HILDA ANN

DEVOTION TO CHILDREN

ANSWER: You say the children come first with you, but every sentence in your letter belies the fact. Several times you repeated the statement, "I love the guy and can't live without him!" No matter how much he shows his open dislike of your youngsters, you persist in your avowals of devotion. Obviously, therefore, you intend continuing to cater to him. That's been your fault from the beginning. You turned over what money you had, have handed him the small income you receive, completely ignoring the fact that it actually is for the support of the girls, and not the entertainment of their stepfather. If this be devotion to your children, heaven deliver the youngsters from your maternal solicitude. What you should do is clear enough; but it is equally clear that you have no intention of doing it.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: At 53 my husband stil lthinks he's a Romeo. We've been married 30 years, have four children and five grandchildren. His job involves a good deal of traveling, and on the last trip he came home and announced that he'd like a divorce since he had fallen in love with someone else. I refused, and he said all he would have to do is wait seven years and the divorce would be automatic. Is this true?

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Your husband's knowledge of divorce laws is about as confused as his conception of marital love and fidelity. You are quite right to refuse his plea for a divorce; he'll recover from the infatuation in due time and will return home, a wiser man.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My boy friend has asked me to go steady, but I know my mother won't approve. I'm 17 and he's 19.

PATSY

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Your mother probably believes that now, as in the past, "going steady" is tantamount to an engagement. Since two dates constitute steady dating today, practically every teenager is in the process of going steady. It's an unwise procedure, but apparently it is firmly entrenched until a new dating system develops. However, don't keep the fact a secret from Mom under any circumstances. Talk the matter over with her. A frank presentation of both sides of the problem will clear matters for both of you.

✧ ✧ ✧

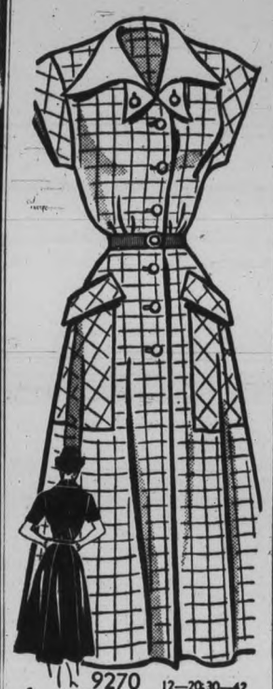
DEAR MISS DIX: I am friends with two young men, Ned and Charles, who share an apartment. I am especially fond of Ned, but Charles is the one who likes me particularly, with the result that he does everything he can to turn Ned against me. They are always together, and Charles seems to be the dominant personality of the two. Should I speak to either one about the situation?

WORRIED

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: I think you are wasting time and attention on both of the boys. Even if you could convince Ned that Charles is telling untruths about you (a fact, by the way that you can't possibly be sure of), you would probably never completely wean him away from Charles' domination. Any triangle involving a deep friendship, such as theirs, produces complications that are better avoided. Find a boy who is not so easily influenced.

✧ ✧ ✧



DEAR MISS DIX: I am a high-school sophomore, with a speech defect. As a consequence, I don't have much social life, and I think even my family is ashamed of me. The trouble is stammering.

S. S.

ANSWER: It's a shame that you have gone so long without treatment or correction of your trouble. Stammering can be corrected and often completely overcome, with the proper teaching. Consult a speech clinic in your vicinity, and if you can't find one in your telephone book, contact, either personally or by mail, the nearest eye, ear and throat hospital.

Of Interest to Women

LITTLE ROLLS of kelly green straw dot this side-swept hat in white crystal straw. Loops of white and green ribbon fall from the manipulated crown of this Canadian model.

THE EXPERTS SAY:

Never Buy Shoes In Morn' If Feet Swell

By JOAN BARBERIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Fashion, many experts feel, starts at the feet and for the woman who doesn't want to limp along in the Easter parade they issue a few tips.

"If your feet have a tendency to swell, never buy shoes in the morning" may sound like an old wives' tale, but authorities in the shoe business say this is true. An accurate fit early in the day may be too tight by afternoon.

Make sure that the sales clerk measures each foot. They probably are not the same size and you should be fitted for the larger one.

Beware the salesman who tells you:

"They'll be fine when you've broken them in." Shoes that have to be "broken in" are frequently shoes that do not fit.

LEAVE SOME ROOM

Fit should be snug, but not cramped. Three-quarters of an inch between the toes and tip of the shoe is ideal.

A firm counter at the heel that hugs the foot is recommended, especially if you're buying high heels. Constant slipping of the foot at the heel may give rise to bumps and calluses.

Some shoe materials do not provide proper ventilation and may cause excessive perspiration. This should be watched particularly in the summer and shoe salesmen say that the same pair of shoes should not be worn two days in succession.

Varying the heel heights is recommended, too. High heels today, Cuban tomorrow, and so on. This is said to be better for the muscles at the back of the leg.

FALL PREVIEW

But styles for Easter are "old hat" to manufacturers now. They are already thinking about Christmas.

Shoes scheduled for next fall and winter were shown recently in New York. They run the gamut of color from smoked pearl to basque red and styles range from an exotic paper-thin snake skin gilded in 24 kt. gold to the well-loved leather pump.

Footlights at this New York show were glove-leather casuals which can be washed with soap and water and look like new. Aniline-dyed leather shoes come in a whole range of beige-to-brown and also greens.

This type of finish allows the delicate natural shadings of the leather to show through the translucent dye, making every pair of shoes just a little different from the next.

Also making a hit were silky suede leathers in delicate pastel shades.

But no matter how pretty the fit's the thing, say the experts.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Groceries To Buy When Family Shopping

You and I are doing our grocery shopping together. As we wait in the line of buggies and people for the cashier to check our purchases we have an ideal opportunity to observe what the rest of the crowd bought.

I promise not to exaggerate.

In one buggy were six loaves of white bread stacked on the undercarriage. In the buggy proper were four packages of cookies; one long box containing ten or twelve individual boxes of prepared cereals; a 10-lb. bag of white sugar; two cake mixes; two 1-lb. jars jam; six boxes of ice cream mix and three packages jelly dessert (the desserts for the week no doubt); one box of pancake flour; some canned peas and corn; a large box of soap chips (to give them credit they were going to be cleand even if they were malnourished); and a package of lollipops. There were packages of meat too but I could not guess their contents.

Only a first-grade heel would stoop to such snooping but I'm so worried over the high-carbohydrate-refined-cereal diet that the majority of cooks seem to be dishing up to their families that I almost wish I could step up on a soap-box like they do in Hyde Park in London and shout, "Don't you know you are what you eat?" Who wants to be a pasty-faced slightly animated mass of white flour hopped up with white sugar?

Not I, —and I hope not you.

To quickly swing you back to a constructive program I am going to quote Dr. Weston A. Price, a Canadian-born Cleveland dentist who is famous in and out of his profession for his inevstigations of the diet in respect to tooth health.

After spending years and thousands of his own dollars he has come to this simple conclusion: the specifications for an adequate diet for abundant health the daily ration of the average individual should include: one tomato, one orange or other citrus fruit, with a liberal helping of lettuce, celery, raw carrot or other raw vegetables such as cabbage. In addition he should have the tops and roots of vegetables which may be cooked; green peas and beans, and from half a pint to a quart of milk, depending on the other foods used. Plus meat and eggs and cheese, those are the protective foods. Eat those, then if you have room, eat what else you like.

I've let myself in for it so I'm obliged to tell you what I think should have been in that all-wrong basket of groceries (and strangely enough what was in mine).

(I'm a great one to talk today of all days, for as I write this I'm laid low with a sinus infection and a 96-hour shot of penicillin in my hip!)

We'll stop at the fruit and vegetable counter first and pick up the freshest lettuce, celery, tomatoes, carrots, cabbage, bananas, oranges, grapefruits and apples we can lay our hands on. Then we'll add three or four more vegetables that our families enjoy such as spinach, broccoli, cauliflower, beets, beans, and then push on to the cheese and butter and meat counters and have a field day trying to decide how to get maximum nourishment and flavor from a minimum amount of our precious money to be spent on these necessary but high-priced items.

Then, instead of imitating our uninformed and mislead grocery buyer, we buy dark brown sugar instead of white, honey instead of jam, wheat germ or whole grain cereals to cook instead of those that are ready-to-serve, peanuts instead of candy, a bag of fresh wheat germ too (and 11 cents could never be more profitably spent).

I could go on for columns, but I would like you to notice that none of my switches costs any more, but the dividends in good health are incalculable.

Now down off the soap-box to give you

GOLDEN FROSTING
(Promised yesterday)

Heat togethed in top of double boiler ½ cup cream and 6 tablespoons butter. Caramelize by stirring over heat until molten gold 2 tablespoons sugar. Very carefully add the scalded cream and butter. It will lump and sputter, but keep on stirring until smooth. Remove from heat and gradually stir in 3 cups sifted icing sugar. Beat until smooth and creamy and of spreading consistency.

I hope you have lots of fresh eggs and hot cross buns for Good Friday's breakfast.

IF BABY IS CROSS FIND OUT WHY

HEALTHY BABIES are not cross. Your baby should not be cross. If he is, then something in his little system may be "out of order." Probably Baby's Own Tablets can promptly "put it right." One Quebec Mother had this experience. She writes: "My little girl was irritable, feverish and sometimes sick at her stomach — what a relief it was, after giving her Baby's Own Tablets, to see how much better she was." Sweet-tasting — no "sleepy" stuff — no dulling effect. Promptly effective in simple fever, constipation, restlessness and fretfulness resulting from irregularity at teething time, and other minor ills. Never be without a full box of Baby's Own Tablets. Sickness so often strikes in the night. Get a package today at your druggist. Money back if you are not satisfied.

Marmora C.W.L. Prepares For Meeting

MARMORA (ENS).—The Catholic Women's League met in Sacred Heart Parish Hall with a good attendance.

The Rev. J. A. O'Neill, spiritual director, opened the meeting with prayer. A minute's silence was observed in memory of the late Mrs. Ernest Shannon who had been pianist of the league for many years. The president, Mrs. W. A. Shannon, paid fitting tribute to her.

Mention was also made by the president of the success of the sale of candy at the St. Patrick's Day entertainment and of the recent regional gathering in Marmora.

The minutes were read by the newly-appointed secretary, Mrs. Edward Warren. The social welfare convener, Mrs. J. H. English, reported that two baskets and some flowers had been sent to sick members. The president requested conveners to have their reports ready for the next meeting, the annual one.

Mrs. A. M. Jones was named chairman of the nominating committee. Other members are Mrs. Charles Crawford and Mrs. Joseph O'Neill.

Mrs. R. J. Moloney and Mrs. L. P. Hughes reported six calls having been made to the sick and shut-ins during March. Mrs. H. Brady and Mrs. J. O'Neill consented to be the sick committee for the ensuing month.

The Rev. J. A. O'Neill gave a brief address on the general welfare of the league and led in the act of consecration.

Invite France, U.S. To Berlin Air Talks

BERLIN (AP) — The Soviets have invited the Americans and the French to join them with the British for talks on air safety over Germany. An American spokesman said U. S. high commissioner James B. Conant received the invitation at Bonn Wednesday.

The invitation from Gen. Vassily Chuikov, chief of the Soviet control commission in Germany came after British officials met twice with Russian Air Force experts to discuss ways of avoiding such air incidents over Germany as the destruction of an RAF bomber by a Soviet jet fighter March 12 with the loss of seven lives.

Found Drinking While On List

Elmer E. Tripp, 42, 660 Romaine St., was sentenced to three months definite and one month indefinite today when he was convicted of a third offence of drinking liquor while interdicted.

Evidence of PCs Eldon McDonald and Wilfred Perry was that they were called to Tripp's home by his wife on Tuesday afternoon and found the accused in the attic in a drunken condition.

Tripp denied he had been drinking but said he had taken a radio to the attic to repair it. He said he did not know there was any liquor in the house until he discovered his wife had been drinking.

Drop 2 Theft Charges Against Immigrant

KITCHENER (CP) — Two theft charges against Tony Jankauskas of Hamilton were dismissed in court here today after Magistrate J. R. H. Kirkpatrick gave him a stern lecture on the values of Canadian citizenship.

A recent immigrant to Canada, Jankauskas was charged with the theft of two cheques from a mail box at nearby Galt last May. Liudas Laurasaitis of London is being held on charges of falsely endorsing the cheques.

The magistrate told Jankauskas he did not like his statements in the witness box but he was concerned that the youth should know that Canada leans over backwards so as not to convict an innocent man.

MOSCOW (AP) — An authoritative diplomatic source said today the British admiralty has invited the Soviet Union to participate in the Coronation naval review and that the Russians have accepted.

The informant said the Soviet in replying advised they would send a ship to the naval review but did not specify what type.

Western diplomats interpreted this gesture as a contribution to the general atmosphere of conciliation now prevailing.

New Austrian Cabinet Sworn In In Vienna

VIENNA (AP)—President Theodor Koerner swore in a new Austrian cabinet today headed by industralist Julius Raab—a bitter anti-Communist — as chancellor. The action ended the occupied country's five-week government crisis.

It was Austria's second government since 1945 and, like its predecessor, a coalition of the Conservative People's party and the left-of-centre Socialists. Raab is a Conservative.

The two parties ran practically neck and neck, far ahead of all hers, in the Feb. 22 general elections but neither won a majority.

6—In Memoriam

BROWN— In loving memory of a dear dad who passed away one year ago today.
We lost a dad with a heart of gold, told,
Who was more to us than wealth untold,
Without farewell he fell asleep,
With only memories for us to keep.
We have lost, but God has gained
One of the best dads the world contained.
—Lovingly remembered by daughter May and son-in-law Phil and granddaughters Muriel and Betty.

GRAHAM — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Vernon Graham, who passed away three years ago, April 3, 1950.
He is gone, but not forgotten,
And, as dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of him are always near.
Days of sadness still come o'er us
Friends may think the wound is healed
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.
—Ever remembered by his loving wife Minnie and family.

LA FAVE—In loving memory of my dear wife, June La Fave, who passed away April 2, 1948.
Her life is a beautiful memory,
Her death is our silent grief,
She sleeps in God's beautiful garden,
In the sunshine of perfect peace.
So we leave her in God's keeping,
The rough road safely o'er
And our dear one we loved so well,
Has only gone before.
—Deeply missed by her husband Maurice La Fave.

LA FAVE—In loving memory of June Oakley La Fave, who passed away five years ago today.
More and more each day we miss her,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
Lies within our heart concealed.
—Always remembered by Bruce and Myrtle.

LA FAVE—In loving memory of June Oakley (La Fave), who died April 2, 1948.
You are not forgotten dear June,
Nor ever will you be,
As long as life's memory lasts,
We will remember thee.
—Sadly missed by Mum and Dad La Fave and Lorraine.

LA FAVE, June Lillian Oakley, who died April 2nd, 1948.
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought the end was near,
It is only those who have lost can tell,
The sorrow of parting without farewell.
—Deeply and sadly missed by her father.

LA FAVE — In loving memory of a dear daughter, June, who passed away, April 2nd, 1948, in her 20th year.
Fondly loved and deeply mourned,
Heart of my heart, I miss you so,
Often, my darling, my tears will flow,
Dimming your picture before my eyes,
But never the one in my heart that lies.
—Very sadly missed by her mother and family.

MARTIN—In loving memory of our dear mother, Sophia C. Martin, who passed away April 2, 1952.
One year has passed and gone
Since one we loved so well,
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers we place upon her grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for her who sleeps beneath,
Shall never fade away.
—Sadly missed by daughter Laura, son-in-law Carson and children.

MARTIN—In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. Sophia Caroline Martin, who passed away April 2, 1952.
There is never a day that passes,
But my thoughts reach out for you,
Never a joy that comes my way,
But we wish you could share it too.
We miss your love, your cheery ways,
Please God just let her know
That we down here do not forget,
We love and miss her so.
So dear God will you take a message,
To my darling one in heaven above?
Tell her how much we miss her,
And give her all our love.
—Deeply missed and always remembered by her son Clifford Skilcher, daughter-in-law Eva, grandchildren Francis, Dale and Dianne.

Casualty Total 131,928

WASHINGTON (AP)—Announced U.S. battle casualties in Korea reached 131,928 Wednesday, an increase of 404 since last week. This was a slightly larger increase than the last few weeks and apparently represented initial reports of the casualties in the renewed heavy fighting around Old Baldy and Bunker hills.

Aunt Advised Syntona

"I just couldn't seem to get anything to help me until my aunt advised me to try Syntona, and I want to say that since I've been using this medicine my digestion has so improved that I eat all my meals without distress afterwards and my nerves are quieted down allowing me to get my proper sleep. First Class To Graduate For Atomic Sub

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP)—The school for atomic submarines is getting ready to graduate its first class.

The score or so officers and men in the class will be the "engineering force" for the atomic-powered submarine Nautilus.

When, probably some time next year, the skipper of Nautilus speaks the old order "one-third ahead," these men will be the first in the world to turn on atomic energy for motive power.

Behind them will be a year and a half of training unlike that any sailors ever sweated through.

SPECIAL COURSE

Back at Bettis Field near Pittsburgh, Pa., in the laboratory built by the atomic energy commission and operated by the Westinghouse Electric Corporation, they began an academic course.

At first it was quite commonplace. Then it began to grow tougher, more intricate: There was the theory of nuclear fission. Then they studied the blueprints and "mock-up" models of the atomic engine itself.

Eventually they came to the "submarine thermal reactor" site at the national reactor testing station about 40 miles from here.

In Washington Tuesday the AEC made the first official announcement of what these men were up to: That an atomic power plant to propel a submarine had been placed in operation—on the dry land of its Idaho testing station.

House Begins Drive For Prorogation

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons' annual three-sittings-a-day drive for prorogation will start April 8, Prime Minister St. Laurent indicated Wednesday.

He placed on the order paper the traditional notice that the House will be asked to sit three times a day instead of twice starting then.

The House now sits from 2.30 p.m. to 6 and from 8 to 10. To this would be added an 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. sitting.

Such a move signals the drive to speed up legislation so the House may close. The aim this year is to close in May so members who wish to can attend the Coronation in June.

McCracken Listed In 12 Top Preachers

NEW YORK (CP)—Life magazine today lists a former McMaster University professor, Dr. Robert James McCracken, among the 12 great preachers of the United States.

The magazine, in its current issue, says the 12 and others like them have been responsible in good part for the recent great religious upsurge in the U.S., bringing church membership up from 49 to 60 per cent of the population in the last 10 years.

Dr. McCracken, 49, was born at Motherwell, Scotland. He was assistant professor of Christian theology and philosophy of religion at McMaster in Hamilton, Ont., during 1938-44.

HUMANI NIHIL A ME ALIENUM PUTO

VOL. CVI. No. 79 | TOMORROW'S WEATHER Cloudy, Cooler | SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1953 | ★★ | PRICE TEN CENTS

Reproduced from the engraving by Albrecht Durer (1471-1528)

IN THE END OF THE SABBATH, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre. And behold there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from Heaven and came and rolled back the stone from the door and sat upon it.

And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men. And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here: for He is risen, as He said. Come see the place where the Lord lay. —St.Mark 28: 1-2, 4-6.

Living Costs Take Drop, Biggest In 10 Months

Cigarette, Food Prices Down

New Decrease Moves Costs Close To Level Of June, '51

OTTAWA — (CP) — Living costs took their biggest drop in 10 months during February as lower food and cigarette prices reduced the new consumer price index by seven-tenths of a point to 114.8 from 115.5, the bureau of statistics reported today.

The drop, fourth in a row, was the biggest since the decline of nine-tenths of a point in April, 1952. It pushed living costs back to about where they were in June, 1951, when the prices yardstick stood at 114.6.

The index is based on 1949 prices equalling 100.

The peak in the consumer price index was 118.2 in December, 1951. This yardstick is the bureau's official gauge of consumer price changes.

The old cost-of-living index which had jumped two months in a row while the new index declined, finally fell in line, dropping by the same amount—seven-tenths of a point to 184.2 from 184.9. The old prices yardstick is based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100. Its peak was 191.5, also in December, 1951.

Among the food items which declined during February were tea, oranges, potatoes and all cuts of beef and fresh pork. These overbalanced increases for butter, eggs, tomatoes, ham, bacon and chicken.

The food sub-group dropped 1.1 points, the biggest since the 1.7-point decline in April 1952, reducing it to 111.6 from 112.7.

Other sub-groups showed little or no change with the exception of the miscellaneous column entitled "other commodities and services." A decrease of almost 15 per cent in the price of cigarettes helped push this column down 1.5 points to 115.2 from the peak of 116.7.

The shelter column, which had been edging higher for three consecutive months remained unchanged during February at the peak of 122.5 as a tiny decline of one-tenth of one per cent in the cost of home ownership outweighed an equally small increase in rents.

The clothing column increased by one-tenth of a point to 109.6 from 109.7. This compared with the peak of 115.2 in November, 1951.

Tiny, scattered increases also pushed the household operations column up one-tenth of a point to a record 116.7 from 116.6.

Vatican Bells Ring Joyfully As Lent Ends Symbolic Vigil Of Eastertide Commences

VATICAN CITY—(AP)—The bells of St. Peter's Basilica rang joyfully today as Lent ended and the Easter vigil began.

Easter's supreme denouement — the Resurrection of Christ from the dead—will be celebrated tomorrow in Christian churches through the world.

The first glad note was struck today by St. Peter's giant "campanone" or master bell. It bonged as a papal mass came to an end at the Basilica's Altar of the Chair and the choir lifted its voice in the Gloria-glory to God.

Then, one by one, the other bells of St. Peter's and those of Rome's other nearly 500 churches joined in the glad medley.

At the same time, priests, robed in lacy cassocks and accompanied by altar boys who carried pots of holy water, began their annual pilgrimage through the streets of Rome to bless homes and business establishments.

The pontifical mass, celebrated by Dutch-born Msgr. John Smits, titular bishop of Parlo—one of the canons of St. Peter's—followed other ancient and colorful rites. They included the blessing of fire in the atrium of the Basilica and blessing of the holy water founts.

Thousands of pilgrims from many countries thronged the Basilica.

At the conclusion of the blessing of the founts, 12 canons of the Basilica passed through the throng, sprinkling it with the blessed water.

This recalled ancient Holy Saturday rites when it was the custom to administer baptism.

Thousands of pilgrims also took part in the Way of the Cross last night—the climax of Rome's Good Friday commemoration. They shuffled along the route of 14 crosses, each representing a point along Christ's road to Calvary. The crosses were set up on the Palatine Hill.

Dulles Says Russia Remains Danger To World

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Official tagging of Russia as still a grave danger to the free world clearly indicated today the Eisenhower administration, while welcoming Communist peace talk, intends to push ahead with the Western defence buildup. State Secretary John Foster Dulles told a press conference Friday that nothing so far and nothing likely in the Red peace offensive has changed the basic situation of the Soviet's aggressive threat.

He pictured Kremlin policy as essentially unaltered and "deeply hostile". He said Russian peace overtures actually are responses, at least in part, to the "strong policies" of administration in both Asia and Europe.

The secretary called for continued defensive strength and progress toward developing the proposed European Defence Community, under which West Germany would be re-armed.

Dulles said his comments—subsequently issued as a formal statement by the state department—expressed "the philosophy of the administration."

REDUCE FOREIGN AID

In response to queries at his press conference, Dulles said he thought the cost of U.S. foreign aid for the fiscal year beginning July 1 could be appreciably reduced from the $7,600,000,000 proposed by former president Truman.

This can be done without impairing American objectives, Dulles said, by increasing efficiency, eliminating unnecessary spending and buying more goods abroad. He gave no details.

In Paris, French Finance Minister Maurice Bourges-Maunory said a program for selling more French defence goods to the U. S. was worked out at the Franco-American talks in Washington last month. He also gave no details.

Dulles' expressions about Kremlin peace manoeuvres seemed to take a different approach than those voiced 24 hours earlier by President Eisenhower. At his press conference Thursday, Eisenhower said Soviet peace talk should be taken at face value until proved unworthy of consideration.

The essence of what Dulles said was that the American people and their allies should not be blinded "to the persistence of the danger."

Even so, he said, there are "possibilities of useful accommodation" between the two great power blocs. He cited as examples the proposed exchange of sick and wounded prisoners of war in Korea and, afterward, possible agreement on an armistice.

Ex-King Carol Dies In Lisbon Of Heart Attack

By LUIS LUPI

LISBON, Portugal (AP)—Former King Carol II, who abandoned the throne of Romania for romance and a wandering life in exile, died early today in nearby Estoril, an exclusive colony of displaced royalty.

His death, at 59, apparently was due to a heart failure.

Alone at his side was his third wife, the former Madame Elena (Magda) Lupescu—the red-haired beauty who was his companion for 23 years before becoming his wife.

A doctor, called from his home next door, and Carol's secretary arrived at his deathbed too late, it was reported.

The former ruler of now Communist-controlled Romania had complained recently of heart trouble. He made his last public appearance this week at memorial services in St. George Church here for Britain's Queen Mary.

The long romance between the handsome playboy king and Madame Lupescu, daughter of an army officer, began in the mid-1920s, when he still was crown prince. Her court influence later won her the title of the uncrowned queen of Romania. Twice she fol-

Russia Frees Nine Doctors Charged In Plot To Kill Top Red Leaders

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW—(AP)—Prime Minister Georgi Malenkov's new government today freed 15 doctors charged last January with killing or plotting to kill high state leaders. It declared they had been falsely accused. Official announcements also disclosed: (1) Testimony from the doctors allegedly confirming the accusations had been obtained by "strictly forbidden" means. (2) Persons accused of "incorrect conduct of the investigation" have been arrested and brought to justice.

3. A woman doctor has lost the Order of Lenin she received Jan. 20 for exposing nine of the arrested medical men.

The release of the doctors was announced in a communique from the new internal affairs ministry, headed by L. P. Beria, first deputy premier in the new Soviet government.

Declaring "verification has shown that the accusations . . . are false and the documentary sources on which the workers of investigation based themselves are without foundation," the communique said the men have been "completely rehabilitated" and freed from custody.

It blamed workers of the former ministry of state security for using "impermissable means of investigation which are strictly forbidden under Soviet law." It also charged that this ministry arrested the doctors "incorrectly without any lawful cases whatsoever."

Beria was long head of the ministry of state security before it was combined into the interior affairs department when Malenkov became prime minister.

(The announcement gave no indication of how many persons had been arrested for "incorrect conduct" in connection with the investigation. They presumably included some members of the old state security ministry staff.)

LIST SIX ACCUSED

Today's communique listed six persons among the accused who had not previously been known to be involved. In its announcement of the arrests Jan. 13, the government reported charges against only nine doctors, some of them Jews.

At that time, it accused them of being in the service of British and American intelligence through a Zionist organization identified as "Joint." (This was an apparent reference to the Joint Distribution Committee, a Jewish relief body which has aided millions of European refugees.)

UN, Reds Meet On PoW Plan, Hope For Truce

MUNSAN, Korea (AP).—Allied and Communist liaison officers are expected to meet late today or Sunday in Panmunjom to finish plans for a Monday meeting which could lead to a truce in Korea. A time must be set for the session to discuss plans for exchanging sick and wounded prisoners of war. And Gen. Mark Clark's formal acceptance must be delivered to the Communists. Rear-Admiral John C. Daniel, UN truce delegate who will head the Allied delegation Monday, announced selection of four officers as members of the liaison group.

Even before plans for Monday's session were complete, the UN command was virtually ready to care for sick and wounded prisoners the Reds may free.

Most officers here expressed belief that disabled prisoners will be exchanged—and soon.

Lt.-Col. Charles E. Hollingsworth, commander of a 60-bed hospital set up near this advance base, said the rate at which Allied prisoners are processed would depend only on the rate they were received from the Communists.

Hurls Babies To Death

NEW YORK (CP)—A 27-year-old mother of five hurled two of her small children to their deaths from a fourth-floor apartment window Friday. Neighbors restrained her from throwing a third from the window. Police said the mother, Mrs. Anna Maier, wife of a machinist, could give no reason for her act. They quoted her as saying "I love children; I want to have 20 of them." Two charges of homicide were filed against her.

Jail "Grandma" For 10 Years

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"Grandma" was sentenced Friday to 10 years in prison.

She is Mrs. Ethel Arata, 53, a former heiress sought for months for California bank robberies.

Mrs. Arata pleaded guilty to one count of bank robbery and one count of attempted bank robbery. She was granted probation on the second count.

Judge Ernest A. Tolin warned her if she violates her probation, which starts as soon as she finishes her 10-year term, he will impose the maximum sentence of another 20 years.

Mrs. Arata is no grandmother. She was dubbed "grandma" by police before she was caught. She is the daughter of the late Robert Catts, New York multimillionaire who lost his fortune in the crash of 1929.

Sub Sinks With 92 Aboard

By FRED J. ZUSY

ISTANBUL, Turkey — (AP)—The Turkish submarine Dumlupinar, formerly the U.S. Bumper, sank in the Dardanelles after a collision early today and all aboard are presumed lost. The Turkish armed forces press bureau said all contact with the stricken vessel had been lost. She carried 96 men on her fatal plunge but four on deck were plucked to safety. The Dumlupinar sank in the early morning darkness after a collision with a Swedish merchant ship. The Turkish Navy's chief of staff—Col. Asim Shinik—said earlier that appeals from the submarine indicated 22 men were alive, trapped in the hull, about 228 feet down. He said then there was not much hope for them, because deep water and swift currents hampered rescue operations.

He said their messages established that 22 of the 96 men who had been aboard are still alive in the unflooded water-tight rear compartments.

BOW SMASHED

The fore part of the vessel was smashed, Shinik said, and all there were dead.

He said five men were thrown off the conning tower by the collision as the submarine proceeded on the surface through misty weather and poor visibility.

Of these five, one died, Shinik said, and the other four were rescued although injured. They were taken to hospital.

Shinik said divers were sent down this morning and reported it would be impossible to refloat the damaged sub, and that workers now are attempting to get the trapped sailors out some other way—possibly through the regular or emergency escape hatches.

The submarine, a 1,526-ton craft transferred to the Turkish Navy in 1944 under a U.S. military aid agreement, collided with the Swedish ship Naboland, 4,000 tons, about three miles north of Canakkale, a port near the southern end of Dardanelles strait, and went down in 132 feet of water.

Test Commercial Atom Power In Year: Howe

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada should be experimenting with commercial atomic power within the next year, Defence Production Minister Howe said Friday.

In an interview, Mr. Howe disclosed that both the ruptured atomic pile NRX at Chalk River and the new pile, NRU, which is under construction, will be used experimentally for the production of atomic power by a fourth pile, yet to go on the drawing boards.

NRX, which sprang a "leak" last Dec. 11, is being rebuilt with a view to experiments in power generation, Mr. Howe said.

"The new pile NRU under way at Chalk River also is being built for experimental use, but we won't be into commercial atomic power until we have our fourth pile."

The first pile at Chalk River was known as "Zeep."

COMMENTS ON SUB

Mr. Howe made the comments in connection with disclosures by the United States atomic energy commission that the U.S. has put the world's first atomic power plant into actual operation. That plant is a working model of a unit

2 City Families Homeless As Home Gutted

Fire left nine homeless after noon today as flames swept and gutted a Monaghan Road frame house, destroying furniture and possessions of two families. The house is at Monaghan Road and Rose Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyprien Majeste and their three children, aged four, three and one, were downstairs residents of the two-storey building while a second family, identified by neighbors only as Mr. and Mrs. Post, were away at the time of the fire with their two children.

Although no cause is known at present for the fire, it is believed to have started on the first floor near an oil heater.

Majeste, a city employee and a resident of Canada for only two years, explained in broken English how he returned from work at noon at the same time as fire trucks arrived at the scene of the blaze.

Furniture was piled on the lawn surrounding the house, where the frantic householder had left it

French Civilians Released By Reds

PARIS (AP)—Fourteen French civilians have been released after nearly three years of captivity in North Korea and are heading home by way of Moscow, the French foreign office announced Friday.

The release was unofficially interpreted here as a sign that the Soviet Union intends to convert into hard action at least some of its words of peace with the West and possibly as portending a more general agreement on prisoners of war in Korea.

The Frenchmen, among them the charge d'affaires in Seoul and a correspondent of Agence France-Presse, were set free just a week after Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov promised to intervene with the North Koreans on their behalf.

Word that the civilians have at last regained their freedom was received by the foreign office in a brief message from its ambassador in Moscow, Louis Joxe. He had been given the news by the Soviet foreign ministry.

Israel Asks Russia To Restore Relations

TEL AVIV (Reuters)—Israel today invited Russia to restore diplomatic relations with her as a result of Moscow's exoneration of Jewish doctors.

Russia ... relations with Israel only three weeks after the announcement of the arrest of nine Soviet doctors, five of them Jewish, at the start of a Soviet campaign against "Zionist imperialists." Immediate cause of the rupture was a bomb explosion at the Soviet legation here.

Prime Minister David Ben Gurion formally expressed the hope today that Russia would complete the redress of justice by ending "the anti-Jewish campaign in the Soviet Union."

U.S. Jets Destroy MiG, Damage 3

Seoul (AP)—U. S. Sabre jets destroyed one Communist MiG and damaged three others today, while on the Korean ground front Allied infantry beat back two Chinese attacks.

Sabre pilots found MiG targets in sweeps over North Korea for the first time in five days.

The 5th air force, in announcing Saturday's bag, did not mention Sabre losses. But in a weekly aerial summary the air force said no Allied planes were shot down in air combat during the week ending Friday night.

Six MiGs were shot down, one probably was destroyed and eight were damaged during the week, the summary said. Two Allied planes were listed as lost to ground fire and five to "other causes," presumably mechanical trouble.

Settlement Of Major U.S. Strikes Returns 85,000 Workers To Steel, Rubber Plants

NEW YORK (AP) — The two major strikes in the United States, which had made idle some 85,000 workers in steel and rubber plants, were settled today.

Agreements to end the strikes were reached within two hours of each other early this morning.

The first settlement was announced in the two-day strike by some 35,000 CIO United Rubber Workers against the U.S. Rubber Company in 19 plants across the country.

Union and company officials in New York signed a new two-year work contract. A company spokesman said work at all plants would resume Monday or "as soon as production can be scheduled."

Two hours later, an agreement was reached in Pittsburgh ending a five-day strike of 1,500 Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen against the Union Railroad. The walkout on the connecting line had virtually halted all operations of U.S. Steel Corp. in the Pittsburgh district and had made idle some 50,000 workers.

The Union Railroad, wholly owned subsidiary of U.S. Steel, was expected to resume operations immediately. It was expected that U.S. Steel plants would be back to full production within 48 to 72 hours.

Wages were not the issue in either of the strikes.

In New York, a joint announcement by union and U.S. Rubber Company officials said the new agreement would give employees two weeks vacation after three years instead of five years; a streamlined grievance procedure and a company-financed insurance program. It also included setting up of new piecework rates and standards and a provision for negotiating intra-plant wage inequities in the various plants.

The BRT strike started Monday after the union protested a 10-day suspension given two conductors as a disciplinary measure for leading what the company termed a slowdown.

Under terms of the agreement reached early today, the BRT said the two conductors "were at fault" . . . and the railroad was justified in suspending them.

Flood Lights Guard On B.C. Douks

Protect B.C. Trains From Bombs Tossed By Terrorists

NELSON, B.C.—(CP)—Flood lights have been added to British Columbia's long-run Doukhobor drama to help protect train passengers and crews from track-bombing terrorists.

Installation of the lights at strategic bridges is the latest measure aimed at preventing Sons of Freedom Doukhobor terrorists from striking with fire and explosives at industrial plants, train tracks, schools and private dwellings.

In the past guards have even been needed at schools to guarantee the buildings would be standing in the morning. The Doukhobor radicals have pronounced views on learning—they're against formal education.

The floodlighting of five bridges, plus sunset-to-sunrise track patrols, follows the dynamiting of the Canadian Pacific Railway Kettle Valley line at two places earlier in the week. The line runs through the Okanagan and Kootenay region of British Columbia's southern interior.

The raids were followed, in turn, by protests from railway workers that the provincial government and the CPR weren't giving proper attention to the risks they run in taking the trains through the Doukhobor country.

In hiring additional guards, the CPR announced Thursday night that normal schedules were being restored "at once." No trains had run after dark since the tracks were dynamited Tuesday night near the communities of Grand Forks and Tarrys.

THIRD BLAST

RCMP said the dynamitings—a mining company railway was damaged in a third blast—were an apparent renewal on a small scale of Sons of Freedom terrorism which swept the Doukhobor communities in 1950.

The track bombings were the first in many months, but a number of power poles were damaged by explosives recently, resulting in RCMP reinforcements being brought into the Kootenays.

Since 1924, there have been more than 400 instances of arson or dynamiting in B. C. and hundreds of Doukhobor fanatics have been arrested for parading in the nude.

Authorities say most of these raids were carried out by the against-government, against - education Sons of Freedom cult. There are some 2,000 "Sons" in the province.

A statement asking authorities and the general public "not to stigmatize the name of our group" by linking it with recent acts of violence was issued Friday by spokesmen for the Christian Community and Brotherhood of Reformed Doukhobors, commonly known as the Reformed Sons of Freedom.

The statement, signed by chairman John Perepelkin and secretary N. K. Nevakshonoff, said:

"We oppose all sorts of violent acts and believe that our members have not taken any part in the recent work of provocation either directly or indirectly."

NINE PEOEPLE WERE LEFT HOMELESS today when fire gutted a house at Monaghan Road and Rose Ave. The frame home, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Cyprien Majeste and Mr. and Mrs. Post, was quickly gutted as a strong south-westerly wind whipped the flames. Some furniture was saved and left (top) outside on the front lawn. In Canada only two years, Mr. Majeste (lower, right back), his wife, Frances, and children, Peter, Evelyn and Roger, came from France two years ago. Plumbers Find Gold In Gravel Deposit

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — A group of local plumbers has sent a sample of gravel they found while excavating in the west end of the city to an assayer to find out if tiny specks which glittered are gold.

Lorne Yendt, his brother Clare and two helpers, found the gravel six feet below the ground. They panned the gravel and obtained some tiny flakes which have a gold sheen. They were given a nitric acid test by a local jeweller who said that as far as his test could determine it was true gold.

The Yendts have staked out some of the ground surrounding their find.

With their mother, who is expecting a fourth child, the three tots were taken from the house across the street to the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Jones.

Firemen meanwhile extinguished the blaze, but water and flames had left the inside ravaged.

Farmer Discovers Wife, 42, 2 Daughters Dead At Home

AILSA CRAIG—(CP)—A 45-year-old farmer returned home Friday night after a day's work in the bush to find his wife and two daughters dead. When Alvin Lewis entered the lonely unpainted frame farmhouse about three miles northwest of this Western Ontario village he discovered his 42-year-old wife's body on a couch in the living room and on a divan nearby the body of Mildred Jane, 11. On a bed in an adjoining room was the body of Shirley May, 14.

Police and doctors were at a loss to explain the deaths. They said there were no marks of violence on the fully-dressed bodies; the possibility of asphyxiation by coal gas was ruled out and there was no sign that the three had eaten their evening meal.

POST-MORTEM STUDY

The bodies were taken to Victoria Hospital, London, 24 miles southeast of here, for a post-mortem.

Mr. Lewis first called Dr. A. E. Letts of Ailsa Craig who called in Dr. A. R. Routledge of London, a coroner. Provincial police from three detachments investigated.

Dr. Routledge described the case as one of the most unusual he had experienced.

In Toronto, Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner of the province, said he had ordered an autopsy and also asked that the stomach contents be sent to Toronto for examinations by Professor Joslyn Rogers, provincial pathologist.

WELL WHEN LEFT

Mr. Lewis told police that when he left for the bush of his McGillivray township farm his wife and daughters had been in good health.

When Mr. Lewis discovered the tragedy he ran from his wife's body to his two children and carried out the youngest child onto the front lawn, thinking fresh air might help revive her. He then notified Dr. Letts and visited his invalid mother who lives in another house on the same farm.

The couple had been married for 15 years and the two girls were all the family they had.

Neighbors reported that there had been two recent fires of undetermined origin in the Lewis home, both in an upstairs bedroom. Both were put out by Mr. Lewis with minor damage.

Perth Doctors Fight For Injured Boy's Life

PERTH (CP)—Doctors at the Perth Memorial hospital gave Jimmy Jackson repeated blood transfusions today in an effort to save the life of the nine-year-old MacDonald's Corners lad accidentally shot by an older brother Friday.

The blood was donated by neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson, parents of the youngster.

Police said Jimmy was accidentally shot through the stomach while he and his brother were engaging in target practice with a .22 calibre rifle.

Bush Fire Burns Across 3 Acres

WARKWORTH (ENS)—Three acres of brush and small trees were burned on the farm of Jim Graham about seven miles west of Warkworth in the Oak Heights district Friday afternoon.

The fire was kept from spreading to other woods on both the Graham farm and neighboring farms by farmers who fought the blaze with a plow, shovels and a back fire.

Alvin Crapp used his tractor and plow to lay bare a strip of land around the burning area to provide a patch of earth in the path of the blaze. Men with shovels dug a ditch to make it even harder for the fire to jump across and others started a fire that worked back toward the main fire and blocked it from going any farther.

Before too long it was under control and the threat to the woods was ended. It is believed the fire may have started by Mr. Graham dropping a cigarette butt while harrowing a field beside the brush.

designed to power the world's first atomic submarine.

Mr. Howe said it is hoped to "go into partnership with some wealthy, forward - looking industry," in production of a commercial pile in Canada. He did not know what it would cost, but "it won't be anywhere near the $100,000,000 that has been suggested." So far Canada has spent about $60,000,000 on her atomic program, about $30,000,000 on NRU.

He hoped the commercial or power pile would be built at Chalk River, but if the partner industry wanted it some other place, the government would be willing to "go along."

Italy Dissolves Senate, House

ROME (Reuters)—Premier Alcide de Gasperi today dissolved both Houses of Parliament and fixed national elections for June 7.

Action was taken through a decree signed by President Luigi Einaudi.

The Senate normally would have continued in office for another year. However, the government, intent on winning a clean-cut victory in the election and lessening Communist representation, decided to fill both the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate in the forthcoming election. The action removed the last lingering possibility that Italy would ratify the European Defence Community treaty before the elections.

Premier de Gasperi hopes to return to office with enough strength to push ratification through immediately after the two chambers convene again June 25.

(In New York, a spokesman for the committee said Friday night that the JDC's original statement on the arrest of the nine doctors declared the charges were "without foundation in fact, and this bears it out.")

The original Soviet announcement—issued during Stalin's waning days—said the nine had confessed ending the lives of Andrei A. Zhdanov and Alexander S. Shcherbakov through faulty treatment. Zhdanov, a leading politburo member, died in 1948 at the age of 52. Shcherbakov died in 1945 at 44.

The nine doctors named at that time were:

M. S. Vovsi, V. E. Vinogradov, M. B. Kogan, B. B. Kogan, P. I. Yegorov, Y. G. Etinger and G. I. Mayorov, therapeutists; A. M. Grinshtein, neuropathologist, and A. E. Peldman, an eye, ear nose and throat specialist.

The six listed today for the first time are all medical professors. They are V. K. Vasilenko, V. F. Zelamin, B. S. Preobrazhensky, N. A. Popova (a woman), V. V. Zakusov and N. A. Shereshevsky.

The announcement that Dr. Lydia F. Timashuk had lost her Order of Lenin was carried in Moscow newspapers today. It said the award had been revoked by the praesidium of the Supreme Soviet "as incorrect in connection with the actual circumstances. . . ."

At the time the medal was given, an official announcement said it was "for assistance given the government in the matter of exposing doctor assassins."

The release of the doctors apparently indicates that Beria's new ministry is not going to allow any investigating organs to use means and methods other than those allowed by the Soviet constitution.

(This dispatch, which passed through Russian censorship, did not mention what methods are permitted.)

Plan $15 Million Shopping Centre

HAMILTON (CP)—Construction on a $15,000,000 shopping centre, to be known as the Northshore Parkway, will be started near Campbell's Corners within the next few months if present plans for the project meet with the approval of the Burlington suburban area planning board.

The parkway will be built and financed by a company which is presently being formed by G. M. Wilton, of Toronto.

A spokesman for G. F. Buzza and Company, a local firm which is handling the real estate end of the development, announced today that 52 acres on the proposed site have already been obtained and another 30 or 40 acres are expected to be added soon.

Between 70 and 80 stores will make up the final development. Included will be a department store, and a food store and a novelty store. A theatre, swimming pool, bowling alleys, playgrounds and a sewage disposal plant will also be built.

lowed him into exile.

The match finally became a marriage in 1947. They wed in Rio de Janeiro under a Brazilian law that a person near death may be married under any circumstances. It was thought at the time that she was dying of pernicious anaemia, but she recovered.

Carol, son of Queen Marie and King Ferdinand, first renounced his rights to the Romanian throne in 1925 in favor of a son born to his second wife, Princess Helen of Greece. The boy, Michael, became king in 1927 upon the death of Ferdinand and a council ruled.

RETURNS FROM EXILE

But Carol—known then as the "bad boy of the Balkans"—returned from exile in Italy and France in 1930 and assumed the throne after the way had been prepared by political friends and an army clique.

Hectic times followed in the politically unstable country. There always was gossip about Madame Lupescu, often at the palace.

Finally the pair fled Romania in 1940 to escape the Nazi German occupation. They narrowly escaped assassination when their train was fired upon as it sped toward the Yugoslav border.

In Spain, the Franco government made the exiled monarch a virtual prisoner, but he and his constant companion made a spectacular escape to Portugal. They roamed for the next few years in Latin America, arriving back in Europe in 1947. They finally settled in Portugal.

Carol's first wife was Jeanne (Zizi) Lambrino, a commoner with whom he eloped to Russia while he was serving as a colonel in the Romanian Army during the First World War. The marriage was later annulled.

Michael succeeded to the throne when Carol fled Romania the last time, but the young monarch was kept a virtual prisoner by Romania's iron-fisted pro-Nazi dictator, Gen. Ion Antonescu.

In 1944, Michael and a group of young adherents overthrew Antonescu and ranged Romania with the United Nations in the fight against Hitler.

Michael stayed on the throne until December, 1947, when he abdicated under Communist pressure and left the country. The Romanian Parliament immediately proclaimed the nation a Communist peoples republic.

Suggest Poison Caused Three Mystery Deaths

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Baffled authorities worked today on the theory that strychnine poison may have caused the deaths of a farm wife and her two young daughters in their Ailsa Craig district home Friday.

Dead are: Mrs. Alvin Lewis, 42, daughters Shirley May, 14, and Mildred Jane 11.

Chief coroner Smirle Lawson, ordered the stomach contents of all three sent to Toronto for examination.

Police threw a guard around the farm home about three miles north of Ailsa Craig as they continued their investigation.

Police, at a loss to explain the deaths said there were no marks of violence on the fully dressed bodies and the possibility of asphyxiation by coal gas was ruled out.

There was no sign that the three had eaten their evening meal.

The Lewis home is located about three miles north of Ailsa Craig near the hamlet of Brinsley.

The Dumlupinar was equipped with a snorkel underwater breathing device, but presumably the depth prevented its use.

The Istanbul newspaper Hergun quoted rescuers who reached the scene as saying the survivors in the stern had wirelessed, "we all are safe in the submarine. Rescue us. We have air to last only a few hours."

Rescue teams and equipment were rushed from Golcuk, a naval base, and were expected to reach the scene in a few hours. U. S. naval informants at Istanbul said some U.S. submarines were only about 100 miles away and would be rushed to the scene.

FLY TO SCENE

Defence Minister Seyfi Kurtbek and Admiral Sadik Altincan, Turkish Navy commander, flew to the scene, along with other top military officials.

The Dumlupinar was reported accompanied by her sister submarine, the Inonu, and was travelling on the surface en route from Canakkale to Istanbul at the time of the collision.

The Haboland, out of Goteborg, sailed from Istanbul Friday with a straits pilot aboard.

The submarine went down immediately. The captain of the Naboland gave the first report of the accident, saying he had put out small boats but found nothing. His first impression was that he had collided with a small fishing boat.

Istanbul authorities said the Naboland was being detained for a routine investigation.

Sub Disasters

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The death of 99 seamen aboard the British submarine Thetis, which sank in Liverpool bay in June 1, 1939, was the worst underwater disaster recorded in peacetime.

Major submarine disasters since the end of the Second World War:

Dec. 7, 1946—French submarine No. 2326, listed as missing with 23 men aboard after being days overdue at Toulon.

Aug. 26, 1949—American Cochine exploded and burned in Arctic waters; seven dead, 84 rescued.

Jan. 12, 1950—British Truculent sunk in Thames estuary after collision with Swedish tanker Divina, 64 dead.

April 16, 1951—British Affray failed to come up after submerging 30 miles southwest of Isle of Wight, 76 dead.

Sept. 24, 1952—French Sybylle disappeared during manoeuvres in the Mediterranean off Riveria, 48 aboard.

Ice Pack Grips East Coast Of Newfoundland

By JACK A. WHITE
Canadian Press Correspondent

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Newfoundland's eastern seaboard remained in an icy grip for the 16th day today and harbor officials here estimated loss at about $150,000.

The ice jam, worst since 1938, stretches in a rough semi-circle from Baccalieu Island to Cape Pine, about 120 air miles to the south. St. John's is a bit north of the centre.

Jam-packed to a width of seven or eight miles, the ice has marooned ships and islands and, apparently claimed at least one life.

Harbor pilots says it will take a gale-sized wind to move the ice away from the coast.

Most isolated spot as a result of the ice jam is Bell Island, bustling iron ore centre in Conception Bay, 10 miles northwest of here.

With one ferry out with a broken rudder and the other stuck in St. John's harbor, those on the island can't get off and supplies can't be taken in.

Hundreds of miners who normally would go to mainland homes for Easter will spend the holiday on the island, many without their full festive meals because supplies aren't coming in.

St. John's bustling harbor is a silent sheet of white. Ships are unable to enter or leave. A United States supply vessel left three days ago in an attempt to buck through but can still be sighted from the waterfront, marooned along with several others caught while trying to come in.

One marooned craft, the trawler Blue Haze, ran short of supplies and the RCAF was called in to drop food parcels last Saturday.

Believed dead as a result of the ice pack is Will Dunn, unreported for a week since he drifted out on Logy bay floes while hunting seals.

Earlier, a United States helicopter rescued a man from a craggy and sea-lashed rock where he had clambered for safety from rising tides.

NEAR COMPLETION

Plans for processing disabled prisoners neared completion with the erection of a complete tent town called "Freedom Village" less than half a mile from here.

It houses a mobile army surgical hospital and a processing centre through which will funnel the prisoners returned by the Reds.

Plans call for giving prisoners initial medical care, putting them through a decontamination process and checking their records here. Then they would be evacuated to the rear and home.

Already on hand are 12 doctors, 12 nurses and scores of medical corpsmen.

A patch of land in the centre of the hospital site has been marked off as a landing spot for evacuation helicopters.

A few hundred yards down the highway, a 120-bed field hospital has been thrown up by South Korean and U. S. Army engineers. It will be used to process South Korean soldiers returned by the Reds.

The officers who will accompany Admiral Daniel to Panmunjom are Army Col. Willard B. Carlock, air force Lt.-Col. H. M. Odren, navy Cmdr. James Shew and South Korean Col. Lee Soo Yung.

The Communists have not announced the makeup of their liaison group.

If the liaison officers agree on plans for exchanging prisoners, Gen. Clark has said the UN command then would be willing to resume full-scale truce negotiations.

When the talks broke off last Oct. 8 only the issue of prisoner exchange remained unsettled.

Thieves Enter Tower Of London

LONDON (AP)—Thieves early Friday broke into the burglar-proof Tower of London, where the crown jewels are stored, but left empty-handed.

Police gave this story:

About 4:30 a.m. a policeman saw two men carrying packages towards a car parked near the tower. When he approached, the men threw the packages away and ran off. In the car, the constable found 4,000 cigarettes.

The tower was searched. It was found that the thieves had broken into the canteen of the Royal Fusiliers and made off with the cigarettes after failing to crack the canteen safe.

Police speculated that the thieves got into the tower by crossing over the protecting moat—which is dry—and climbing the tower wall.

The tower, where Queen Elizabeth I imprisoned Sir Walter Raleigh and the Earl of Essex, is among the best-guarded places in London. It has an elaborate burglar alarm system, with police and warders on constant duty.

Recently some of the crown jewels were taken from the tower for alteration before the Coronation.

Motorbike, Car Hit, Man Hurt

Fred White, 40, of 755 Jane St., suffered head and facial cuts today when his motorcycle collided with a car on George St. south. He was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital by Nesbitt ambulance and after treatment was kept there under observation.

White was going south on George St. and was attempting to pass a parked city garbage truck when he collided with a car driven by Leo C. Brainiff, 695 Stewart St.

The motorcycle was only slightly damaged while the Braniff car's left front fender was bent in and the headlight smashed.

Sgt. Harold Mesley and Const. Harold Andrew investigated.

Feud-Jilted Girl Swallows Poison

BAYEAUX, France (Reuters)—A farmer's daughter, rejected by her fiance on her wedding eve because of an old Norman family feud, killed herself with a vial of poison as she stood weeping beneath his window, police revealed today.

The "Juliet" of this tragedy, Marie-Ernestine Lemonnier, 23, waited for an hour until his shadow appeared at the window.

Then, crying "Goodbye Georges. I am going to die," she broke the vial and swallowed its contents. Georges raced down, clasped her in his arms and kissed her as she died.

Her last words: "It is hard to die, Georges."

When the young couple became engaged the feud seemed to have been forgotten.

But this week when Marie-Ernestine invited Georges to visit her parents the old bitterness revived and Georges Leboulanger said: "My parents do not want me to marry you now."

The girl left a farewell note and a photograph on the kitchen table and walked five miles to the Leboulanger farm to say her last goodbye.

3D, Wide Screen Processes Cause Hollywood Daze

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The movie industry today resembles the legendary horseman who leaped on his steed and rode off in all directions.

Much of the confusion is caused by understandable disorder in an industry transition—if a transision is taking place. But a great deal of it is the result of selfish thinking by the studios.

Even close observers of the Hollywood scene are baffled by the flood of announcements, claims and counter-claims on new-dimensional projects. The public must be in a state of complete mystification.

Cinerama . . .Cinemascope . . . natural vision . . . metrovision. . . paravision . . . warnerphonic sound . . . polarization . . . stereophic. . .

These words have entered film language in recent months, and more are added each week.

Studios are not agreed on which system to use. 20th-Century-Fox has thrown its entire future into its own wide-screen process, cinemascope. MGM is using it also. Warners and RKO base their hopes on 3D gimmicks that require glasses. Columbia is only toying with 3D.

Paramount and Universal-International are experimenting both 3D and wide-screen. In addition, MG and Paramount are working on thick lenses which can project present films on wide screens.

All of which is natural, in a sense, except that it ignores the theatre operators. This is a grave situation, because the theatre men are the crux of the whole situation. They are the ones who must spend thousands of dollars to convert their houses to use new systems. They can't act until they find out where the producers are going.

This was apparent among the many exhibitors who in recent weeks have come here to over developments. Texas showman R. J. O'Donnell put it in a nutshell when he said the great need is for an all-purpose screen.

Chaos can continue for months unless Hollywood reaches some agreement. But which system? Each has some advantages.

Meanwhile, production can slow to a standstill, thousands of studio workers will be out of work and theatre business will be spotty because of the inability of exhibitors to screen all types of the new medium.

THE ONLY VIEW Peterborough people have of the new federal building on Charlotte St. is through rectangular peep holes through the fence surrounding the area. There they could see the huge excavation, then the cement footings and now the cement foundation walls taking form. But the view is limited through the peep holes. The photographer took the camera high above the fence to give an overall view of the construction work. Workmen are pushing cement-laden carts along the ramp from the mixer to the walls for the west side.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

Jolliffe Outlines Shift In CCF Policy From Welfare Problems To World Hunger

TORONTO (CP)—A shift in CCF policy away from welfare problems was outlined Friday by E.B. Jolliffe, Ontario party leader.

Party members must reach a fuller understanding of the whole Canadian economy and turn their attention to the hungry throughout the world, he told the 19th annual provincial convention.

Mr. Jolliffe said that when the CCF cames into existence Canada was "one of the most backward nations of the west," but now it has a relatively high standard of living while two-thirds of the world goes hungry.

No one can be proud of the boom conditions which have brought about the change in emphasis, he said. "We have been living in a capitalist boom, which we predicted, and we predicted it would be followed by a capitalist bust."

Mr. Jolliffe said that the last few years have not been favorable to the CCF party, but "it is a mark of maturity in a political party when it can withstand adversity."

The CCF had made real progress in winning labor support and more and more farmers are feeling their way toward socialism. They may not recognize it as such, he said, because the world has been debased by capitalists on the one hand and Communists on the other.

Ontario's Progressive Conservative government was attacked in a resolution introduced by Miss True Davidson of Toronto.

It asked for Education Minister Dunlop's removal because of his "reactionary and near-sighted policy" and because he is "most destructive" of everything for which educationists have been working for years.

The resolution charged that the government has taken steps to lower the qualifications of teachers, had failed to provide equal opportunity for education, discouraged adult education and criticized school boards, teachers and administrators.

Dr. Dunlop said later that the criticisms are purely negative The department had raised teaching standards and had helped to equalize educational opportunity by giving large grants to rural school areas.

There is no basis for the charge that the department criticizes school boards, he added.

Another resolution said the party has given the lead in Canada to the promotion of a national health insurance plan, but warned that this should not be confused with the long-term objective.

"Health insurance is a short-term expedient and the party's final aim is a scheme of socialized medicine comparable to that now in operation in Britain," the conference said.

Delegates asked the provincial government to restore the second mortgage loans which home builders could once obtain. One council member, Andrew Brewin, said families have to go to "loan sharks" and accept 40-to-50-percent discount on second mortgages.

The second mortgage loans in Ontario offered a maximum of $1,250 at three-percent interest payable over 30 years. The plan ended when the federal government allowed an extra one-sixth mortgage on National Housing Act loans, which have also been stopped.

A resolution asked for a more generous and enlightened policy on mortgage loans. Sydney Midanik warned that such a policy can be dangerous.

"If you are going to give speculators first and second mortgages," he said, "you are going to raise the price of real estate. It is very difficult to put ceilings on housing."

Morden Lazarus, CCF provincial secretary, reported that contributions from the United Steelworkers of America (CCL—CIO) have enabled the CCF to double its staff of full-time salaried organizers in the province to four. Membership in the Ontario CCF had increased about 300 in the last year to more than 7,300.

Toronto Bill Biggest Act To Pass Current Ont. House

TORONTO (CP)—The 24th Ontario legislature was prorogued Thursday after a seven-week session which saw the passing of far-reaching municipal affairs legislation, the setting up of three select committees and revision of a number of acts.

Most spectacular piece of legislation was the greater Toronto Federation Act, which effective April 15, fuses Toronto and its 12 suburbs into a single municipality. The city's metropolitan council will tackle administrative problems involving almost 1,250,000 people living in a 240-square-mile area.

The act is an attempt to solve social service and taxation problems which have been discussed for decades.

Other municipal affairs legislation provides for provincial grants ranging from $1.50 per capita to villages and townships of 2,000 population or under to $4 per capita to Toronto; transfer of rent controls in the 219 Ontario municipalities in which they are still in force from provincial to local hands March 2, 1954.

Thursday's prorogation address, read by Lieutenant-Governor Louis Breithaupt, said the Unconditional Grants Act will strengthen municipal autonomy by permitting local bodies to reduce taxes.

Government officials say they will give the 219 municipalities—all of Ontario's cities and most of its large towns—all possible co-operation in entering the rent controls field.

Another piece of legislation, the Edible Oil Products Act, bans the sale of any edible oils product—except margarine — which resembles a dairy product. It also bans the use of any oil, except that of milk, in the manufacture of sherbet, chocolate milk and similar dairy products.

The legislature also brought the Pharmacy Act, the Liquor Licence Act and the Corporations Act up to date.

The revised Pharmacy Act tightens up one set of restrictions on the sale of medicines and, by relaxing another set, makes legal a practice which has been going on for years. Under the revised act, some types of barbiturates, formerly freely available at drug stores, will be sold in future only under doctors' prescriptions.

The new Liquor Licence Act permits holders of public house licences to sell meals without having their premises reclassified as taverns. They can sell meals with wine and beer—but only in private dining-rooms separated from their beverage rooms.

The new Corporations Act, the first revision of the measure since 1912, alters regulations governing the issuance of corporation stock and the appointment of corporation directors.

Other highlights of the session:

Premier Frost said he has no political ambitions in the federal field. He told the legislature that when his provincial government service is ended, he will return to his home town of Lindsay.

In one of the hottest clashes in recent years. Premier Frost tangled with Opposition Leader Oliver in a heated exchange which developed from a discussion of Ontario hydro commission policy.

George Challies, minister without portfolio and vice-chairman of the hydro commission, announced that the commission will call a conference of municipalities to be affected by the St. Lawrence seaway project "at the earliest opportunity."

The legislature voted to set up select committees to inquire into the possibility of rehabilitation of prisoners in Ontario reform institutions, the present status of Indians in the province and the working of the Cemeteries Act.

The reform institutions committee was set up two weeks ago but the Indians and cemeteries committees were the result of last-minute resolutions Thursday.

Members of the Indians committee are: Welfare Minister Goodfellow (chairman — Northumberland); B. L. Cathcart (PC—Lambton West); W. J. Grummett (CCF house leader — Cochrane South); J. A. Fullerton (PC—Algoma-Manitoulin); George Johnston (PC—Simcoe centre); John Johnstone (PC—Bruce); Harold Nixon (Lib.—Brant); W. G. Noden (PC—Rainy River); J. A. Pringle (PC—Addington); Roscoe Robson (PC—Hastings East); Albert Wren (Lib.-Lab.—Kenora).

Cemeteries committee: J. N. Allan (chairman, PC—Haldimand-Norfolk); H.M. Allen (PC—Middlesex South); George Gordon (Lib.—Brantford); S. L. Hall (PC—Halton); J. W. Hanna (PC—Huron-Bruce); C. H. Lyons (PC—Sault Ste. Marie); A. J. Reaume (Lib.—Essex North); John Root (PC—Wellington North); W. E. Sandercock (PC—Hastings East); T. D. Thomas (CCF—Ontario); Morris Whitney (PC—Prince Edward-Lennox).

UN LEADER—Dag Hammerskjoeld, a Swedish economist, has been named by the world's Big Five powers to succeed Trygve Lie as Secretary-General of the United Nations. Confirmation of the new official is expected without opposition. Observers close to the UN report that Hammerskjoeld's name was probably introduced to a closed session by France.

Emergency Treatment Set Up For Coronation

LONDON (CP)—Elaborate arrangements have been made to provide emergency treatment for any casualties that may occur among the more than 7,000 guests attending the Coronation in Westminster Abbey next June.

A panel of 25 prominent practitioners, including many specialists from London's famed Harley street, has already been named for the first-aid assignment. The doctors were chosen by a committee headed by Sir Horace Evans, the Queen's physician.

The doctors will be stationed at strategic points in the abbey, with a troupe of assistants ready with first-aid kits.

London Sets Taxes At 51 Mills, Cut 5

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—London city council Thursday night struck a tax rate of 51 mills.

Treasury officials said the amount of tax paid by most property owners this year will be about the same as last year.

The rate of 51 mills is a reduction of five from the 1952 rate of 56 mills. The amount of tax will remain approximately the same, however, because of the 10-percent general increase in building assessment and the assessment of new buildings erected during 1952.

Easter and Spring

In the end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

And behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow.

And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy, and did run to bring his disciples word.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. MARK

* * *

For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone;

The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land;

The fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away.

THE SONG OF SOLOMON

Blue Water and Quiet Towns

Ontario statisticians looking over the Province call the five counties of Huron, Bruce, Grey Dufferin and Simcoe the "Blue Water Region". The term is descriptive as well as handy. They border most of the eastern shore of Lake Huron and the southern shore of Georgian Bay.

The first white man to visit the area was Champlain, and quite a few tourists have gone to it since. However, the number of people who actually live there is not grand in comparison with some other parts of the Province. The largest place is Owen Sound (16,500), and there are fourteen other towns and villages in all five counties. The increase in population since 1941 is below the provincial average, only eleven percent, and much less than the intercensal increase in our own district. Barrie is the fastest growing of the Blue Water towns, chiefly because of its accessibility to Toronto.

Agriculture is the most important industry; 32.8 percent. of the region's labour force is occupied in farming and the net farm income per head is the second highest in Ontario (the total net farm income in 1949 was seventy million dollars). The county of Huron has the largest area of improved farm land in the Province—615,000 acres. This is 74.2 percent. of the total land in the county. The county of Bruce has 537,000 acres of improved land. Grey is hilly, the land less cultivated. This is the largest and highest county in the entire Province. Between Grey and Simcoe counties pass the Blue Mountains, a continuation of the Niagara escarpment.

What do they grow in these farming counties? Almost everything that the climate and skill of the farmers will allow, from apples in the Georgian Bay fruit belt to goats and cabbage; cabbages especially in Simcoe county. The valley of the Holland River contains an area of 20,000 acres of marshland of which 7,000 acres have been used for vegetable produce with the aid of dykes and a drainage canal. Natives of Holland settled and developed the marsh in 1935, removing the peat and draining the rich black loam. The products of the marsh include onions, lettuce, carrots, potatoes, celery and cabbage, but no fruit whatever is grown. The chief market for the produce is Toronto, only forty miles to the south by truck, although a small proportion is sent in refrigerated box cars to other cities in Canada and in the United States. The value of vegetables produced in Simcoe county was $770,000 in 1951.

Manufacturing, commercial fishing and mining are of secondary importance in the area. Pleasant places like Collingwood, Goderich and Midland have some factories, but outsiders and tourists like to think of them as pleasure points and Great Lakes ports. Orillia has 2,190 employees engaged in industries, two railways, Lake Couchiching and a statue to its first white visitor.

Canned Editorials

We have received a proposal which interests us very much, because it would save us a great deal of work and this newspaper a considerable sum of money; it is an offer from an American newspaper service to provide us with enough editorials every day to fill these columns. They provide examples of their work, and certainly they have much to recommend them.

There would be certain advantages for us in accepting their proposal. Their editorials are so innocuous that no one could possibly be offended by them, and we would be free of any wrangles which might result from the expression of more direct and forthright opinions. An editorial page conducted on such principles would be a daily lullaby. And of course a high degree of uniformity would be achieved if a majority of Canadian newspapers adopted such a service. All across the country the same easily digested pabulum would be offered to the reading public.

However, we have a prejudice in favour of individualism in newspaper editorials; we think that the editorials of each newspaper ought to be written for its special public. We think that as many editorials as possible ought to deal with local subjects, or with broader topics as seen from a local point of view. If a newspaper has no opinions, it is only half a newspaper. In their earliest form newspapers consisted entirely of opinion; all matters of news were dealt with from a strongly partisan standpoint. Readers who are fond of the great Dr. Samuel Johnson will recall that he even wrote his parliamentary reports so that "the Whig dogs might not have the best of it". Times have changed, and we now work on the principle that news should be as objective as possible, and that opinion should be confined to the page which is especially devoted to it.

On that page, however, a newspaper speaks for itself, and by so doing it performs a service which is of value to the community it serves. And so we have decided not to take up the offer of the vendors of canned opinion, just yet.

Stock Market Barometer Of Peace

When the peaceful overtures from China and Russia reached the stock markets of New York, Montreal and Toronto, prices sagged. They recovered a little two days after the first shock, as Washington took a cool, careful look behind the offers. But stock market prices again sagged. Other conciliatory sounds were coming from the Kremlin, and it began to look as if an armistice in Korea were probable and some settlement in Europe possible. Threats of peace always sent the stock market tumbling. If the threat becomes a probability, the market becomes noticeably depressed.

We do not believe that business men and those who buy and sell stocks are infallible and the best assessors of international political situations. Because the New York, Toronto and Montreal stock markets are quivering does not mean that an armistice in Korea is all but signed, or that the armed camp of Europe will be stacking its rifles and folding its tents. However, if some agreements are reached between West and East and these look like bases for permanent settlement and a general relaxation of belligerent watchfulness, the stock market will also change its emphasis, particularly the prices of industrial stocks of companies engaged in defence production.

Mont Blanc and Montreal

A seven-mile vehicular tunnel under Mont Blanc, to run between Italy and France, is already under construction and should be finished within three years. It will be about four times as long as the world's present longest railway tunnel, the Liverpool-Birkenhead tunnel under the Mersey River, and it will carry four lanes of traffic. This massive project shows that there is still hope for a subway in Montreal.

Montreal suffers from the worst traffic congestion in Canada. For years a subway system has been talked about, but nothing done. The reason is that Montreal is not built on earth, but on rock. Drilling a subway through the downtown part of the island would be extremely costly. But if a subway can be blasted under Mont Blanc without toppling the mountain, can one not be put under Montreal without bringing down the Sun Life building and shattering the cracked finances of that city?

NOTES AND COMMENT

The Minister of Agriculture says that farmers are better off now than ever before, and that they know it. This, however, is not the same thing as persuading them to admit it.

A statistician says that there are nearly 150 hidden taxes on a coffin. This knowledge, which was mercifully kept from us until now, adds a new terror to death.

A group of psychologists who have been studying fatigue says that "a tired, all-gone feeling may come from thinking too much." But people who attribute it to this cause may be accused of boasting.

The Journal of Samuel Marchbanks

SUNDAY: Re-hung the pictures in my bedroom today. Although artists do not, upon the whole, think much of my taste in pictures I am fond of those I have, and like to move them about and see them in different positions. I like pictures for all the wrong reasons — because they are of somebody I admire, or because they remind me of something I like. Also, I am short-sighted, and admire a picture most when it is about six inches from the end of my nose. I have a prejudice in favour of cheerful pictures, and this makes me an admirer of Grandma Moses, though the primitive in other forms of art gives me a pain. I suppose I am a savage in the realm of vision, but I do not care; if my taste were perfect there, as elsewhere, I would be altogether too infallible and would make lesser people unhappy. As it is, people can patronize me about pictures, and if this gives them pleasure I really do not mind.

❖ ❖ ❖

MONDAY: Tomorrow I am to appear on television, as one of what is called a "panel," to argue and hold forth on matters related to criticism. Today I was informed that in order to do this I must pay five dollars to the radio actors' union, for by appearing on television I become, in their eyes, an entertainer, and something of a scab, doing a radio actor out of work. As I am already a member of British Actors' Equity, and therefore a full-fledged union-guaranteed professional entertainer, this annoys me. And as I also feel that I am being engaged to express opinions of my own, which do not lie ready upon the tongue of most radio actors, I wonder why I should have to pay for doing something which they cannot do? But the oddities of union rules are beyond all reason, so I paid up. Of course I am really a professional writer, and I begin to think that it might be a good plan if my union, the Canadian Authors' Association, demanded that every non-professional writer pay five dollars whenever they invaded our territory. But as the possession of a union card can never be a guarantee of talent this would merely add to the present foolishness.

* * *

TUESDAY: Made my debut in television, and enjoyed it. It is a kind of elaborate puss-in-the-corner, played with three cameras. With four other people (all of whom I liked and greatly enjoyed meeting) I sat at a table and chewed many a delicious rag, pretending to be unconscious that anyone could see or hear us; but it was impossible not to notice that three great rubber-wheeled monsters, with cameras for heads, prowled about in the shadows, peering intently at us; from time to time they came very close, like shy elephants hoping for a peanut; then, quite suddenly, they would retreat, as though they had been frightened. The game for those of us who were talking was not to look directly at the monsters, which would have made them nervous. I was reminded of the technique of my grandmother, who could induce squirrels to take nuts from her hand by pretending that she was looking at something in the other direction; I tried it, and the cameras came quite near. It was all I could do to refrain from facing them suddenly and sticking out my tongue, but I know that this would frighten them away for good. For television one must be less an actor than a wild-life expert.

WEDNESDAY: Widespread regret at the death of Queen Mary, in which I join with a special pang, for she was the only member of the Royal House upon whom I may claim to have impressed myself, even in the slighest degree. When I was a humble actor I played the part of Snout the Tinker in a performance of A Midsummer Night's Dream in which a considerable number of much less humble actors had the better parts. Queen Mary attended a matinee, bringing with her the present Queen and the Princess Margaret, who were children at the time and in the fashion of children at Shakespearean plays wriggled, whispered and in other ways sought to pass the time. But Queen Mary paid strict attention to the stage, and laughed a good deal, though whether I made her laugh I am unable to say. Perhaps so, for when she was talking to some of the important actors in the interval she revealed that once, when she was seventeen, she had played Snout herself, in an amateur production of the play. Unquestionably she made some mental comparison between her interpretation of this role and my own, and as she did not comment upon it, it was probably an unfavourable one.

THURSDAY: Was backstage in a bank, today — that is to say, I penetrated to that golden world behind the counter, where all the money is. My money is in that bank, and I was disturbed by the carelessness with which this great trust is regarded. The cashier was in a cage, but the door of the cage was ajar, and as much as eight or ten dollars lay on a shelf, wrapped in little brown parcels. "Haven't you a gun?" I asked, and the cashier laughed. "I had one, but it was so heavy I couldn't pull the trigger," said she. Frankly, this shocked me. I had thought that cashiers had target-practice every day, and could shoot the pips out of a ten of spades at forty yards. All she has is an electric button which, when touched, opens a trapdoor under the robbers and drops them into a cauldron of boiling oil in the cellar. Unless it happens to stick, of course.

FRIDAY: To a skating carnival tonight, and enjoyed it greatly. I think on such occasions, when a great number of Canadian young people are gathered in one place, that I see the beginning of a Canadian Type — the kind of person who will be recognizable as a Canadian in two or three centuries. The typical Canadian, according to my observations, will be tall, heavily built, fair but not blonde, and somewhat like the Finns or Swedes in appearance. This is satisfactory, to me at any rate. Children seem to be, on the whole, taller and heavier than their parents, and the sharp faces, big noses and ruddy complexions which so many Canadian parents possess — brought by themselves or their forebears from Europe — become in the children round faces, small noses and cheeks in which colour, if there is any, is slight. Our national complexion is a healthy pallor . . . Years ago, at ice carnivals, there used to be men who sold hot baked potatoes, crisp in the skin, well dabbed with butter and salt and pepper, and utterly delicious. Yearned for a hot potato tonight; all that was going was ice cream and peanuts, neither of which could have warmed me.

SATURDAY: My ignorance often appals me. It appears that since 1934 there has been a science called Sociometry, of which I have not heard until today. Sociometry is the study of how you get along with people. It decides your Sociometric Status, which is "the extent to which you are accepted by the group." (What group? Oh, any group of mutts among whom you may find yourself at the time you have your status taken) and also your Sociometric Relationships, meaning whom-you-like and who-likes-you. Usually Sociometry is practised on children, as adults do not readily put up with such nonsense. For myself, I could cheerfuly endure the news that my Sociometric Status was a low one, for I do not consider popularity to be important, and the base trade at which I earn my bread makes popularity a hopeless goal for me, anyway. As for my Sociometric Relationships, I generally like people who like me, and do the rest all the harm I can without getting caught. Life is a matter of running warfare to a greater degree than the practitioners of Sociometrics care to admit, and that is what gives it salt.

MEMORIAL CENTRE SITE FIRST

Sir: I trust that you will consider this in order that the citizens of Peterborough may be better informed concerning the long period of inactivity in connection with the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre.

First I would like to say that we who are connected with the Centre Committee are just as much concerned at the long delay as other citizens and have done all in our power over the past years to find a satisfactory solution so that building operations could be started.

The two reasons why this matter has not been brought to a successful conclusion is, first, a suitable building site, and secondly, sufficient finances to complete the project.

The entire program has been and will continue to be at a complete standstill until a suitable site is secured. In this regard I wish to state that it has been the understanding from the beginning of the campaign for funds that the City Council would secure a site suitable to both the Council and the general Committee. Many joint meetings between the Council and the Committee have been held in an endeavour to resolve this matter but there were difficulties encountered by the Council which have not yet been successfully overcome.

I do not wish to elaborate on this further at this time except to say that I do believe the City Council are endeavouring to bring this matter to a successful conclusion.

I again would like to reiterate that neither the general Committee or the Building Committee can make any further progress until a suitable site is made available to them, and while our entire Committee can most readily understand why the citizens in general are most dissatisfied with the lack of progress in building the Community Centre, they should realize that the Centre Committee cannot move alone as the City is also a party to the trust agreement set up to administer the affairs of the Memorial Centre funds and the obligation of making a suitable site available rests entirely with the City Council.

The matter of sufficient finance is another major problem to be solved, but no further planning or progress can be made in this direction until it can be determined where the building is to be located and definite progress can be assured.

I am most sympathetic toward the feeling of impatience of the citizens in general as evidenced by the numerous letters which have been sent to me personally as well as those which have been sent to the press. They actually only mirror my own feelings in the matter. However, I trust that the public will now realize that the Memorial Committee cannot make any further progress until the City Council do their part in making a site available, and I respectfully suggest that any further inquiries or resolutions pertaining to this matter be directed to the City Council.

J. A. JEBSON
Chairman, Peterborough Memorial Community Centre.

39 Earlier Coronations: Gold Sandals, French Money Queen With Gout; Feasts

By JOHN GALE

Queen Elizabeth II is the sixth Sovereign Queen of England and the fortieth Sovereign in succession from William the Conqueror of Normandy, who, in 1066, was the last man to invade England with success. Throughout history, Christian Kings, no matter how they gained the throne, have always found it wise to have their assumption of power sanctified by the Church: the ceremony of crowning Kings has always been considered an act of a sacramental character.

The first recorded coronation in England was that of Egferth, King of Mercia, in 785. But there is some disagreement as to who was the first King of All-England; for in the days of the Heptarchy there were of course seven kings in the land. The choice lies between Egbert of Wessex, Alfred the Great (who burnt the cakes) and Edward, Alfred's eldest surviving son. Perhaps Alfred the Great, who died in 900, has the strongest claim: the whole kingdom was united under his rule, and he thus became King of England — although, in fact, he was not crowned as such. King Edward was crowned King of England in 901, either at Kingston-on-Thames, in Surrey, or at "Saynt Poules, at London."

GALLANT PRINCE

After Edward came Athelstan, a gallant Prince. He was crowned on the historic stone at Kingston in 925. A thin spare man, his yellow hair beautifully inwoven with threads of gold, and wearing a purple robe with his sword hanging from a jewelled belt, Athelstan took up his position "upon a stage erected high" that he might be "seen the better of the multitude." He was then lifted upon a shield and carried into the church, where the Primate, Aldhelm, was awaiting him. So great was the excitement on this occasion that the King barely avoided being tossed into the air by his Saxon warriors.

William the Conqueror was crowned in the Romanesque Abbey Church of Westminster, then "still fresh and white from the masons' hands." On that day were laid the foundations of the British Empire that was to be; the great Abbey became then the central sanctuary of the British race.

According to one report, however, the ceremony was hardly uneventful:

"After William had taken the coronation oath, to protect the church, prohibit oppression, and execute judgment in mercy, Aldred put the question, 'Will ye have this prince to be your king?' The people answered, with loud shouts and the noise gave so much alarm to the Norman garrison in the city, that the soldiers, believing the English to have revolted, without waiting to make any investigation, immediately set the next houses on fire, which spreading and giving a general alarm, most of the congregation rushed out of the church, the English hastening to stop the fire, and the Normans to plunder."

KING IN HIS SHIRT

Richard the Lion Heart, who was crowned at Westminster in 1189, walked in his coronation procession on a cloth of the Tyrian dye, under a gorgeous canopy supported by four lances carried by four nobles. Having taken the oath, the King, standing in his shirt, opened at the shoulder, was anointed on the head, breast, and arms. Then he put on priest-like garments and took the Sword of the Kingdom from the Archbishop, as a token that he would subdue the enemies of the Church. He put on the golden sandals and the royal mantle, and handed to the Archbishop the Crown of England to show that he held it only from God: whereupon the Archbishop placed the Crown upon the King's head. It was a magnificent occasion.

The coronation of Richard II, son of the Black Prince, in 1377, has been the pattern for coronations ever since. Three features were particularly notable: Richard II started the custom, which continued until James II abandoned it, of having a procession from the Tower of London to the Abbey: he inaugurated the Knights of the Bath, a body of knights created specially for the occasion, at whose induction ceremonial bathing held an important place; the third innovation was the appearance of the King's Champion, who continued to throw down his gauntlet at coronation banquets until he appeared for the last time at the banquet of George IV. (The office of King or Queen's Champion does, however, still exist.)

SPLENDID CAVALCADE

The cavalcade at Richard II's coronation was a splendid one, and London was decorated in much the same spirit that it will be for the crowning of the present Queen on June 2. The plague restricted the coronation of James I and Charles I (later executed); but the procession was restored in all its splendour at the restoration of Charles II, only to be abandoned once again later on. A return to the custom of the feast was made only recently at the coronation of King George VI, an event which was marked by a procession surpassing anything that had gone before: his route to and from the Abbey was the longest ever; never before had there been such an opportunity for the assembly of loyal subjects to greet their sovereign on the day of his crowning.

In the weeks before her coronation on January 15, 1559, Queen Elizabeth I (whose reign was notable for the great Elizabethans, including Shakespeare, Drake and Raleigh) prepared the way for her ultimate break with the Church of Rome.

"OIL WAS GREASE"

The actual crowning ceremony was mainly traditional in form. But the Bishop officiating did at last consent to read the Gospel and Epistle in English as well as Latin—supposedly on Elizabeth's orders during the service. The Queen seemed pleased enough with the ceremony, although the anointing did not impress her: she remarked "that the oil was grease and smelled ill."
